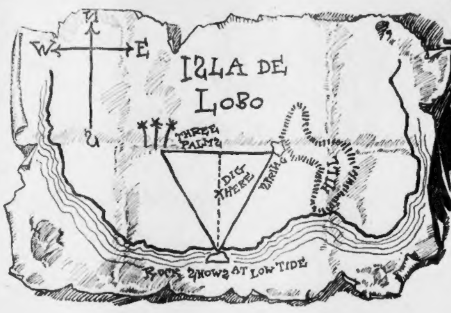
Old Parchment Chart Left by the Wicked Pirate Latrobe Reveals the Hiding Place of His Chests of Gold Now Sunk Deep in the Quicksands.

$10,000,000 OF PIRATE TREASURE FOUND ON THE BEACH



The old chart made by the notorious pirate Latrobe, on the day before his execution at Kingston, Jamaica, in 1808, which enabled one expedition to find the rich contents of his buried treasure chests scattered in a quicksand pocket — from which a better equipped expedition is now preparing to recover them.

When you are told that buried pirate treasure valued at nearly $10,000,000 has been located, and that a ship is now being fitted out at Liverpool for a voyage to the Caribbean Sea to recover this immense fortune in gold and jewels, which has lain safely hidden for nearly a hundred years, probably you will smile—remembering the two centuries of fruitless efforts to find the wealth supposed to have been buried by Captain Kidd and others of his ilk.

Probably you will remember, also, the three generations of efforts to find the celebrated Cocos Island treasure buried by Pirate Thompson, and how they failed in spite of the elaborate chart and directions handed down from one claimant to another—and your smile will broaden.

If you have made a study of this sort of literature, you know that there exists not one authentic account of any one of the legendary buried treasures of pirates ever being actually recovered, and yet—well, read what here follows about the final definite location of the Spanish gold which the notorious pirate, Latrobe, buried in the sandy beach of a small Caribbean island in the year 1808.

The story is told by Captain Small, of the yacht Catherine, the vessel especially equipped to rescue Pirate Latrobe's gold pieces-of-eight from their island hiding place and restore them to the world's currency circulation.

Owing to the watchfulness of the navies of the great nations, piracy was well along in its decadence when those three contemporaries, Latrobe, Bonito and Thompson preyed upon the coast cities of the West Indies, the Isthmus of Panama, and the West Coast of South America.

Thompson and Bonito managed to show their heels to the pursuing war vessels, after concealing treasure of great value on islands in the West Indies in about the year 1820, and sailed around Cape Horn and up to the West Coast, which they continued to harry until about 1829, when they were at last caught and Bonito was properly hanged, Thompson escaping.

Like the Cocos Island Treasure.

This bold pirate spent the rest of his life trying to recover booty valued at $11,000,000, which he had buried on Cocos Island, which lies 500 miles off Panama in the Pacific. Dying, he bequeathed his hoard, with a chart showing its location, to one of his old companions. The weather-beaten chart descended to two others—but always mutinies, murder and other misfortunes rendered expeditions in search of the treasure fruitless.

When, finally, in 1896, Captain Sharapnel, of the English navy, landed on Cocos Island with an orderly crew, the old chart proved valueless because of the havoc time and the elements had played with the necessary landmarks.

It seems that Pirate Latrobe's treasure was more fortunately buried, though nearly thirty years earlier.

Captain Small's expedition to recover it will be the second effort ever made, a former one finding the treasure but not being equipped in such a way as to be able to wrest it from the grip of its peculiar hiding place.

The sole possessor of the great secret for more than sixty years, who had received it direct from Latrobe himself, was an ignorant seafaring man who had never been able to command the means to go in search of the wealth of which the rough chart given to him by Latrobe was the key.

Twenty-eight years ago this old sailor was dying on a ship sailing from Hawaii to San Francisco. In his last hours he was attended by a doctor named Davidson, who was among the passengers.

Almost with his last breath the dying sailor told Dr. Davidson the remarkable story of his life, and placed in his hands the grimy bit of parchment containing Latrobe's chart and directions for finding his treasure—gold coin and vessels and jewels valued at nearly $10,000,000.

When only a mere boy, in 1808, the old sailor, with many others, was captured by Latrobe when he pursued and seized the vessel on which they were travelling from Trinidad to Kingston in the West Indies.

For a long time Latrobe's ship flying the "jolly roger" had been pursued by Spanish and Yankee war ships. Being very fast, she had been able to avoid capture, while preying on merchant vessels, but had found no safe opportunity to land any of her booty. Accordingly, she was loaded down with a vast accumulation of riches.

Buried on Wolf Island.

At length, the wind favoring, Latrobe sent his ship scudding south through the Caribbean as though making for Trinidad at the most southerly limit of what was known as the Spanish Main. The Spanish and Yankee pursuers were left far astern.

No land had been sighted for two days when, at dawn a small island appeared in the horizon with a rugged outline against the sky which caused it to resemble a wolf—indeed, "Isla de Lobo" was the Eighteenth Century name of this island, the present name of which is different, but is not divulged by Captain Small.

Latrobe's ship was making straight for this island. Swinging around the western end, it came to anchor in a little cove on the southern coast, while Latrobe, with two huge pistols in his belt, cursing his men and spurring them on to the greatest haste, stood over several heavy metal-bound chests as the men brought them from below and placed them on deck.

As soon as the anchor had been heaved over, Latrobe had the chests lowered into the long boat manned by twelve of his crew, and was rowed to the bit of sandy beach at the base of the rocky hill whose summit formed the head of the "wolf."

From the deck of the ship the boy captive had a good view of the whole proceedings. He saw the boat beached, saw the chests dragged a little way up the slope, and saw the long boat pull off again half way to the ship where the crew rested on their oars, having left the pirate and three of his men on the island.

These men immediately set to work digging in the sand. Latrobe sat on the beach near by with both his pistols leveled at the diggers. The men worked energetically, and in less than an hour the last of the chests had been dumped into the hole dug for them.

Then, suddenly, the heart of the boy watcher was sickened by a dreadful spectacle. He saw Latrobe leap to his feet and shoot two of the men, who fell to the ground lifeless. Before the smoke from the pistols had cleared away, the pirate had leaped upon the third man killing him with his dirk.

Working with frenzied energy, Latrobe then threw the bodies of the three men into the hole on top of the chests, and, seizing a shovel, filled it completely, tramping down the sand with his boots.

For half an hour longer the pirate could be seen pacing the beach—from the water's edge up to the foot of the hill, thence parallel with the beach to a clump of three palm trees, and thence back to the beach. At length he signalled to his boat's crew, which pulled back to the beach, picked up their captain and returned to the ship.

Latrobe was in a vile humor. Everyone fled at his approach—except the captive boy, toward whom he manifested a strange gentleness.

The ship weighed anchor immediately and steered for the open Caribbean in a northwesterly direction. At dawn on the very next day she almost ran into a Yankee corvette, and was captured before she could fire a shot.

The pirate prize was taken to Kingston, Jamaica, where Latrobe, his crew and several of his male captives—including the boy—were placed in a prison pen to await execution ordered for them on the next day.

Inquiry satisfied the authorities that the pirate's captives were innocent. Their release was ordered. Before they went, Latrobe gave to the boy a parchment chart showing the exact location of the gold and jewels he had buried on "Wolf" Island. He charged the boy to give the chart to Lafitte, who was then at the head of the whole fleet of Caribbean pirates, and who would reward him handsomely.

On the following day Latrobe and his men were hanged. The boy, having had enough of pirate society, made no effort to find Lafitte, and kept the secret and the chart for his own use and profit at some future day.

He became a sailor, but as he never advanced beyond the station of an able seaman, he never was able to secure the means of recovering Latrobe's treasure. At last, with death near, he told this story to the doctor who attended him, giving him the old chart.

Dr. Davidson's Expedition.

Now comes the most remarkable part of the whole story. Dr. Davidson was so impressed with the truth of the old sailor's narrative that he lost no time in forming an expedition to go in search of the treasure. "Wolf Island" had long since been renamed, and the old sailor was able to identify it by its new name, which, however, has not been divulged by either Dr. Davidson or Captain Small.

In 1887 a ship sailed from New York harbor carrying Dr. Davidson and a party of men who had financed the expedition. They sailed for latitude about 12 north and longitude practically 64:30 west, some 100 miles northwest from Port of Spain, Trinidad, and on arriving in those waters easily recognized the "wolf" skyline of the island of their search.

Circling its western end they saw the sandy beach at the foot of the rocky hill which formed the wolf's head, and came to anchor in the cove—just as Pirate Latrobe had nearly eighty years before. They landed on the beach—and then came the test of the old chart.

The ancient parchment showed the treasure to be buried in the centre of an equilateral triange. The three angles of this triangle were: First, a large rock at the water's edge whose top was uncovered only at low tide; second, a spring bubbling up at the foot of the rocky hill; third, a group of three palm trees. A note on the parchment chart read:

"From centre of line between spring and palms, measures half the distance straight to rock at low tide, and dig."

Waiting for low tide, Dr. Davidson and his companions were cheered by the sight of the rock, which was large and firmly imbedded in the sand. They had already discovered the spring at the base of the "wolf's" head—but there was no evidence that a group of three palm trees had ever existed in the vicinity.

Evidently the lapse of eighty years had disposed of these palms. But it was a simple problem in geometry to discover the spot where they had stood, two of the three points of the triangle having been located. All that was necessary was to find the spot which was at an equal distance both from the rock and from the spring.

This point located, the centre of the triangle area was found, and men were set to work digging in the sand. For a little while there was breathless suspense. Presently the spades struck against harder substances, and parts of human skeletons were revealed.

"The treasure is found!" exclaimed Dr. Davidson. "These are the bones of the men whom Latrobe slew and buried above his treasure chests. Dig further and you will come to the gold!"

Digging further the men did, indeed, come to the decaying chests, but, being raised they were suspiciously light.

"The treasure has been stolen!" exclaimed one of the party.

But in another moment there was a general shout of relief. The wood of the chests had rotted and their bottoms had dropped out!

Feverishly the men with the spades dug for the gold and jewels which had thus escaped from the chests. No signs of them!

Then—another discovery. The diggers had come upon a vein of quicksand. Into this treacherous material any weighty substance reaching it would continue to sink until it reached some stratum more solid.

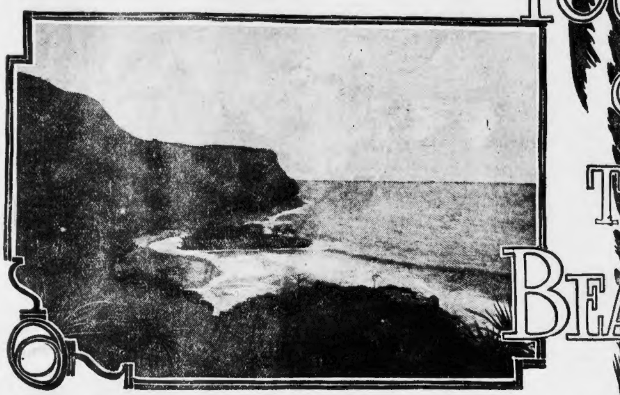
So the men with the spades were instructed to enlarge the area of their excavation and to dig on deeper. This they did. Lumber was brought from the ship. Planks were driven down to keep out the inflow of quicksand—and so the quest went on until a depth of thirty feet had been reached. At that point the work had to cease. It was too great an engineering problem for the equipment of Dr. Davidson's expedition to solve.

But in the last hour of the digging, just as the flow of quicksand beneath the bottoms of the restraining planks stopped further progress, the spade of one of the men threw up three pieces of Spanish gold, and a jewelled bracelet!

"Found!" said Dr. Davidson.

It is a strange circumstance that in spite of this proof of the existence of untold treasure at the spot indicated in the old chart, neither Dr. Davidson nor his associates were ever able to command the necessary measures to battle with the underground river of quicksand which separated them from the millions of their quest.

At last the quest devolved upon Captain Small, of Liverpool, who has undertaken to tackle the problem scientifically. Knowing that the treasure is there in the sand of "Wolf" Island, at no very great depth, he has equipped his sturdy yacht, the Catharine, with ample material and appliances with which to do successful battle with the quicksand. Advices from Liverpool say that the expedition is due to start for the Caribbean at the beginning of the New Year.



View of the Beach On the "Isla de Lobo," Where Pirate Latrobe Buried $10.000.000 in Gold and Jewels in the Year 1808.—From a Photograph Taken by a Member of the First Expedition to Recover the Treasure.

"Latrobe sat on the beach near by with both his pistols leveled at the diggers. The men worked energetically, and in less than an hour the last of the chests had been dumped into the hole dug for them."

QUEEN WILHELMINA'S EMPTY CRADLE

How the Merry, Plump Young Queen of Holland Has Wasted Away Into a Sad-Faced, Broken-Down Woman and Is Losing Her Mind Because, if She Cannot Have An Heir Her Country Will Fall Into the Hands of Germany.

PERHAPS the strangest and most pitiful tragedy to be witnessed in the world to-day is that of which little Queen Wilhelmina of Holland is the victim.

The young Queen, who was once idolized by the Dutch people, is now to a great extent an object of dislike and suspicion because she has not produced an heir to the throne. The reason of this attitude on the part of the people is that the lack of an heir imperils the future safety and happiness of the nation, which, together with its colonies, numbers over 41,000,000 persons.

The Queen is ruined in health, and her physical weakness, which is obviously no fault of her own, is the original cause of the popular hostility. She is regarded as a traitor to the country. This is one astonishing result of the monarchical system, which makes human lives and the most sacred human relations pawns in the game of dynastic and political intrigue.

The great fear which the absence of an heir arouses in the Dutch people is that they will fall into the clutches of Germany through the succession to the throne of a German prince, who is next in succession after the extinction of Queen Wilhelmina's family. They are filled with dread at the prospect of losing their ancient independence and institutions, which they won by the greatest struggle in history. They do not wish to be crushed by the mailed fist of the German Emperor.

Queen Wilhelmina recently disappointed for the third time the hopes of the people that she would produce an heir to the throne. It is now considered almost certain that she is physically incapable of becoming a mother. Everything that medical science could suggest has been done to bring about the desired end, but without success. The Queen is now undergoing a new treatment, but there is little expectation that it will succeed.

The weakness of Queen Wilhelmina is somewhat astonishing. At the time of her marriage she was a picture of healthy and vigorous womanhood. From her birth it had been recognized that the hopes of Dutch nationality were largely centred in her, because there was no other representative of her family living in Holland. She was therefore brought up with the utmost care, with the object of making her a robust woman and an ideal Dutch housewife and mother.

Her mother and everybody connected with the Court and Government of Holland aided in this plan conscientiously. The Queen led the most simple and wholesome life imaginable, entirely free from the traditional luxury of courts and fashionable society. She passed nearly all her time at the charming country palace, known as the House in the Woods. There she learnt in the most practical way all the duties of a housewife and the management of a farm. Naturally she grew up rosy-cheeked and healthy.

At eighteen she was crowned Queen and became the actual reigning sovereign of her country. She was at this time the idol of the Dutch people.

Then the question of marriage became insistent. With every day that she delayed taking the momentous step, the Dutch people became more uneasy. It was generally agreed that the husband had to be a prince of a reigning family and a Protestant, the latter condition being required by the laws of Holland. There are very few princes who fulfil these requirements outside of Germany, and those few are English.

One candidate after another was examined and rejected and finally the Queen's choice fell on Prince Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, one of her cousins. She was married to him on February 7, 1901. It was generally believed that the Queen fell in love with him, but how this could be is one of the mysteries of feminine nature. To all appearances the Prince is [illegible] better than an animated beer barrel, and his few exhibitions of animation assume the form of a very violent and brutal temper.

Eighteen months after the marriage the Dutch people thrilled with excitement at the prospect of the approaching birth of an heir to the throne. The ladies of the Dutch nobility presented the Queen with a magnificent cradle, similar in design to the one which had been used by the Duchess of Marlborough, which in turn was copied from the most celebrated of fifteenth century Flemish models. Other presents of a similar character were showered upon the Queen from all parts of Holland and Europe.

The Queen herself was incessantly occupied in making exquisite lace trimmed bed clothes and hangings for the cradle and in designing little garments.

All this high expectation ended only in bitter disappointment, and the Queen became dangerously ill. Before her illness it was generally known that serious quarrels had occurred between her and her husband. It was even said that he had beaten her, and a league of young Dutch noblemen was formed with the object of inciting him to fight duels until they had killed him. The Prince behaved disgracefully in public, and while intoxicated attacked unoffending citizens with his sword in a cafe of The Hague.

Before the Queen's illness she and her husband were temporarily separated, and he went away to Germany for months. After she recovered they were reconciled, because she wished to present a picture of domestic happiness and to assure the Dutch people as far as lay in her power of the continuance of national independence.

Within about a year the hopes of the nation were once more raised that the cradle would be filled. The same cradle was still waiting for an occupant. By this time the Queen had become a slave to this symbol of the national hopes. She hung over it incessantly, rearranging it and adding new ornaments to it. She was always doing needlework on new garments for the little stranger who was so tardy in coming.

Once more the hopes of the Queen and the nation were disappointed, and after this occasion the doctors agreed that in all probability there never would be an heir to the Dutch throne born in Holland.

The Queen, however, has not given up hope. Her devotion to the empty cradle has become pathetic. She lingers over it nearly all day long when she is in Holland. She gazes at it constantly with longing, wistful, hollow eyes, as if by gazing she could help to fill it with the greatly desired, crowing little occupant.

It is feared that her mind has become partially unbalanced. She pays no attention to anything that is occurring around her. She goes about with a fixed stare, as if she were looking at some spectre beyond the vision of ordinary men. Physically she is a wreck. All her comeliness, rosy cheeks and generally healthy appearance have vanished. She is emaciated and round-shouldered. Her cheeks are sunken and sallow and her eyes encircled with black rings.

Recently the Queen went to a sanitarium conducted by a famous specialist at Albrechtsburg, near Dresden. There she is taking a course of treatment upon which rests the last hope of satisfying the expectations of the Dutch nation. An important part of this treatment is to keep her always in the open air, while she avoids exercise as far as possible. She is usually taken out into the beautiful park of the sanitarium in a specially constructed chair, in which she can recline at full length. Every effort is made by her attendants to divert and interest her by reading to her and singing. These efforts, it is reported, do not have any success, and she remains the picture of misery and melancholy.

The Dutch public, newspapers and politicians are now acutely disturbed by the situation that arises from the absence of an heir to the throne. There is a general sentiment that it should be met by a law providing for the creation of a Dutch republic. Some citizens wish to establish the republic on the death of Queen Wilhelmina, others prefer to take the step at once, believing that there would be danger of foreign interference during the confusion following her death. Holland was a republic down to the beginning of the nineteenth century, with Queen Wilhelmina's ancestors, the Princes of Orange as hereditary presidents.

On the death of Queen Wilhelmina, the next heir to her throne, as matters stand at present, is her cousin, the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar, a reigning German prince owing allegiance to the German Emperor, as his suzerain. In case he declines the throne, various other German princes have a right to it by virtue of descent from Queen Wilhelmina's ancestors.

The Kaiser himself has a vague claim to call himself the head of the Orange-Nassau family, because he is directly descended from the Princess Louise of Orange, the only daughter of Prince Henry Frederick of Orange, who died in 1647. He is not regarded as having a claim to the throne, because the succession was limited by treaty in 1848 to the descendants of Queen Wilhelmina's grandfather, but this would hardly hinder the Kaiser if he saw a good opportunity of intervening.

The danger arising from the accession of a German prince is all the greater because the annexation of Holland forms the leading feature of the policy of Pan-Germanism, which many leading Germans advocate and with which the Kaiser is believed to be in sympathy. The Pan-Germanists wish to annex Holland because of its wealth and its Teutonic population, and because it contains the mouths of the Rhine, which is a German river, and a great number of important ports situated on the open sea from which Germany is at present excluded.

They also desire to annex Holland on account of her vast and wealthy colonies in the East Indies, including Java and Sumatra, which contain a population of over 30,000,000. These have always been governed with marked success by the Dutch, in striking contrast to the scandals and sanguinary wars which have marked the German efforts at colonization. These 30,000,000 natives will have a better chance of life and happiness, if they can escape the rule of such German colonial officials as Dr. Carl Peters and those who have lately been slaughtering the Herreros in Southeast Africa.

The Dutch, who are among the freest and most enlightened nations of Europe, have every reason to resort to the extremest measures of war and revolution rather than permit themselves to be crushed by the bureaucracy and militarism of the German Kaiser.

Beware of the Sun When It Has Spots.

REGARDING the influence of sun spots upon things terrestrial, A. L. Cortie, the distinguished astronomer of Stonyhurst Observatory in England, says that variation in all kinds of phenomena has been attributed to their presumed potent agency.

These include, he says, magnetic and electric changes on the earth, the aurora borealis, air temperature, barometric pressure, humidity, the winds, cloudiness, rainfall, depth and quantity of rivers, retreat and advance of glaciers, the number of shipwrecks, bank failures and commercial crises, the crops, the price of grain, famines and wars.

Even the flights of butterflies, according to an enumeration recently made by Mr. C. G. Abbott.

To this list may be added fluctuations in the quantity of ozone and the occurrence of volcanoes and earthquakes.

According to the late Professor Jevons, fluctuations in the price of corn and consequently in the world's trade are traceable to sun spots.

The sun spots are more numerous in some years than in others, and that they increase in periodic cycles was first recognized by Schwabe, of Dessau, and has been established by the observations of later scientists. It is now known that those cycles comprise periods of about eleven years and forty-seven days, the spots growing more numerous for about five years, and then growing fewer in number until they reach their minimum.

It has also been established that the sun in some way governs the magnetism of the earth, it being noticeable that magnetic storms or disturbances occur more frequently and more violently in direct accord with the increase of the sun spots.

Exactly what influence magnetism or electro-magnetism has upon terrestrial affairs scientists do not profess to know, but that it is very great they admit.

It certainly has great influence upon the growth of all manner of plants, so that to it may well be assigned the failure or prosperity of crops and the consequent fluctuations in the business world which all know follow those of the crops.

That electro-magnetism may affect human beings in like manner must be admitted.

Mental depression or elation men experience in accordance with the changes of the weather would serve to suggest this. That it may have influence so affecting men's minds as to render them more inclined to acts of foolhardiness or carelessness is certainly possible and would of itself go far to account for recurring periods in which accidents and mishaps of all kinds were found to be more numerous than at others.

Certainly it would not be waste of time to collate statistics of such accidents that would enable us to see if they did correspond with the greater frequency of sun spots and the known correspondingly greater frequency of electro-magnetic disturbances.

As Astronomer Corti shows, the sun spots from 1893 to 1901 were approaching a minimum, which was reached in the latter year. Consequently the sun spots have since been approaching a maximum, and taking the five years since they should now, in 1906, have attained their maximum, bringing us to a period at which we are subject to their most powerful influence, whatever that influence may be.

Queerest Woman on Earth.

MISS CARL, WHO PAINTED THE EMPRESS.

An American girl, who has enjoyed an intimate acquaintance with the Dowager Empress of China, the great Tze-Shi, here gives for the first time probably, a true description of this wonderful woman, who rules over 400,000,000 Chinese.

Miss Katherine A. Carl, who for eleven months lived in a cottage in the palace grounds, and was admitted to terms of extreme intimacy and favor in the royal palace at Pekin, painted four portraits of "The Old Ancestress," as she is termed in Chinese, walked and rowed and talked with Her Celestial Majesty, and received from her the title "The Pearly Stream."

Miss Carl declares that although the Empress has the cares of the rule of 400,000,000 persons in her kingdom she is marvellously well preserved, that although she is seventy-two years old she looks scarcely forty. She is, she asserts, the best preserved woman of her age in the world.

The Empress sleeps on a hard bed, without springs. Many of her rules of etiquette and personal habits and behavior are funnier than a comic opera character.

She never sits by a fire as women of her age in the Western World like to do. There are never, Winter or Summer, any fires in the royal palace of China, except in its kitchens.

She rises at 6 o'clock and retires at 10.

She eats, not regularly, but whenever she likes. For that reason meals are always in preparation for the Empress in the royal kitchens. Her breakfast may be served any time between her rising hour and 10:30. Her luncheon must be ready from 10:30 to 12 and she eats it whenever she likes, or if she wishes, eats nothing at all. Immediately luncheon is over the royal cooks go about the task of cooking her dinner, for she may ask for it at any time between 2 o'clock and 6. She eats between meals and whenever she wishes.

Aside from her regular hours of rising and retiring, her life is most irregular. If she does not sleep well she rises at any hour, whether at midnight or 3 o'clock, summons her ladies-in-waiting, her suite of eunuchs and her chair-bearers and rides or walks for hours through the moonlit palace grounds.

The Empress's hair is black as jet, thick and soft and lustrous. She never had a shampoo in her life. Oils and unguents she has used in large quantities all of her three score years and ten. She has had her hair combed and brushed three or four times a day. Soap and water she considers ruinous to the hair.

The wonderful old monarch of the Chinese disdains the tooth brush. Yet she has only lost a few of her teeth. The rest are exquisitely white and regular. She has preserved them for more than seven decades by rinsing her mouth carefully several times after each meal and by chewing betel nuts between meals. Miss Carl says, moreover, that the kind of food eaten by the Empress and her ladies accounts for the beauty of their teeth. They eat vegetab'es and cereals chiefly. No food is very hot or cold. And they spend at least an hour at the simplest meal.

"The Empress is an epicure," says the woman who painted her first and only portrait, "and like all epicures she eats slowly."

The Dowager Empress has tiny feet, inherited from generations of ancestors with deformed feet. She has never had to bind and cramp them herself, because they were of the most admired Chinese pattern when she was born.

She wears white kid shoes, heelless but with soles six inches thick.

The Dowager Empress has never taken a bath as we know it, in a tub supplied with running water. Oils and ointments take the place of water, and when water is used, which happens rarely, it is carried to her bedside in a large basin.

She is remarkably healthy, and on the wonderfully rare occasions when she is ill her physicians lose their fees. For the wise old Empress of China pays the court physicians to keep her well. When she is ill she blames them for it energetically and without reserve.

The work of the dentist in the court of China is not enough to keep him from growing fat and lazy, for he never fills teeth, only extracts them, and it is a disgrace to lose a tooth in China.

The great Tze-Shi always eats at a small table alone. When she gives state dinners the Princesses of the household act as hostesses, and the Empress Dowager joins them at the end of the meal and receives their homage.

Her hands, the artist says, are models for any woman in the world. A sketch which Miss Carl lent to this newspaper shows the royal hand life size. It is in perfect proportion to the body by the classic Greek standards. The nails of the thumb and first two fingers are permitted to grow two inches long. Those on the last two fingers are never cut or filed. In the case of the Empress Dowager they are four inches long, and are protected by sheaths that perfectly fit the nails. The sheaths on the right hand are of jade on which Chinese characters are painted, those of the left are of gold set with ruby and pearls. At night she removes them, and wears silver sheaths. She is manicured three times a day. When the Empress Dowage tears or breaks a nail it is a calamity. The entire Court is agitated until the nail has been treated, softened with oil, made even by filing and wrapped with floss. Never but once has the Empress had her nails cut. That was when she was retreating before the Boxer uprising, and was afraid her long nails would betray that she belonged to the royal house.

The Dowager Empress never drinks cold water. Tepid water or fruit juices are her favorite beverage, and, like all Chinese women, she drinks tea.

She orders everything by the half dozen. When Miss Carl appeared before Her Majesty with one easel the great Tze-Shi sent out and got five more.

Her health she attributes to the fact that she always wears silken bags filled with the petals of flowers about her person. The perfume she is convinced keeps off disease.

She takes rain baths in a unique manner. When the clouds appear and the first few drops fall from a darkened sky, she orders her chair, her ladies and her eunuchs and the royal procession sets forth in its shower procession. Often, when she has ridden thus for miles through the forests, she orders her carriers to stop, and steps fom her seat, and goes forward in the forest, leading the procession, her face turned upward to invite the drops of falling rain, her feet, in their dainty, heelless shoes, sinking deep into the mud. She has sometimes stayed out for hours in such a storm and returned, smiling and content, to be massaged with oils and dried with silk towels.

Miss Carl, who was the first and only artist who ever painted the portrait of the "Old Ancestress," and whose largest portrait was exhibited at St. Louis, is a vivacious blonde, with sparkling eyes and a smile that reveals exquisitely white and regular teeth.

The artist described the personal appearance of the monarch in much the same manner in which she described her in her book, "With the Empress Dowager."

Despite her long nails, Miss Carl says the movements of the Empress Dowager's little hands, with their birdlike claws, was grace itself.

"We take hold of things in a crude, almost brutal fashion," said Miss Carl. "The Empress, with her four-inch nails in her way, handles cups of tea with infinite grace. She holds her hands as do all the Chinese women of high rank, for all of the women of high rank have long nails, as a bird poises before it flies."

"That which I liked least of all the Chinese Empress's customs was the manner of her sleeping. Her bed chamber was a large airy room, but her bed was in an alcove. It was of hard boards, covered with a mattress without springs. She never used blankets, but comforts of eider down covered with silk. Her pillow is a small bolster similar to the large sachets used for bureau or chiffonier drawers. But above the bed and on all three sides of the alcove are shelves that are filled with Chinese idols and clocks. There were at least twenty-five of these clocks, and never did I hear two of them strike at the same time. Their continuous ticking, broken twenty-five times, or more than once every three minutes, by the strokes of the hour, was torturing to a person with nerves. But Her Majesty had no nerves. Chinese ladies are without them. Centuries of inherited placidity and philosophy have given them perfect poise. American women can learn a great deal in this respect from the Chinese.

"A great deal has been written and printed about the tigrish nature of the Empress Dowager. I never saw any exhibitions of it. She was always well bred, kindly, and courteous. There was doubtless some iron in the composition of her character. She must be inflexible to govern, and to govern there must be punishments. But I never saw her more ruffled than one of the placid lakes of the palace grounds at midday.

"She was very fond of nature in all its phases and spent a great deal of time in the open. Like all of the Chinese she has developed personal magnetism to a marvelous degree. Her favorite amusement is charming birds from the trees, as I have often seen her do. She approaches a bird slowly and softly and addresses it in Chinese in a sweet, monotonous voice. One might fancy a mother was crooning a lullaby to an infant. The bird would stop its hopping about the branches, fascinated. Putting its head on one side then the other, it would eye her reflectively and then hop down into her hands."

Miss Carl at the Judson, on South Washington Square, New York, is painting portraits of society women. None of them she declares is so admirable a sitter as the Empress of the four hundred million Chinese.

The New "Godiva" Dance.

A FIGURE IN THE NEW "GODIVA" DANCE THAT PARIS IS RAVING ABOUT

A Dancer Clothed Chiefly in Her Own Hair.

The latest theatrical spectacle that is stirring the jaded senses of Parisians is called "The Godiva Dance."

It is so called because the dancer, Mdlle. [illegible], wears little else but her own beautiful abundant hair, the same costume as that in which the immortal Lady Godiva paraded the streets of Coventry on a famous occasion.

Mademoiselle [illegible] has invented a dance which is entirely different from anything that can be witnessed in the world to-day. In spite of its extensively undraped character it is so delicate and artistic that, according to reliable witnesses, there is nothing in it which would offend the most refined taste.

The Godiva dance has attained even more than the popularity of Loie Fuller's serpentine dance, which has long been the delight of the Parisians. It resembles the serpentine dance in its artistic qualities, but it is stranger. The flowing tresses of Mademoiselle [illegible] take the place of La Loie's diaphanous robes in creating artistic effects. The tresses have more human interest than the diaphanous robes.

The Godiva dance is variously described as a living dream; a poem in coiffure and other interesting things. Mademoiselle [illegible] glides about the stage with a gentle rhythmic motion, her glorious hair flying in all directions, assuming strange, fantastic outlines and glittering with exquisite tones of color, as the light falls upon it from different points.

Perhaps the best way to convey an idea of this strange dance is to quote the rhapsody of an enthusiastic French spectator:

"Following the cadenced lullaby of a distant melody whose rhythm seems like some antique souvenir, the dancer having for garment only her long tresses, comes forward an almost immaterial being. Whirling with her finely moulded arms, her tresses which undulate, she creates a new delight and a new art.

"O! tresses of ebony, tresses bediademed and tresses with halos, tresses serpentine, whose coils enfold themselves about limbs of pearl, divine tresses, wild tresses that should be adorned with jewels and roses, dance before our enchanted eyes and teach us new delights!

"Tresses with the odors of the Springtime, tresses with the perfumes of the boudoir, and tresses that recall unforgettable evenings.

"Tresses that intoxicate, tresses that thrill, tresses that are living vines, tresses in which we would weep, dance before our enchanted eyes and teach us new delights!

"And now the dancer has vanished like a sail that vanishes before the evening breezes; and our yearning soul perceives only the cadenced lullaby of a very distant melody whose rhythm seems like some antique souvenir."

Perhaps the spectacle of Mlle. [illegible]'s dancing would not affect an American in exactly the same way as it did this susceptible Frenchman, but it is evidently a very extraordinary one.

How to Tide Over Lovers' Quarrels.

Though lovers' quarrels may soon be over, the remembrance of them is not so easily disposed of. A second quarrel will bring back the cause and bitterness of the first, and perhaps the old ground will again be gone over, all to the undoing of the beautiful compact which was so sacred to them when they first declared their love.

It is not expected that lovers, any more than other folk, can always keep irritation and annoyance at bay; signs of these will now and again appear, but love that wishes for the best can always be very forgiving and meet irritation, not with a hasty reply, but with calm soothing. Annoyance can be ignored, and the clever girl who finds her sweetheart irritable will not at once let him know that he ought to be better tempered, but will take it for granted that he has business worries, and she will then quietly draw all his thoughts into a pleasanter channel until he has entirely forgotten that the day has held for him unpleasant quarters of an hour.

As a rule men are gentler than are girls when their sweethearts are annoyed. They try at once to make the bother forgotten in spite of the girl's tenacity to air her grievances.

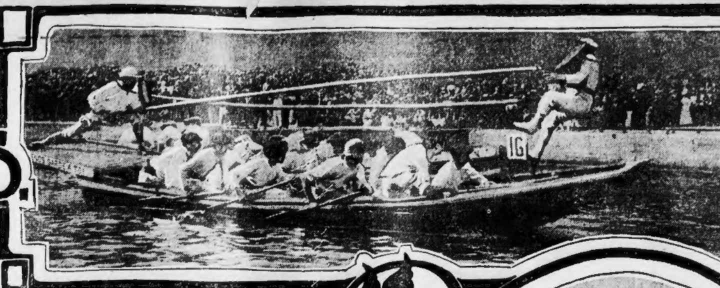
CURIOUS NEW SPORTS.

Dangerous and Very Unpleasant New Games and Amusements.



TILTING ON THE WATER, A NEW AND DANGEROUS SPORT, RECENTLY WITNESSED ON THE SEINE.

MAN is always trying to devise some new and strange sport for his amusement and woman nowadays exhibits the same peculiarity.

The water is the favorite place for queer sports, because it is pleasant to fall in, provided you can swim, and does not knock the sportsman's brains out. Woman takes kindly to the water, if she has been generously treated by nature, because it enables her to display her attractions to the best advantage without immodesty.

Perhaps the most startling of new sports is water motoring. This is not to be confused with motor boating. Water motoring is much more exciting. Its excitement lies in scooting through the water with a motor attached to your back. The motor drives a screw propeller which is situated just below the waist at the back, a position corresponding to the stern of a boat.

When a person becomes expert with this apparatus he will be able to travel through the water at a speed of twenty or thirty miles an hour, or perhaps even at the speed of a fast automobile. There is no reason to believe that the friction of the water against the body will be dangerous. With this apparatus, it is believed, the crossing of the English Channel will be easy and far greater distances may be accomplished.

The inventor of the apparatus is M. Constantini and the person who uses it most successfully is Miss Constance Odell, of London, who is a splendid swimmer. She is shown using it here.

The main body, or case of the apparatus, consists of a light aluminum box about twenty inches high, which is adapted to be carried upon the back of the swimmer. It is just large enough to contain the motor and the rest of the apparatus. The propeller, which is used to drive the device through the water, is mounted on the end of a crankshaft, and the latter is made to project out through a water-tight packing in the side of the case. To protect the propeller from any shocks it might receive, it is surrounded by a conical piece, carrying a wire gauze covering. Gasolene is supplied from an aluminum tank, which is fitted against the back of the case. To control the working of the motor, two rods pass to the outside. One of these works upon the carburetter to regulate the proportion of gas and air for the mixture; the second rod acts upon the ignition shafting. Attached to each side of the main case is an airbag of some size which serves as a float. The swimmer is seated upon a projecting saddle formed of a metal plate covered with cork. Two straps are fixed to the upper end of the box so as to fasten it upon the swimmer's back. The storage battery and induction coil are stowed in the lower part of the case under the motor. Steering is done by opening the hands more or less, or inclining them at different angles.

An extraordinary water sport has just been invented by ingenious Frenchmen. It is tilting on the water. Boats of curious construction are used, having blunt noses like scows to avoid the danger of cutting down one another in collision. Each boat is propelled by a crew of eight, using paddles, so that they can see just where they are going and dodge quickly. On a platform in the stern stands a man with the lance, which is a long light pole about fifteen feet in length. He carries a big pad, hanging in front of his chest by a strap passed around his neck. This is the shield designed to receive the blows of the spear.

Two boats take part in a bout, or joust as it is technically called. The man with the lance aims to hit his opponent who stands similarly armed in the stern of the opposing boat, and knock him into the water. The leather pad is used to receive the blow of the lance as a shield was used by the knights of old.

The crew endeavor to help their lancer as much as possible by paddling as swiftly and accurately as they can in a line that will help to land a decisive blow on his opponent.

When a lancer plants a real knockout blow on his enemy, he sends him flying through the air head over heels for fifteen or twenty feet and then into the water. When he tries to strike hard and misses he goes tumbling over the heads of his own crew with his long pole and throws them all into confusion. Evidently it is a sport that calls for a great amount of strength, agility and courage. It is, moreover, a very pleasing one for the spectators, who are delighted to see a large man sent flying through the air and coming down with a great splash.

The past few years have seen an extraordinary increase in the number of women long distance swimmers. They now include more fine long distance swimmers than men. Three of them recently took part in the swim through Paris, which has now become a regular annual institution. What makes it so interesting is that millions of people can watch it at close quarters. The Seine is a tiny little river, bordered for miles and miles with magnificent quays. The people standing on them are near enough to see the expression on the faces of the long trail of swimmers who go struggling past them.

The best woman swimmer in the last race was Miss Annette Kellerman, who is probably the best long distance swimmer in the world. She just failed to win, but she was far stronger when she finished than any of the men. In fact she laughed and walked away, while they had to be carried off and revived by their friends. Endurance is her strong point. Indeed there seems to be something in the physical construction of a well developed woman that fits her for staying a long time in the water.

Miss Kellerman's best swim was twenty-six miles in three hours and eleven minutes on the River Danube. A year ago she made a plucky attempt to swim the English Channel. She gave it up after she had been eight hours in the water, because a storm came up which made her seasick. It was seen, however, that she had as good a chance of getting across as anybody who has attempted the feat since Captain Webb.

The champion swimmer is only twenty years of age. She stands five feet seven inches high and weighs 140 pounds. She is as perfectly formed as an ideal Greek statue. She was born in Australia where she first earned distinction as a swimmer. At fifteen she won the 100-yard championship of New South Wales, making the distance in 1 minute 20 1-5 seconds; then she won the 400-yard championship in 7 minutes and 48 seconds, and next the one-mile championship in 32 minutes and 48 seconds. She wears bathing tights that weigh only two ounces and greases herself with lard and resin. She expects to come to America this year and a lot of American girls are getting ready to meet her.

One of the most amusing water contests ever invented is the barrel race recently held at the Weybridge regatta in England. Barrels with the ends knocked out were suspended by ropes from a long pole passed across the River Thames. The swimmers had to climb up into each barrel, crawl through it and drop into the water again.

A new apparatus for long distance swimming has been tried with remarkable success by Miss Clara Simpson.

THE·"MYSTERY"·WHERE·EVERYBODY WORKS·BUT·FATHER.

Where Everybody Works But Father.

SAN FRANCISCO has the oddest ship's crew that ever "manned" a craft. The craft is a scow, and the crew are all girls, a crew that sends the square-nosed hauler over the waters of the bay and into the rivers; a crew that hoists the sails, stands watches at wheel and on lookout, and even loads and unloads the lighter portions of the cargo. This remarkable crew is striving to recover the position it maintained before the April fire swept along south of Market street and laid its cozy little Natoma street home in ashes when San Francisco was destroyed.

Damien Espinosa de Lesmonteros is the captain of this little scow, the Mystery. He also has the distinction of being the father of thirty-three children. His pretty daughter, Isabelle, is the first mate. She is seventeen. His daughter Jesucita, aged fifteen, is the second mate. Grace and Anita, thirteen and ten, are the deckhands, and their sweet-faced Spanish mother is the chief cook. Maria, Helen and Irvine, all babies, are the passengers.

The baby passengers go wherever the ship goes, as children of leisure, for they are not yet qualified in years to serve as members of the crew but they will in time. Just recently, for instance, the Mystery was taking on a cargo of coal, lumber, shakes and shingles for Rio Vista, on the Sacramento river. After a day or two she was ready to leave with her merry crew to discharge at the point of destination, and then beat it back to points about Petaluma, under a charter for a cargo to be shipped to San Francisco. And her girl crew took her up the river and brought her back.

Ever since the children were old enough to know the water from their building blocks, they have had an inborn desire for ships and the sea. When they attained mental development and physical strength sufficient to enable them to tug at the hawsers aboard their father's ship and throw the wheel of the schooner over to "bring her about in a blow," these four little misses have scampered the decks of vessels and given themselves over to the mysteries of the docks that they have made their playgrounds.

And now each aspires to a life out on the water and each works with the hope that some day there may come to them the papers that will license them to take a ship out on the billows to ports along the coast. For these girls are sailors in the bone; they like the sea; they want to study navigation, and in order to become mariners they need only the learning of the school, for their practical knowledge now would suffice for any of the ordinary needs of the waterfront.

Isabelle, seventeen years old, as mate of this vessel, directs affairs aboard. Wasn't it Isabelle Espinosa, then only eleven years old, who proved herself the heroine of the storm that rent its way along San Francisco Bay one night six years ago and struck terror to shipping? Didn't she stay with the schooner Howard when the ship was torn from its moorings and sent on its wild way toward what would have been destruction, bringing it about and letting go the anchor just in time to land the Howard safely on the Mission flats?

Shipping men all about San Francisco still remember this feat of Isabelle Espinosa, and they talk of it now when the win runs high and they feel to every rope and halyard for safety. No two men would have undertaken the task of dropping that anchor. But Isabelle had the safety of the lives of her family to look after in her father's absence, and she did it in a way that brought praise from every mouth.

And it was Isabelle and Jesucita who, on the night when the craft lying off Mt. Eden, were threatened in a storm, took their schooner out on the bay in the blow and landed her safely at the dock in the city, when not another sailor in he fleet that was endangered would venture out into the open.

"This life on shipboard is the one we have selected, just as other families have taken other means of providing homes since the big fire," says Isabelle. "Of course, there has always been a feeling in our family for the sea and all of the children are delighted when they can get aboard ship. But now, not as in the old days, when we spent our vacations with our father aboard the schooner, we work to help out. After the fire there were two men in the employ of our father, but this was an expense that was not easily met and we girls decided to take up the work.

"Oh, yes, we work as the sailors would work aboard the Myste . Any one of us understands beating and tacking and wearing ship, and those things. We are all able to do the work. In loading, there are parts of the cargo we cannot handle, but we take care of the most of it. It's easy, and we are all ve[illegible] [illegible]py."

Damien Espinosa, the father of this crew, is sixty-one years old. He arrived in San Francisco in 1860, and was only fifteen years old, yet possessor of a fortune of $38,000. He went to sea, but, after coasting about for a couple of years, returned to San Francisco and married.

He became the father of twenty-two children by this union.

When his wife died he married again and eleven more children were born of this marriage.

Espinosa ventured into many business deals and was unsuccessful, having been tied up in various forms of litigation. In his old age he settled down to make a livelihood by handling the bay cargoes that he could get, and in this way he has managed to provide a comfortable living for his wife and his younger children.

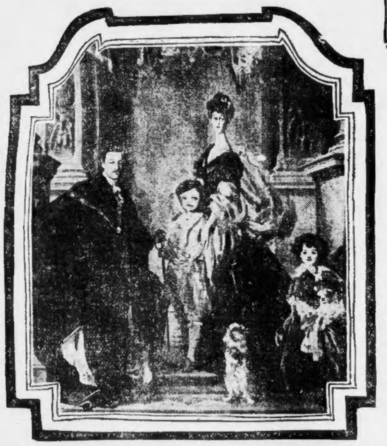
"Not a penny, sir! Not one penny after your abominable treatment of my daughter!" said Mr. Vanderbilt, raising his voice in indignation and shaking his finger at the Duke, who stood with stolid indifference, with his hands in his pockets.



SARGENT'S FAMOUS PORTRAIT REFLECTING ON THE CANVAS THE HIDDEN STORY OF THE MARLBOROUGHS' DOMESTIC LIFE—THE DUKE WAS SKILFULLY POSED TO APPEAR SMALL AND INSIGNIFICANT, AND, ALTHOUGH THE MASTER OF THE HOUSE AND LINEAL POSSESSOR OF THE NOBLE TITLE, HE IS PUT ASIDE IN THE SHADOW OF A MARBLE COLUMN, WHILE THE DUCHESS IS GIVEN THE CENTRE OF THE CANVAS, HER FIGURE STRONG AND INSPIRING ABOVE THE INCONSPICUOUS FORM OF THE INSIGNIFICANT DUKE.

THE separation of the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough, which has just become an accomplished fact, is, for many reasons, the most remarkable event in the long series of calamities and strange occurrences which have followed the marriages of American girls and European noblemen.

Indeed, amid all the melancholy wrecks of international marriages the supposed devotion of the Marlboroughs has been pointed to as the one brilliant exception which proved that a match between an American heiress and a foreign title need not come to grief. But the facts, as they are now revealed by the Marlborough separation are one more solemn warning to American girls.

A statement of the causes which have led up to it will interest all men and women who care to inquire into the subject of love and matrimony, with international complications.

Consuelo Vanderbilt, Duchess of Marlborough, is universally admitted to be the most attractive, the most interesting and the most amiable of all the American girls who have married into the European aristocracy. This fact is, if possible, more widely recognized by the public and society in England, where the Duchess has lived ever since she became a woman, than in America.

She is pretty, dignified, good-tempered, well-mannered, kind to her friends and dependents. She is free from haughtiness and ostentation, and has no sympathy with the extravagant element of fashionable society. She is idolized by the servants and tenants at Blenheim, and has delighted all those whom she has met in connection with her charitable enterprises and her occasional appearances in public affairs.

The King and Queen of England became her warm friends as soon as they realized her charms, immediately after her first presentation at Court. The Queen herself has been especially devoted to her, and during Her Majesty's recent retirement from public life, when in mourning for her father's death, the Duchess was one of the rare persons who were invited into the intimacy of the royal family.

Above all, the Duchess has been an ideal mother to her two beautiful children, and a most devoted wife, always anxious for the success and happiness of her husband, and comparatively indifferent to the most brilliant social entertainments and triumphs.

How could any man be so worthless and so wickedly foolish as to literally drive from him a wife who had given him her youth, her beauty her heart and her whole devotion; who had brought him a vast fortune and saved him from the miseries of aristocratic poverty; who wished only to be a loyal wife for the rest of her life?

When the American people learn the details of the Duke's conduct for the past few years they will be in entire sympathy with the Duchess. His meanness, his coldness, his brutality, his cynicism, his studied insolence toward one of the sweetest and most charming of women will astonish American men, accustomed as they are to surrounding their wives with an atmosphere of chivalry and devotion.

The manner in which the Duke has treated his wife is no secret in English fashionable society and in a small cosmopolitan set of American society. The British nobility do not have the same high standards of domestic conduct as ordinary Americans, but even among them contempt is quite generally expressed for Marlborough, although, of course, there are many who will support a conspicuous member of their own order in the face of all facts. The domestic troubles of the Marlboroughs have been a frequent topic of conversation in the smoking room of the House of Lords for some time past, and the Duke is discussed without restraint. Lord Roseberry, the former Prime Minister and one of the most brilliant members of the House, said the other night:

"I don't see how any woman could stand that little beast for a month."

The truth is that the Duke of Marlborough has always been thoroughly selfish and heartless. He is intensely ambitious and yet without any considerable ability to support his ambition. He has been consumed with unutterable rage and envy at the brilliant success of his cousin, Winston Churchill, who has stepped suddenly into the first rank in political life, while the Duke has failed to maintain himself in even a subordinate position. Marlborough seeks to advance his interests by means of his wife, his family and all who are willing to serve him on account of his title, but he has not the slightest gratitude for anybody. To crown all, he has extremely disagreeable and surly manners.

The truth about Marlborough's character was suspected by many who saw him before his marriage to Consuelo Vanderbilt, although he was then but an unformed youth of twenty-four. At various public places, such as the Horse Show in New York, and at social entertainments where they appeared together, he habitually walked in front of her and evidently considered himself the only person of any importance.

After they went to live in England, the Duke's selfishness was not fully realized by his wife for some time, for even the meanest of men show some attention to their wives during the first year of married life. The Duke had an excellent reason for being attentive because of his constant need of money. He was enabled to live in a manner befitting his rank only by the aid of the $10,000,000 which W. K. Vanderbilt settled jointly upon his daughter and her husband on their marriage. Fifty years ago the work of wrecking the Marlborough estates was begun by one of the Duke's ancestors, and it was completed about 1885 by his father, who sold off all the articles of value in Blenheim Palace, including Raphael's "Madonna Ansidei," for which the government paid $400,000.

Before his present marriage the present Duke could not even pay for painting the woodwork or repairing the plumbing at Blenheim Palace, and it was quite out of the question for him to have a dignified house in London.

Not satisfied with the enormous income from the marriage settlement the Duke was constantly asking for more. His method was simply to tell his wife to get the money from her father, and this method was invariably successful, for Mr. Vanderbilt had no greater pleasure in life than spending his money on his beloved daughter. He did not realize that it was the Duke who was making these constant exactions. At the same time the Duke had not the slightest regard for Mr. Vanderbilt. He intimated that he considered him a vulgar American business man and said that his father had been a deck hand on a ferry-boat. He had not taken the trouble to master the simple facts about the Vanderbilt genealogy.

He carried his rudeness to Mr. Vanderbilt so far that he told the Duchess that he did not want to have her father stay with them. Mr. Vanderbilt stayed at a hotel and good-naturedly paid no attention to the slight. This was probably the first serious trouble between the Duke and Duchess, for she was and is extremely fond of her father. They were then occupying Spencer House in London.

"I think papa ought to have the best suite of rooms in the house," said the Duchess.

"You know there isn't room," retorted the Duke, in a surly manner. "Why doesn't he build you a house fit to live in? Besides, he'll feel more at home in a hotel. Americans are not used to living in houses."

It was commonly noted that although Mr. Vanderbilt spent a considerable part of every year in Europe, he rarely stayed with the Marlboroughs, either in London or at Blenheim.

In spite of these discourtesies Mr. Vanderbilt continued to give enormous sums to his daughter and son-in-law. He paid for a racing stable for Marlborough. He gave them a yacht. He had their portraits painted by the most expensive artists in the world at least once a year. Millions and millions he spent on them cheerfully.

The Duchess went on winning social triumphs in England. She was frequently asked by the King and Queen to small entertainments to which only the most fortunate of their friends, chiefly royal persons, are asked. Whenever she appeared at a bazaar or other public affair, it was sure to be a brilliant success socially and financially.

Marlborough resented his wife's popularity bitterly. He said to her after she organized a charity bazaar at West Ham:

"A woman should be seen and talked about as little as possible. You are making yourself too conspicuous."

Unpleasant episodes of this character became of almost daily occurrence, but in spite of them the Duchess preserved her remarkable good nature and affection for her husband. She planned and worked hard to gratify his political ambition, which he lacked the capacity to promote himself. She realized by studying English conditions that if he accepted a minor office and conducted himself creditably in it, he would have a fair chance of obtaining one of those brilliant offices which the British Government prefers to entrust to a man of high rank rather than a clever politician. The goal she had in mind was the Viceroyalty of Ireland, or possibly that of India. Marlborough accepted first the unpaid sinecure of Paymaster General of the Forces, and later the somewhat more important post of Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, although in this capacity he was entirely overshadowed by his chief, Joseph Chamberlain, in the House of Commons.

For every step he took he refused his wife all credit and constantly glorified himself. The society people and politicians who came to their house, attracted by the brightness and charm of the Duchess, he bored to death by talking of nothing but his own achievements.

"I am determined to make our present colonial policy a success," he said, to everybody's amusement, for the policy depended entirely on Chamberlain.

The Duchess's plans for her husband's future were well laid, but doubtless they will come to nothing on account of the separation, for a Viceroy of India or a Governor-General of India without an attractive wife is hardly possible.

The German Emperor paid a famous visit to the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough at Blenheim Palace. The Emperor is very fond of the society of attractive young women and was particularly pleased by the young Duchess of Marlborough. In his well-known manner he began to tell her how to conduct her domestic affairs and how to dress, and he laughed heartily when she told him frankly that she disagreed with him. The Duke made frantic efforts to monopolize the conversation by talking about his political views and the achievements of his great ancestor, John Churchill, who saved the Kaiser's kingdom of Prussia from extinction. At last the Kaiser snubbed him in his best imperial manner, and after that the Duke had little more to say.

"You have made my visit a delightful one, Duchess."

He evidently regarded the Duchess as his sole entertainer, and the Duke hung in the background, a picture of yellow envy.

The culmination of Mr. Vanderbilt's long list of gifts to his daughter was a palace in Mayfair. The demand for ground in this quarter of London is so great that it is difficult to obtain it at any price. It is at present literally impossible to buy a good-sized lot on Park Lane, the principal street of the quarter, but with great difficulty the Marlborough agents secured a site facing on Curzon street, and having a street on every side. On this site the finest new house in London was built, at Mr. Vanderbilt's expense. It was named Sunderland House, from one of the Duke's titles. Before it was completed it cost $2,500,000. It is an immense house of white stone, in French renaissance architecture, very massive in style. One peculiarity of it is that there is not an inch of space between the house and the street. To avoid unpleasant observation by plebeian passers-by the ground floor is entirely given up to servants' quarters.

The great house brought no happiness to the Marlboroughs, no improvement in their domestic relations. The brilliant entertainments which the Duchess gave and to which the whole fashionable world eagerly sought admission were characterized by the Duke as exhibitions of American vulgarity.

"Why do you hold these circuses in my house?" he said after her great fancy dress ball.

The Duke's temper and character were growing worse day by day. Anyone can see by looking at his photographs that from being a dull, gloomy youth he has developed into a remarkably sharp-faced, sour-looking man with a prematurely aged expression. His progress in this direction was marked by continually more aggravated insults to his wife.

The second marriage of W. K. Vanderbilt brought a crisis in the affairs of the Marlboroughs. The Duke foresaw that it might involve the cutting off of his supplies and his rage and temper knew no bounds.

"It is perfectly disgusting," he exclaimed. "A man of his age has no business to think of getting married, especially when he has been divorced once. Americans have no sense of shame."

"Nonsense!" said the Duchess, whose temper was aroused. "I am very glad that papa is going to be married again. He has had a great deal of trouble, and I hope that he will find some happiness now."

The Duke did not go near his father-in-law at the time of the latter's marriage in London, and openly expressed his disapproval of his action.

He was justified in fearing that the new marriage would dry up his source of income. As soon as the present Mrs. Vanderbilt, senior, discovered the enormous sums her husband had been giving his daughter and son-in-law, she declared authoritatively that it must stop.

"It is simply ridiculous," she said. "Why, you have given them [illegible] when they had already received at the time of their marriage more than they were entitled to. It is not fair to me or to yourself or to your other children. You cannot afford it, you are not Rockefeller. This extravagance has got to stop right now."

Mrs. Vanderbilt is having her husband's house at Fifty second street and Fifth avenue done over in a most beautiful and expensive manner and [illegible] great social campaign. Consequently she needs [illegible] husband's money. The result of her action was that when the Marlboroughs asked for another $200,000 to complete the furnishing of Sunderland House they were told that they could not have it and that they should be more economical. The Duke was furious.

"Your father is a vulgar old miser," said the Duke.

The Duchess retorted hotly and they had their bitterest quarrel up to that time.

Last year the Duke revealed his cruelty in a new form. The Duchess began to suffer an acute pain in the throat and ear [illegible] of an injury she had received when she fell from her pony as a child. When she complained about her suffering he intimated that he thought she was [illegible].

"You American women are always whining about your bogus ailments," he snarled.

The pain and the behavior of her husband so upset the poor Duchess that she came to America on a visit to her mother. During this visit she underwent an operation on the Eustachian tube of her left ear by Dr. Holbrook Curtis, which entirely removed her trouble.

Sneers and insults were not the only injuries the Duchess had to endure from her husband. She found more and more cause to complain of his attentions to other women. There is a certain young American woman, famous as an international beauty, whom the Duchess has aided in her social career to an extraordinary degree. This girl has been an almost constant visitor at the Duchess's house, and recently she was [illegible] to [illegible] friend [illegible] size, although [illegible] at first [illegible] the Duke was flirting with her.

[illegible] was his conduct with [illegible] English [illegible] who enjoys a scarlet reputation [illegible] husband recently assaulted [illegible] in the Turf Club, in London. [illegible] actually gave an entertainment at Blenheim [illegible] absence of the Duchess, at which this [illegible] the principal guest.

The [illegible] lost her temper completely and a violent [illegible] quarrel between the two [illegible] suited [illegible] that she would leave the [illegible] and to [illegible] scandal he went away [illegible] rarely [illegible] the Duke was really frightened when his wife's temper was thoroughly aroused.

Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt hurried over to act as peacemaker. W[illegible] daughter told him of the long list of insults, sneers, cruelties and meannesses to which she had been [illegible] he promised to support her in any [illegible] she wished to take against the Duke. Finally they met the Duke to discuss the situation.

"I must have a separation," said the Duchess. "I will not live with that man."

"Very well," said the Duke. "I have no objection to a separation. Of course, I shall have to keep the entire income from the marriage settlement, in order to keep up the estates and bring up the children."

"Not a penny, sir! Not one penny after your abominable treatment of my daughter!" said Mr. Vanderbilt, raising his voice in indignation and shaking his finger at the Duke, who stood with stolid indifference with his hands in his pockets.

The result of [illegible] controversy was a compromise by which the [illegible] retained the bulk of the income and the custody of the children. The Duke received only sufficient to enable him to keep up Blenheim Palace in a [illegible] He is really little better off than before he was married. He [illegible] whatever to Sunderland House and [illegible] treasures and can keep none of the [illegible] presented to his wife by Mr. Vanderbilt [illegible] marriage.

The present position of the Duke of Marlborough seems a case of poetic justice. He was [illegible] less and every gift of fortune was [illegible] He was an ill-tempered churl, and a lover [illegible] till her heart. She tried to arouse [illegible] he always met her kindness with [illegible] until at last, in spite of all her efforts [illegible] bringing on himself the punishment [illegible] served. To-day he stands before the world [illegible] discredited man.

Several observers before this have [illegible] true situation in the Marlborough household [illegible] was the great painter, Sargent. He [illegible] portrait without revealing some startling [illegible] to the great surprise of the sitter [illegible] a wonderful portrait of the Marlborough [illegible] Academy last year. In it he told [illegible] words could have done the secret of [illegible] the meanness of the Duke and the [illegible] physical superiority of the Duchess.

The Duke has been skilfully posed [illegible] small and insignificant, and, although [illegible] house and lineal possessor of the name [illegible] aside in the shadow of a mature co[illegible] size. His obscurity in national affairs and his inconspicuous figure as a public man, the Duke has been placed on a low step, his weak leaning figure gently supported on the ducal sword. In contrast the painter has given the Duchess the centre of the canvas, raising her figure strong and inspiring above all the rest of the group. To still further unfold his story Sargent has ingeniously made his groupings record the domestic relations of the Marlborough household.

The canvas is about twelve feet in height by eight in width, and the background for the group is an alcove in Blenheim Palace. The costume of the Duke of Marlborough is a dark blue velvet mantle, with the collar and other insignia of the Order of the Garter. [illegible] Duchess of Marlborough, her head high above her shoulders, fills the middle of the picture.

[illegible] Sargent has lent the carmine of a flower [illegible] carmine, perhaps, a most expensive pigment, [illegible] duchesses. And then there [illegible] two [illegible] Van Dyck costumes.

Other International Marriage Wrecks.

[illegible] matrimonial disaster of the Marlboroughs is [illegible] without parallel. In the last few months [illegible] more international [illegible] have turned [illegible] and a procession of sadly disillusioned [illegible] heiresses have come home broken hearted [illegible] the most notable [illegible] next in interest to [illegible] Marlboroughs is the wretched domestic life of [illegible] The divorce suit of Countess Anna [illegible] Castellane is now in the French courts, and [illegible] fresh in the public mind.

[illegible] among other recent cases is that of [illegible] beautiful and unfortunate Countess De Rilly. [illegible] divorce was the only Chicago one that became [illegible] subject of international correspondence and [illegible] the aid of the diplomats of two countries.

[illegible] Countess was the lovely Sophie Kolotronis, of [illegible] ancestry, Greek features and large American [illegible] when she met Count Paul De Rilly. Both had [illegible] presented at the court of King George of [illegible] and the King, accustomed to all of the [illegible] standards of beauty, ancient and modern, in [illegible] pronounced the Greek American maiden the [illegible] beautiful woman he had ever seen, and asserted [illegible] he believed her to be the most beautiful woman [illegible] world. Some of the women of the Greek court [illegible] the Count to be a direct descendant of Achilles, others exclaimed when they saw him, "A Greek god come to life."

The maiden who had so attracted the men, and the young man who had so charmed the women of the Greek court met, fell in love—at least the maiden fell in love—and were married.

Almost immediately afterward, the Countess, suing for her freedom in the Chicago courts, declared the nature of the descendant of Achilles changed from that of an assiduous admirer and ardent lover to a negligent husband and an admirer of the charms of every one of her sex except herself. He taunted her with being "low born," because she was an American and possessed no title except what he had given her.

At breakfast at a table in a Paris hotel she says he shouted:

You have the manners of a clod. You eat like a pig."

The amazed Countess says she at first believed that her handsome Count had been obsessed by an evil spirit. She tried to engage physicians to cure his drunkenness. If that devil were cast out of him, she hoped that the rest of the train would follow. But physician after physician declared he could not accomplish this miracle.

"Your husband, he ees not [illegible] He [illegible] one big devil," declared [illegible] specialist.

Slowly the unhappy [illegible] came to agree with the physicians. [illegible] years after their marriage the Count deserted [illegible] She wrote him, begging that he spare her the [illegible] of scandal and asking him to return and preserve the semblance of a happy marriage. In reply came this letter, which was [illegible] hurried style of the court clerk [illegible]

> Dear Madam: It is useless [illegible] as we are. I [illegible] [illegible] whatever you choose. I am [illegible] where I am [illegible] You had better [illegible] friends [illegible] Yours very [illegible] DE RILLY.

Accepting with many tears this definite hint, the deserted Countess went to the court and brought suit for divorce. It was an unusually tedious process for Chicago, for after the court of that city granted the decree it was necessary, since Count De Rilly was not an American citizen, but "a Greek god come to life," that the Greek consul to Chicago sign and certify to the decree. The decree was then sent to the American Minister to Greece, who attested to its legality. It was next presented to the Greek Minister of Justice for certification. Then it was presented to King George for approval, which he granted with a regretful sigh, for he had been a guest of honor at the wedding in Paris a few years before. Last it was brought to the [illegible] head of the Greek Church. While all [illegible] diplomatic steps were being taken the [illegible] had ample time to be wooed and won [illegible] plan as his name, which is Schroeder [illegible] the Countess De Rilly says it is [illegible] European title she ever heard, [illegible] an honest, lasting American marriage.

Brutal Codes of Foreign Aristocrats.

Another warning to the American girl willing to barter her fortune and [illegible] face for a mouldy, overgrown title is the [illegible] Countess Bernard de Pourtales. Ten years ago Miss Florence Drouillard, of Nashville, Tenn., was dazzled by the chance to become a countess. [illegible] lived in Paris, [illegible] American [illegible] the first as [illegible] Castellane, and [illegible] the [illegible] inability to adapt herself to the code of Paris society. Count Roger de Martimprey resented an affront offered by Count Pourtales [illegible] Countess in public. Count Pourtales [illegible] resented the interference and challenged Count de Martimprey to a duel. The Countess secured a divorce [illegible] Count de Martimprey has offered [illegible] his name [illegible] Count de Martimprey's mamma forbids [illegible] to a divorcee. The society of the French capital, which tolerates so much, [illegible] with [illegible] eyes of disfavor upon divorce. In Paris divorce is regarded as bad form.

The Countess de [illegible] secured the St. Louis [illegible] to restore her the [illegible] original name Miss [illegible] Furst. The Count [illegible] de Penalosa is a Spanish nobleman who was received in [illegible] and afterward in St. Louis society. He paid court from the day of his arrival in St. Louis, to Miss Furst, the daughter of [illegible] who lived in [illegible] fashionable [illegible] of that city. They were married in Paris [illegible] years ago but four years afterward she returned to her father's home, a broken-hearted woman. [illegible] Count [illegible] was grossly extravagant and [illegible] When she refused him money he [illegible] and thrust her out of the house and into the street in her [illegible] clothes. When the two girls discard their ball gowns and their afternoon teas in Denver, Canon City, or wherever they may be for the season, they are off for a good time in the Gunnison camp and they go prepared to "rough it" in the true sense. There's nothing finicky about their ideas of comfort.

When out for fish Miss Lily—that was—dons a pair of hip boots and wades into the [illegible] of the swift [illegible] stream. One must be sure-footed as well as eagle-eyed in order to successfully [illegible] these mountain streams. It is no "fish" story to aver of the Misses Ball that they have returned to their camp with baskets filled with rainbow trout of the largest species, when many experts accustomed to all the wiles and caprices of the trout have come back empty handed.

It is a fact, anyway, that "Miss Lily" [illegible] record for catching fish on the Gunnison River, and this is enough to say for her ability as an expert at [illegible] for the Gunnison River is a Mecca of [illegible] trout fishermen.

The young ladies knew no greater bliss than to accompany their father on [illegible] trips. These are generally undertaken on horseback and they are not excursions on silken cushions. They attire themselves in their corduroy trousers, [illegible] coats and caps and pick their way through the tangled underbrush as easily as [illegible] experienced mountaineer. It had been [illegible] of the young couple to be wedded [illegible] Hotel in Denver. But just a few days before the date set for the wedding the plucky young woman was stricken with a severe attack of [illegible] This [illegible] her taking to her bed and the rearrangement of all the plans.

"You may say I'm superstitious if you wish," she declared, "but I'm not going to [illegible] my wedding. As well think of postponing a trout fishing when the morning's overcast."

So, on the date set for the ceremony Miss Ball crept out from her bed, had herself dressed [illegible] by her sister Nannie, at [illegible] the bridegroom and [illegible] and the minister, she went through the responses with a gulp in her throat.

Just as soon as the ordeal was over the bride withdrew and [illegible] to her bed, where she settled [illegible] and fight grimly a very serious sickness.

Copper Is a Profitable Investment.

One Copper mine that cost $1,200,000 paid in one year $10,000,000 in dividends [illegible] paid over $2[illegible] while no railroad in the United States has ever paid back its original cost.

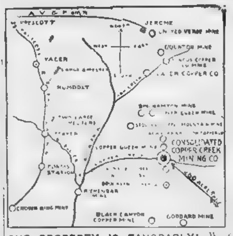
Investment in Copper Stocks Offers the Safety of a Government Bond with the Speculative Element of a Gold Mine



OUR PROPERTY IS FAVORABLY LOCATED IN THE HEART OF A GREAT COPPER DISTRICT.

The Consolidated Copper Creek Mining Company's property is located in Yavapai County, fifty miles South east of Prescott and twenty four miles South of Jerome, Arizona, and in the same range with the great United Verde mine, which pays $5,000,000 in dividends yearly to its stockholders. The Crown King Mine, a great producer, just West, has produced hundreds of thousands of dollars. The Richenbar, which pays good dividends, is near us. North, South and West of our property are located mines of [illegible] limited value, as well as the smelters, plants to handle their output. At Humboldt and Mayer are located three independent smelters, with a capacity to handle the entire output of the district. Cordes, our railroad station, is but 20 miles West of us, and it is from that point, when connected by the completion of a good wagon road, we will deliver our output and receive freight.

We have 280 acres with Copper ore sticking out on every claim, and a ten foot shaft has been sunk on Copper lodes on each claim. All this shows the presence of an enormous Copper deposit. In short, beyond the possibility of doubt, there is Copper ore on the Company's land sufficient to keep an enormous plant running for [illegible] We [illegible] believe there is any such showing of Copper as this property and this district [illegible] anywhere else on the American continent. The great United Verde, the mine of Senator Clark, is some 24 miles north of us [illegible] Its main workings consist of [illegible] 40 acres. It did not begin to have the surface showing our property has, and it is turning out over 40,000,000 pounds a year.

More than [illegible] Copper Creek, the greatest [illegible] water supply in the district, runs through our property for 1,800 feet, and as water is absolutely essential, its value cannot [illegible]

[illegible] offer you a [illegible] proposition [illegible] we are actually [illegible] concentrator of 300 tons capacity as [illegible] as it can be erected for an indefinite period. Unless every geological sign fails, within two years, with [illegible] we should be mining ore enough [illegible] a 5,000 ton concentrator for [illegible]

We have had assays from four of these [illegible] with the following results of pure [illegible] 14 4-10 per cent, 17 7-10 per cent, 23 7-10 per cent, 30 6-10 per cent.

These were selected samples and we are frank to say that no such ore exists in the deep workings of copper mines. On the property adjoining, however, on a vein [illegible] at a depth of [illegible] feet ore was taken out which cannot be distinguished from the ore at the 400 and 500 feet levels in the United Verde Copper mine, which runs 6 per cent in copper. This is above the average of the ore of the world's greatest producers, the famous Anaconda producing ore which [illegible] only a little over 3 per cent.

[illegible] per cent ore will produce [illegible] per day net profit [illegible] to erect a concentrator of 1,000 [illegible] profit of over $20,000 a year [illegible] of over $7,500,000.

[illegible] will give you dividends on your [illegible] of 300 per cent on your investment [illegible] 5 times your money back in each year! Does this startle you? Our [illegible] Senator Clark, is clearing over [illegible] each year, working 40 acres, 24 [illegible] in the same range.

[illegible] paying copper mining stock sells on the market at about ten times the [illegible] pays in yearly dividends. This [illegible] therefore, on the above estimate, which you can get to-day at only 15 CENTS A SHARE [illegible] on the market at [illegible] times what you [illegible]

[illegible] would be worth [illegible] 2,500
[illegible] would be worth [illegible] 4,000
[illegible] would be worth [illegible] 15,000
[illegible] would be worth [illegible] 30,000

$100 invested in Wolverine in 1893 is now worth $6,000.
$100 invested in [illegible] Arizona in 1902 is now worth $10,000.

ARIZONA LEADS THE WORLD IN COPPER MINES

Beyond a doubt Arizona has underneath her soil larger, richer deposits of Copper than any other section of the world. The ancient Spaniards and the Indians were known to [illegible] knew how to utilize [illegible] mined and smelted it. To-day this territory is dotted here and there with working mines which produce millions upon millions of dollars' worth of Copper, and in many places prospecting has revealed many more [illegible] grass, widening out as it goes downward. The [illegible] of this district are [illegible] with [illegible] Copper ore [illegible] exists nowhere else in the world.

OUR BIG ADVANTAGES OVER OTHER GREAT COPPER MINES

All the large Copper mines that we have quoted have had [illegible] from one to four million dollars in smelting plants. There are THREE large independent smelters within hauling distance of our property, obviating all necessity on our part of this tremendous outlay of money. Therefore, all we need to do is to concentrate our ore, an inexpensive process, haul the concentrates to the smelter and there receive our money. [illegible] practically in the same position that these other large Copper mines attained only after the expenditure of millions. [illegible] this company OWNS ALL OF ITS PROPERTY free and clear, IT DOES NOT OWE A CENT.

The stock is non-assessable and full paid. There is no preferred stock or bonds. All stock shares alike.

No salaried officers until dividends are paid.

The Officers and Board of Directors of the Consolidated Copper Creek Mining Co. are all [illegible] business men [illegible] Their rugged honesty stands as a safe protection to your interests.

Price of Stock Now 15c a Share, Par Value $1

The executive and finance committee of the Consolidated Copper Creek Mining Company has authorized the sale of a limited amount of treasury stock at 15c. a share. Par value of this stock is $1.00 a share, and we believe that within one year it will be worth a dollar a share on the markets of the world, nor will it stop there. A good Copper stock will rise and rise till the owners become dizzy; there seems hardly any limit to its valuation. As our shafts go down this stock will go up in value. We, therefore, reserve the right to advance the price without notice. If you are wise, buy stock now and thus secure the benefit of future advances in price

OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN

We have planned for improvements and machinery which would take some time to complete and install. Therefore the money will not be needed all at once; and the Directors, realizing that it will be advantageous to Investors and to the Company to sell stock on an easy payment plan, have decided to accept subscriptions 10 per cent down and the balance in nine equal monthly payments.

100 shares will cost you $1.50 down and $1.50 per month for 9 months; estimated value on 1,000-ton production $750.00.

300 shares will cost you $4.50 down and $4.50 per month for 9 months, estimated value on 1,000-ton production $2,250.00.

600 shares will cost you $9.00 down and $9.00 per month for 9 months; estimated value on 1,000-ton production $4,500.00.

WHY WE SELL STOCK.

We have a great property, but we need the money to develop it. If a farmer owned a quarter section of land and had only a spade to cultivate it with, it would take years of toil for him to get money enough to buy proper machinery to work it to advantage. So it is with a mine. If we went to a capitalist he would demand the lion's share, but we believe that the American people will be glad to come in with us and help us to make this property the greatest copper mine on the continent. So we go to YOU, relying on your judgment and sound common sense, and ask YOU to join with us, [illegible] share and share alike, in this great enterprise. With YOUR aid we should make a second United Verde of this property. With unity there is hardly any limit to what can be accomplished. The day will come when you will be proud to be a stockholder in the Consolidated Copper Creek Mining Company.

Write To-day---Or, Better, Telegraph---Ordering Number of Shares You Desire.

At the rate subscriptions are coming in the present allotment will not last long. The price will then advance, and its rise should be rapid and permanent. No order will be received for less than 100 shares. Should you at any time desire to discontinue payments on your stock, the Company will issue a certificate for the amount you have paid.

For Afternoon Calls Or For Church

Trained Skirts, High-Waisted Bodices, Empire Effects and Three-Quarter Length Sleeves Are Features of New Afternoon Gowns.

By Mrs Osborn
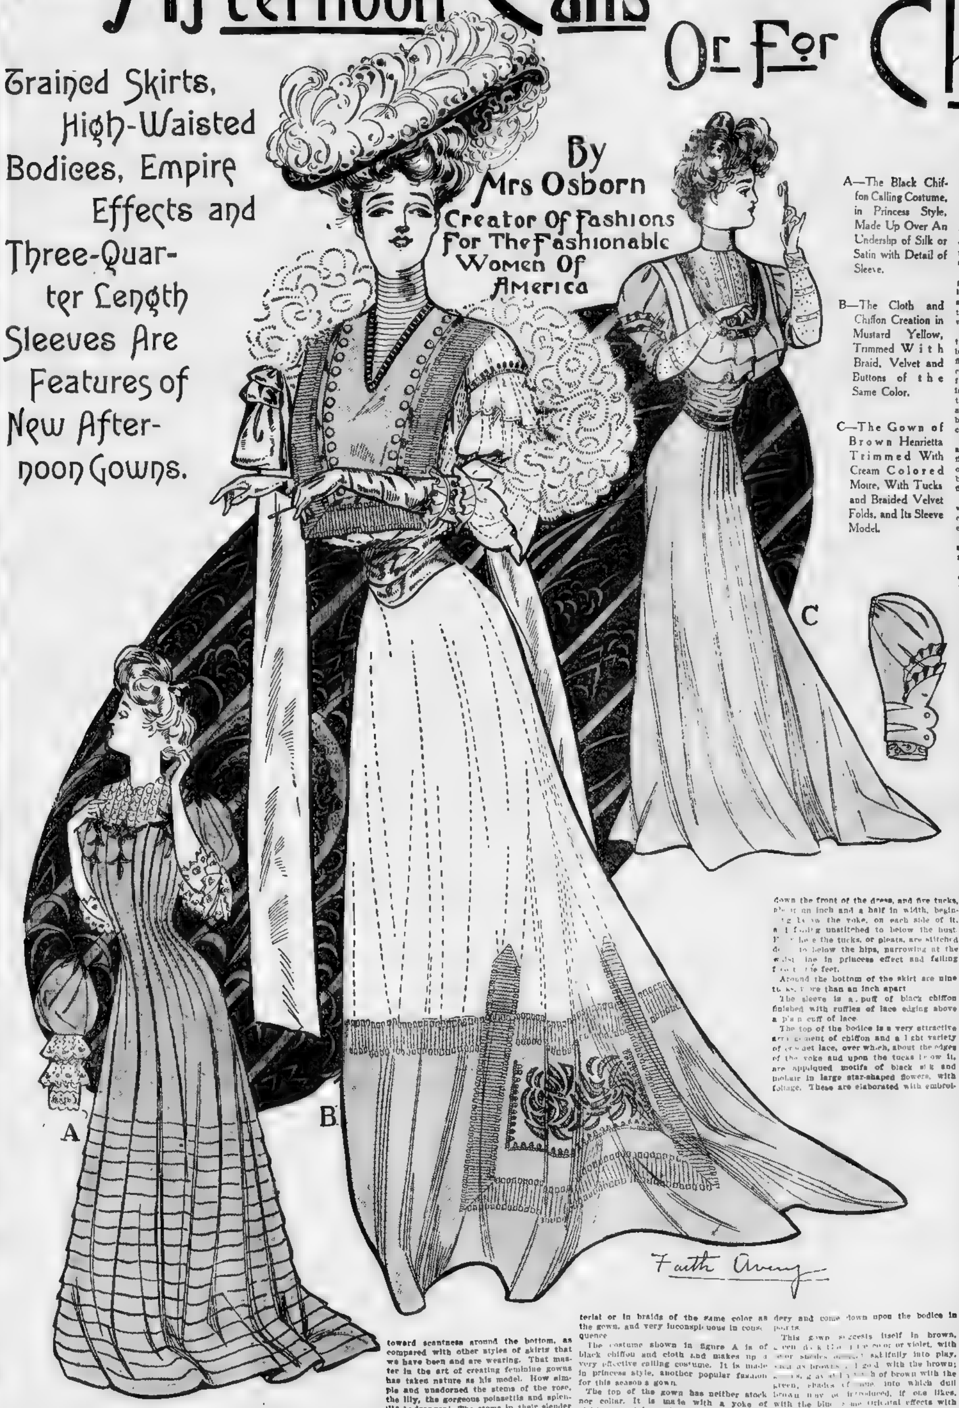
Creator Of Fashions For The Fashionable Women Of America



A—The Black Chiffon Calling Costume, in Princess Style, Made Up Over An Undership of Silk or Satin with Detail of Sleeve.

B—The Cloth and Chiffon Creation in Mustard Yellow, Trimmed With Braid, Velvet and Buttons of the Same Color.

C—The Gown of Brown Henrietta Trimmed With Cream Colored Moire, With Tucks and Braided Velvet Folds, and Its Sleeve Model.

EVERY woman is extremely particular about the make and quality of her afternoon gowns, and the less money she has the more particular she is in seeing that the afternoon gown is all that it should be, because, in such case, it must be pressed into service for the matinee, for quiet luncheons and for church wear.

The afternoon gown is scanned in the full glare of day, that brings out vividly every thread of its quality and every virtue or defect in its style. It is a garment far more open to criticism than either a morning or evening gown. Neither is as important.

The tendency of the ultra chic afternoon gown is to follow the lines brought out and idealized by Paquin. These are distinctly Empire and modified Empire in build. Since the Empire gown, pure and simple, is manifestly unbecoming to the majority of women, it follows that the modified Empire has the greater vogue. The favorite style in this has an Empire back and straight front, and this model is built in all sorts of pretty variations and cunning devices in bodice and girdle to give an original look to the gown.

The afternoon gown presupposes a carriage to convey one about, so that it follows the skirt is made with a train, and these trains are somewhat longer than they have been heretofore.

High-waisted bodices are another feature of the afternoon gown of this season, and, oh, what charming confections of lace, picked out with chenille and embroidery, velvet, chiffon and embroidered dress material they are! Such old-world pictures as some of the women manage to make of themselves, in high-waisted Empire bodices and Directoire coats that are absolutely bewitching and that convey, with the aroma of a past century, the air of being quite the very latest thing in Paris and in New York.

The tendency of the strictly Paquin skirt is toward plainess. Also, at present, toward scantness around the bottom, as compared with other styles of skirts that we have been and are wearing. That master in the art of creating feminine gowns has taken nature as his model. How simple and unadorned the stems of the rose, the lily, the gorgeous poinsettia and splendid hydrangea! The stems in their slender simplicity are a foil to the glory of the blossoms they support. And so Paquin makes a bodice or a coat that accentuates and enhances, and often supplies, every beauty in the woman who wears it. This lovely garment seems to melt softly into the long, graceful sweep of the skirt. The woman blossoms like a flower in loveliness and suggests all the grace of one.

This is an eclectic season, however, and a woman may wear her gowns as much trimmed or as little adorned as she pleases. Good taste and good art would suggest to any sensible woman the advisability of letting her trimmings blend into her gowns, enriching their appearance, but not destroying their lines.

In the matter of plain afternoon skirts with trains, the question of a finish for the bottom often comes up. It is much the vogue to finish the bottoms of skirts with "blind" hems and facings, and some of them are quietly decorated with Wall of Troy designs worked out in the material or in braids of the same color as the gown, and very inconspicuous in consequence.

The costume shown in figure A is of black chiffon and cloth and makes up a very effective calling costume. It is made in princess style, another popular fashion for this season's gown.

The top of the gown has neither stock nor collar. It is made with a yoke of eight rows of lace edging joined vertically and coming high on the neck.

There is a plain narrow panel effect down the front of the dress, and five tucks, about an inch and a half in width, beginning below the yoke, on each side of it, and falling unstitched to below the bust. From here the tucks, or pleats, are stitched down to below the hips, narrowing at the waist line in princess effect and falling free to the feet.

The sleeve is a puff of black chiffon finished with ruffles of lace edging above a plain cuff of lace.

The top of the bodice is a very attractive arrangement of chiffon and a light variety of crochet lace, over which, about the edges of the yoke and upon the tucks below it, are appliqued motifs of black silk and mohair in large star-shaped flowers, with foliage. These are elaborated with embroidery and come down upon the bodice in points.

This gown suggests itself in brown, green, dark blue, [illegible] color or violet, with color shades [illegible] skilfully into play, such as brown and gold with the brown; [illegible] gray with a touch of brown with the green, shades of blue into which dull brown may be introduced, if one likes, with the blue; some Oriental effects with the [illegible] and mauves and cream color with the violet. Mauve and light blue can also be effectively used with green.

Crepe-de-chines, veilings, henriettas, soft silks and similar soft and rather thin materials would all make up effectively in this model of gown.

For a person going into mourning this gown could have crape in place of lace, and crape folds or a Greek design in crape around the bottom. According to its elaboration of bodice and sleeve, the model could be made up for morning, house, afternoon or evening wear, a decolletage being necessary in the latter case, and but little sleeve being necessary.

Figure B illustrates a most admirable gown in the popular shade of yellow which is on the mustard tint. It also shows an attractive method of handling a combination of cloth and chiffon—a fad which is very popular now and quite effective.

A chiffon bodice has a stock and V-shaped tucker of tucked chiffon, bordered with braid. The bodice is made with a smoothly-fitted shield-shaped front of cloth over a chiffon blouse and wide silk girdle. This front is cut square across the bottom and is trimmed along the inner edges with buttons. It hangs like a bolero in front and has a border of velvet and an outer border of wide braid. The combination of cloth, velvet and braid is very effective.

The top of the sleeve is of chiffon with an armlet of embroidery above two plain flounces of chiffon that hang above a puff of the same. A cuff of cloth is heavily embroidered and has a ruffle at the top. It is finished with a chiffon ruffle.

A full skirt of chiffon hangs to the knees where it is finished with a deep flounce of cloth headed by braid. Panels of braid and embroidery are arranged upon the sides.

The embroidery upon this flounce is heavy and is in dark and light mustard shades mingled very artistically.

This gown, too, lends itself admirably to other colors and materials and would look well made up in all black, which is very fashionable at present.

Brown henrietta is the material of which the gown in Figure C is built. Its stock collar and tucker are of chiffon in pin tucks, with a ruffle of lace on each side, a band of pin tucks down the front.

Heavy lace borders this tucker on each side. A fitted bodice is draped over by a deep bertha or front and shield-shaped back, which forms a distinctive feature of the dress. In front the bertha drapery is cut out at the top in a deep curve, but in the back it comes quite high and forms a V at the neck. Next to the chemisette or tucker it is bordered by two velvet bands braided with soutache and separating in front to show cream white moire between them.

The drapery passes over the shoulder in two folds and has almost the fulness of a ruffle in front, where it hangs square and apparently loose, although it is tacked to the bodice underneath. Four large fancy buttons trim the velvet folds in front.

As the folds of the draped piece pass over the shoulder in the back they have a fitted centre, with two folds down each side, like pleats, hanging so as to give an almost square effect to the back. A pretty feature of the back is the turning up on each side the back of the girdle of the corners of these pleats, each corner being held down by a row of small buttons.

A broad, draped girdle of henrietta has two rows of velvet around the bottom. These are braided with soutache and open in front to show the cream colored moire between them.

Two narrow, crescent-shaped ruffles stand upward across the outside of the sleeve puff, and inside the elbow are two inserted pieces of white moire.

Back of the elbow a cuff arrangement is finished with scallops, a button fastening down each scallop. Heavy lace forms a border to this cuff, below which is a deep cuff of chiffon and net inserting, put on full and finished at the bottom with a ruffle of transparent lace over one of a heavy variety.

A plain skirt is trained and has a narrow panel down the front outlined by three narrow pleats on each side. These are stitched at the top to make the skirt set well over the hips, and from there they fall loose, mingling with the folds of a full skirt.

Bias folds are so popular and so much used in various styles of trimmings that one is always safe in employing them, whether to frame panels, put on in fancy designs or to use in the simple parallel lines of trimming with which we are all so familiar. The bias fold saves many a trimming problem for the woman of small means, since she is thus enabled to save quite a good deal upon the trimmings of her gowns.

Diaphanous gowns, too, solve the trimming problem by admitting flounces, which may be further embellished with ruchings and little frills as well as with knife-pleatings, a form of trimming of which one sees a good deal.

Flounces are not in good form on gowns of heavier materials except when used ungathered to carry out some plan of drapery or when put on in the novel style of sections in the front and back on separate lines from each other. This is one of the freaks in dress which the season has brought out and which looks well on certain persons, but it is not a style which I would unreservedly commend.

But there was no letter from Philip in the little pile; there was not even a postcard. There was a bill for [illegible], a prospectus of the Savoy Club, a notice from the Serpentine Swimming Club, an invitation to a private show at the [illegible] Gallery and [illegible] for a picture [illegible] rates [illegible] His Majesty [illegible] a note [illegible] Josephine [illegible] appointment [illegible] conditionally, one from his tailors saying that they would be glad if he could give them [illegible] a matter of fitting a dress suit recently ordered, and a mystery [illegible] from his sister, Mrs. Appleby.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Platter

On reading the last he interrupted the feast to explain to Oxwich.

"Mrs. Appleby is coming to lunch," he murmured in a voice of many resignation.

"Certainly, sir. But this is your Turkish bath day."

"I must leave [illegible] to-morrow."

"Certainly, sir. But to-morrow is your [illegible] lesson, the dress suit try-on and the new chauffeur to [illegible]."

Tony stroked a wayward fragment of porridge from the lapel of his olive silk dressing gown.

"Oxwich," he said with an air of momentous decision, "I shan't be able to have my Turkish bath this week—that's the plain English of it."

"I fear so, sir."

"My nephew is coming for lunch, too," said Tony, apologetically.

"Master Horace, sir?" Oxwich was obviously pained.

"Well, I haven't got forty nephews. Yes, Master Horace."

"Perhaps I had better look up the cigar[illegible], sir?"

"Yes. Now about lunch——"

"Yes, sir. Now about lunch."

The important question about lunch was at the very point of being discussed when the third shock happened to Sir Anthony, and this third shock was so powerful that the important question of Monday's lunch never was discussed at all. It was forgotten, [illegible], adjourned sine die. A servant entered the dining room to say that [illegible] wanted to speak to Sir Anthony.

"Go and see, Oxwich," Tony ordered.

And the Grand Vizier departed to in[illegible] to the visitor the extent of the visitor's absurdity in wishing to see Sir Anthony at a quarter to nine in the morning.

Sir Anthony addressed himself to the [illegible] invented descriptive advertisements [illegible] Times newspaper, which at that [illegible] were enjoying a greater success in [illegible] and mansions than anything since the lamented death of De Blowitz.

[illegible] returned almost immediately.

"It's a man with a silver salver, Sir Anthony."

"What do I want with a silver salver?"

"It isn't exactly silver, sir—I should say it's Britannia ware."

"And if it is?"

"[illegible] some writing scratched on it [illegible] it's for you, and he aint going to give it to nobody but you, as he says, [illegible]" Oxwich's imitations of popular [illegible] were apt to be somewhat stiff.

"Who is the man?"

"He's a waterman, Sir Anthony—something to do with the Thames, I believe."

"Devilish odd, isn't it?"

"I should venture respectfully to advise you to see him, sir." Oxwich coughed.

The man was brought into the presence. He was a fat person. His blue suit and silver buttons would have shown to the expert that he was in the employ of the state [illegible] section of the Customs department, and his easy demeanor sufficed to [illegible] that he was a freeman of the water company. He carried under his arm [illegible] enveloped in a portion of the [illegible] a salver or platter of some [illegible] resembling silver.

"[illegible] sir," he said, gently swinging [illegible] "I found this in my boat this [illegible] I come up here at once [illegible] Poplar, and it'll cost me half a [illegible] train fare and [illegible] and a penny, sir. I found it at [illegible] seven this [illegible] half [illegible]"

He handed the salver to Tony.

"You see there's something scratched [illegible] sir," he added.

The salver was beat across the middle. [illegible] turned it round, and gradually deciphered the following words, which had [illegible] scratched on it, partly in [illegible] letters and partly in script by [illegible] of some sharp instrument:

"Take this Sir Anthony Didring Devonshire Mansion London will reward am captured I think [illegible] Grand Etang but —"

That was all.

[illegible] muttered the message aloud several times, examined every inch of the salver in a kind of dazed manner, and then passed it to Oxwich, who, flattered, [illegible] at the [illegible] face of his [illegible].

"W[illegible]?" Tony questioned.

"[illegible] put a full stop after 'London,' another after 'reward,' and another after 'captured,'" Oxwich decided. "The writer was interrupted."

"But—"

"Mr. Masters, sir."

"You think so?"

"Without a doubt, sir."

"So do I. But Grand Etang, what does that mean?"

"I don't know, sir. Perhaps this person can tell us."

"What is Grand Etang [illegible]?" Tony asked the waterman.

He possibly objected to being Tony's man or Oxwich's person, and saw in the terms an insult to the honorable company to which he belonged. At any rate he replied distantly, "[illegible] sir."

"Where [illegible] found the thing?"

"I say I found [illegible] boat, sir."

"And where was [illegible]?"

"My boat was lying off Green's wharf, Poplar, sir."

"Had it [illegible] long?"

"All night, sir."

"Perhaps I [illegible] make a note of this person's statements, sir," Oxwich whispered [illegible] and his master nodded. Oxwich [illegible] a notebook like a policeman [illegible] policeman he drew it out. [illegible] 'reward'" scratched on the platter [illegible] the waterman from [illegible].

"And [illegible] your boat at half-past seven [illegible]?"

"Yes, sir. A[illegible] seven."

"And the platter was lying in the boat?"

"It was lying in the sternsheets against the tiller."

"You might ask him what time he left the boat [illegible] sir," Oxwich murmured.

"I was [illegible]. What time did you leave the [illegible] my man?"

"I didn't leave it last night. I left it at 1 o'clock this [illegible]"

"So that [illegible] have put the platter in your b[illegible] between 1 o'clock and 7 30 th[illegible]"

"Yo[illegible] [illegible] out like that, sir."

"You [illegible]. Who put it in?"

"No[illegible] [illegible] or 'im." And the waterman [illegible] head toward Oxwich. "It [illegible] dropped in from the [illegible]"

"[illegible] ship," Oxwich whispered.

The waterman [illegible]

"[illegible] dropped in from a [illegible]"

"What [illegible] up to a wharf? You don't think as a ship is a blessed hansom cab [illegible] goes about grazing [illegible] last post [illegible] No! There was, however, [illegible] lying off the wharf, and [illegible] side of her, between her and the [illegible]."

"Then [illegible] think the platter was dropped off [illegible] into your boat?"

"I never [illegible] things as ain't my affair. I [illegible] the Customs. But I don't say [illegible] platter wasn't dropped out o' [illegible]"

"If I [illegible] a remark, sir," Oxwich put in, "[illegible] was more probably dropped [illegible] than from the wharf. Assuming [illegible] gentleman who wished the salver [illegible] to have been on the wharf, why should he have chosen to drop it into a boat? He was on dry land, and could have done all sorts of things. Whereas if he was on the ship his choice was [illegible] in fact strictly limited."

"Moreover," said the waterman, "I don't [illegible] as the portholes o' that there ship [illegible] pretty small, and I don't say as a [illegible] have been [illegible] this platter, as it [illegible] to shove it [illegible] one of them [illegible]. If he did he had a fist on [illegible]"

"Mr. Masters was possessed of ex[illegible] physical force, sir," added Oxwich.

"It is plain," said Tony, astounded by his own penetration, "that the platter was dropped off the ship into your boat."

"Especially as it's a ship's platter," said the waterman.

"The ship is still there?" Tony resumed his examination.

"[illegible] she is she's put back," the waterman [illegible]. "She cast off at five o'clock this morning, according to what I'm told."

"What kind of a ship was she?"

"She wasn't no kind of a ship, to speak [illegible] sir. No class. She was an old tub as called herself a steam [illegible]. Belfast built, [illegible] three hundred ton. Been on the [illegible] yard for two year or more."

"What is her name?"

"The White Rose, sir."

"[illegible] someone has [illegible] her recently?"

"Or bought her. There's [illegible] enough on Thames' side. Gawd knows."

"You don't know who?"

"I don't know nothing [illegible] And, if it's' all the same [illegible] I must be going, sir. I've got [illegible] noon. And if the party as is scribbling wants my name he can have it, and address." He touched his forehead to [illegible].

"Well, my man, here's [illegible] for your trouble," said the [illegible] after the waterman had imparted the [illegible] of his identity.

"Thank you, sir," said the waterman, gloomily. "That'll leave me six [illegible] and eleven, not to mention as there's my fares back again. Say fifteen shillings for me when all's paid. Well" ——

Tony was of an extreme[illegible] generous disposition. He saw at once that, having regard to the peculiarity of the case, he had perhaps [illegible] in this instance; but like most generous people he was rendered utterly [illegible] of stinginess. He stared at the waterman in haughty silence.

"Why, the platter's worth [illegible]," [illegible] the waterman, [illegible]. "And a [illegible]oo."

"Oxwich," said Sir Anthony when the [illegible] had gone, "we must [illegible] what Grand Etang means."

"Yes, sir. It's evidently the name of a [illegible], and sounds French [illegible] certainly means great, sir."

"Obviously, and I fancy that Etang means a pond or something of that kind. Bring me the Encyclopedia Britannica. That will tell us everything."

"Pardon me, sir. You [illegible] time to sell the Encyclopedia Britannica [illegible] some months ago [illegible] were [illegible] record [illegible] as three [illegible]. You said the work was out of date."

"Whom did you sell it to?"

"To myself, sir."

"Where is it?"

"In my pantry [illegible]. A supplement has been issued which I [illegible] to buy, as soon as I can."

"Lend it to me, will you?"

"With pleasure, sir."

In five minutes [illegible] were knee deep in the [illegible] Oxwich read out the index [illegible] Grand Have [illegible] Sir Anthony [illegible] E. Everything [illegible] the Encyclopedia Britannica [illegible]

The search [illegible] the door disheartened.

"Look here, Oxwich," said Sir Anthony, "Here we are [illegible] of [illegible] we want to know where Grand Etang is, and we can't! The idea is ridiculous."

"I have a friend who has the 'Times Atlas,' sir."

"Then get it for Heaven's sake."

While Oxwich went to obtain the Atlas, Sir Anthony sent another servant with his compliments to the Manager of the Mansion, and could the Manager of the Mansion inform Sir Anthony where Grand Etang was. The Manager of the Mansion, however, could not, but he promised vaguely to move in the matter. Then Oxwich returned perusing the index of the Atlas as he walked. He triumphed at the very instant of re-entering the room. There were two Grand Etangs in the index of the Atlas. But the triumph of Oxwich was brief, for both the Grand Etangs proved to be little inland spots in France—places to which not even an old tub of three hundred tons could possibly voyage.

"Oxwich," said Sir Anthony finally, "You must go up to the British Museum."

"Yes, sir," replied Oxwich in a voice of desperation.

At the moment Mrs. Appleby and her son Horace entered. Oxwich having been torn from his duties to the pursuit of learning these visitors had been allowed to come in without any ceremony or precautions.

"We've come early, so as to spend the day with you, darling," said Mrs. Appleby.

Sir Anthony stared desolately at the arrival.

"Grand Etang? It's something in Grenada, Uncle," answered the surprising child without the least hesitation, thus justifying his mother's estimate of his erudition. "It's either a mountain or a valley or a river or some thing of that kind. We had the West Indies last week in jography."

Sir Anthony precipitated himself upon the volumes containing G, and sought Grenada. Yes, surely, Grand Etang was there! Though given neither as a mountain nor a valley nor a river, but as an island lake, it was indubitably there! It had lain hidden in the Encyclopedia Britannica all morning, and its discovery was due to Horace alone.

"Oh, that's it! That's it right enough!" said Sir Anthony addressing Oxwich. "You remember the talk about the West Indies at the inquest! That's it."

"Then I needn't go to the British Museum, sir?"

"No."

It was a moment of unique pride for the mother of the astonishing Horace, who had made the British Museum unnecessary. Horace pulled peppermint out of his pocket and ate it boldly. He had earned the right to do so.

Oxwich bowed and was departing, when the door re-opened, and another visitor was shown in, still without any of the Oxwichian precautions. It was a veiled woman, who raised her veil as she entered. Oxwich himself blanched.

"You?" Sir Anthony exclaimed, staggered.

And Mary Pollexfen nodded. She then sank into a chair and went very pale.

Mrs. Appleby rose.

"Tony," said Mrs. Appleby, "this lady seems to [illegible]. Shall I—"

"No, thanks," said Mary Pollexfen. "I shall be all right in a few minutes."

"Tony," said Mrs. Appleby, with meaning. Her countenance was an exhibition of the most violent curiosity. "Tony," she repeated.

"Miss Geralda," Sir Anthony stammered, "let me make you acquainted with my sister, Mrs. Appleby. Mildred, this is Miss Geralda. No doubt you have heard her name."

Mrs. Appleby having thus by accident infringed upon the more romantic side of her brother's existence grew stiffer than ever. "Charmed," she said. "Are you quite sure you are not ill?"

"Why?" asked Mrs. Appleby, with an air of simplicity. "Why don't you go after the White Rose?"

This observation will by itself show how far this woman's invincible curiosity and talent for arranging the affairs of other people had carried her in the space of a few hours. She and Mary Pollexfen and Sir Anthony sat together in Sir Anthony's drawing room after the attorney was [illegible] himself at various [illegible] of the Devonshire Mansion [illegible] since the arrival of the [illegible] Mrs. Appleby [illegible] to become [illegible] of the first order, and behaved to Mary Pollexfen [illegible] been [illegible] outside [illegible] Mary [illegible] her head [illegible] a Mrs. Appleby [illegible] interview with the baronet [illegible] had so often and [illegible] of whom she despised nothing but his intelligence.

Mary's narrative of the events of the previous day [illegible] Mrs. Appleby [illegible] no intention of [illegible] had stimulated [illegible] agitation. He [illegible] through the stages of amazement [illegible] envy, and he was now at the [illegible] The wonderful [illegible] Mary Pollexfen and [illegible] begot in him a desire [illegible] wonderful himself [illegible] lived for many days in [illegible] as a man [illegible] than it startled [illegible] the most women of [illegible] was [illegible] naked, Mrs. Appleby had not pretended even to be startled.

The Queen of Spain's New "Magical Transformation" Fur Motor Wrap and Street Costume:

THE latest fashion in motoring costumes has just been completed by a well-known London house for the Queen of Spain. They aptly call it the Queen's "magical transformation" garment.

The outside is made of nutria beaver, the golden-tinted fur which experts predict will be the favorite of the season.

The coat reaches from the chin to the feet. It is lined with beaver-colored satin, and fastened with straps of biscuit-hued suede.

The long, circular skirt of the coat is detachable, and when removed leaves only a smart bolero coat, pouching over a pointed suede waist belt.

With the costume is a turban beaver toque presenting the appearance of a "granny" hood, or she may wear a detachable curtain of fur veiling the hair, and which tying under the chin protects the ears from the cold.

The outfit remedies the old difficulty of motor wraps, and will be gladly welcomed by the ardent motorist, who can nestle in her warm furs during a long drive, and on arriving at her destination can detach the fur skirt and fur hood and emerge in a smart walking costume.

The Queen of Spain, by the way, has become quite an authority on matters of dress—at least, she has her own ideas, which are often most attractive and adopted readily in Europe. The young Victoria has made up her mind that she, at least, will never in the future be referred to as "one of those dowdy English princesses."

So when Princess Victoria Eugenie, of Battenberg, niece of King Edward, learned that she was to join King Alfonso on the throne of Spain, she very sensibly studied how to make the most of herself. First she learned to dress to match her eyes and hair. Both are a shade of red or reddish brown. And the young Queen wears ox heart daisies—the kind with big, dark red centres. She twines them into a wreath for her hair, and she masses them into a corsage bouquet for her gown. She seldom is photographed without this big, handsome bunch of red-centred daisies. They are now the Court flower of Spain.

Another beauty rule is, "Don't crowd your throat. Most women crowd the throat with a dog collar, and bundle up the neck with tight-fitting bands of beads and velvet. But young Queen Victoria knows better. Though the possessor of all the Court jewels of Spain, she wears no high dog collar.

THE QUEEN WITH THE SKIRT THROWN OFF AND—IN A MINUTE IN WALKING COSTUME WITH THE TOP OF HER WRAP TRANSFORMED INTO A LITTLE BOLERO JACKET.

THE QUEEN IN HER FUR MOTOR WRAP SHOWING THE TURBAN BEAVER TOQUE.

Her only exception is a pretty throatlet of diamonds and pearls, which King Alfonso bought for her in Bond street one day in their saunte.s through London.

The young Queen wears pearls—diamonds seldom. "Pearls match the milky whiteness of your skin," the beauty lecturer said to her. "Let others wear diamonds. It is yours to wear pearls."

King Alfonso loves pale auburn hair. And the young Princess took a lesson in keeping it bright.

"It will stay bright while you are young. But, as cares come, it will darken," said the beauty lecturer to her. "And you must learn how to keep it light.

"Wear it round to make a frame for your face. A round face is young and becoming. See that you always preserve the roundness of your face. Never mind what others say. The round face is best because it is the face that belongs to childhood. Old women never have round, childish faces. And keep your hair washed and bright."

The pretty young Spanish Queen has inaugurated a new fashion in manicuring. She lets the nails grow longer than the finger tips. They are long and quite rounded; often they actually extend beyond the ends of the fingers, so that they show white and glistering. This is one of the new fads. Let the nails grow long, but do not cut them pointed. Let them curve in a lovely, delicate, rounding shape.

And there is another fad which the young Queen is introducing into Spain. And the Spanish ladies, always quick in these matters, have "caught on." It is the fad for having snow-white hands. Almost daily the hands of the pretty little nineteen-year-old Queen are bleached.

The materials for bleaching are the acid fruits and the acid vegetables. Since she was sixteen she has been noted for the beauty of those lovely milk-white hands.

And the Queen also takes gymnastic exercises, but they are of the English variety. She exercises with her arms and with her legs. No walk is too long for her. What she will do, now that she is in Spain, no one knows, for it is not etiquette for the Spanish Queens to take long walks. She used to walk miles and miles each day upon the Isle of Wight. What will she do in Spain? Fortunately, there is a Queen's garden, just a mile in circumference, and she is allowed to exercise here.

But it is of her hair that she is most particular. And upon this the hairdressers work hours a day.

Valuable Advice for Young Mothers On the Care of the Baby.

TO WASH a baby with a tender skin you should take a teaspoonful of bran, tie it in muslin, and set it in the cold water of the bath overnight. In the morning take out the bag and add boiling water until you have the desired temperature.

If a child has a scald or burn on the leg do not pull off the stocking, but slit it up, or it is more than likely that a part of the flesh will be pulled off with the stocking. Bind up a burn immediately to keep it from the air, applying an equal part of linseed oil and lime water.

A light covering should be thrown over the baby or child of any age during the daytime nap. The heart beats more slowly during sleep than when one is awake, the blood circulates less rapidly, and less heat is produced. An extra covering is required to compensate for this loss.

A child's bedroom should have plenty of windows for the sunshine to enter. It should be large and lofty, and with its walls painted instead of papered. There should be hardwood floors, with rugs instead of carpets, and few hangings and ornaments. The little one should spend, except when sleeping, as little time in it as possible.

Be very particular in seeing that any food for a baby is properly prepared. A careless nursemaid may make it in a dirty saucepan, boil it badly so that it is a mass of lumps, or let it burn. Remember that even if this does not upset the delicate stomach of a child it may give him a distaste for his food which may cause endless trouble.

A few hours' care when an illness is approaching may save many weeks of nursing at a later stage. For this reason never neglect a shivering fit, as most serious illnesses begin in this way. Any mother who has not a wide experience of children's diseases is earnestly advised to send for a doctor and put the child to bed at once if he should shiver violently and unaccountably.

Two or more children should not be permitted to use the same towel. Each child should have a separate one, and be taught to regard it as personal property. Towels may be bought with initials woven in them, which makes it easy for the owner to distinguish his own. Diseases of the eyes and skin are easily communicated by the indiscriminate use of the same towel by different persons. If carefulness in this matter be inculcated in childhood it may save much suffering.

An ordinary bruise is best treated by soaking a pad of cotton wool or lint in eau-de-Cologne and fastening on the pad by a bandage. Should the bruise be a bad one let the child lie down quietly for a time and give it a spoonful of saline mixture.

Vegetables and fruit are most essential to a growing child and must always be included in its diet. Vegetables, fruit, milk, farinaceous foods and eggs are the chief dietary upon which all children should be reared. The vegetables must be young, fresh and properly cooked in order to render them digestible.

Do not remove a child from its bed and walk it about the room, as the sudden exposure to cold is very harmful. Try to soothe the child with gentle words or hold its hand. Sometimes if the hair is gently stroked back from the forehead it will have the desired effect and cause the child to drop off into a refreshing sleep.

Castor oil may be taken in milk, coffee or spirits, such as brandy; but the best way of covering the nasty taste is to put a tablespoonful of strained orange juice in a wine glass; pour the castor oil in the middle of the juice and then squeeze a few drops of lemon juice upon the top of the oil. The glass should be first dipped rim downward into water, so that the inside may be wetted.

Cocoa is the best beverage for children next to plain milk, and often, when they cannot properly digest the latter, cocoa prepared with half milk and half water is invaluable. It is one of the best articles of diet for all except young infants.

Cotton should never be placed next an infant's skin, as this material neither absorbs the perspiration, nor does it keep the small limbs warm, and in the case of a sudden change of temperature, when in the open air or exposed to a draught, a chill will be the result.

The mother who thinks she is benefiting her ailing child by urging it to eat when it has no appetite ought not to be entrusted with the rearing of a child. Nature tells the child, more than the grown person, when its system needs a rest from foods, and inducing the child to eat in such cases often causes serious complaints.

Children should be accustomed to vigorous mastication by practice three times a day; and the habit thus formed will not be forgotten. By such a system of training bills for dentists will be reduced, the child's teeth will become strong and well polished, and there will be a distinct enlargement of the jaw and strengthening of the facial muscles.

Starch made with soapy water prevents the irons from sticking and gives a better gloss to the linen.

A lump of washing soda kept over the sink pipe will neutralise the grease in the water and prevent the pipe clogging.

Before drawing threads in linen for hemstitching make a dry lather and apply over the space with a shaving brush. When the linen is dry you will be able to draw out the thread more readily.

Brass may easily be cleaned by rubbing with lemon juice and whiting until all stains are removed. Brush the powder from the crevices with a soft brush and polish with dry whiting and chamois.

Sinks where dishes are washed, greasy water poured down, or water in which vegetables have been boiled, should have a thorough flushing with hot water, followed by cold water, every day.

Scorched fireproof dishes that have become brown from baking may have the stains removed by soaking in strong borax and water.

Half a lemon dipped in salt and rubbed on discolored ivory knife handles will restore them to their original whiteness. After doing this, wash the knives once in hot water.

Few people know that in smothering steak with onions the flavor is greatly improved by squeezing the juice of a lemon over it.

Borax is an excellent preservative for meat, milk, butter and other articles of animal food. It is a disinfectant for closets, sinks and impure water. Borax is used as an astringent and gargle in sore throat and in excessive salivation. It readily allays heat and irritation.

Home dressmakers who have difficulty in pressing curved seams will find a rolling pin a very good pressing board if a cloth is wrapped around it.

When using a sewing machine, the best way to finish off neatly and firmly is to turn the work around and work back a short way, doubling the stitches.

If you wish to make a walking skirt just to clear the ground, measure the person from waist to the ground and deduct one and a half inches.

Narrow edging and inserting to match the material is used for the trimming. Cross-barred muslin, linen, nainsook or lawn may be used for the making. Two yards of material 36 inches wide are required.

Patterns and directions for making this very useful and attractive apron have been prepared for the American-Journal-Examiner series and will be sent to any address for ten cents.

DON'T BE TOO ROMANTIC ON YOUR HONEYMOON TRIP.

THE craving for romance has spoilt many a honeymoon for a woman. She plans in her own mind a period of time to be spent in dreaming of her happiness, and is somewhat disappointed when her matter-of-fact husband insists on drives, excursions and other pleasurable ways of spending the time. Thus she spoils the bright realism of a pleasant holiday, and, more than that, makes a bad beginning for a new life that, later on, is bound to evolve itself into a routine of commonplaces.

So do not strive after a fantastic ideal. Be natural, and make your honeymoon a real holiday as well as the prelude to your married life. Remember, too, it should be a time of growing together and of learning the petty foibles of each other's characteristics that in courting days were hidden by a mask of reserve.

Love may be blind; but sometimes marriage gives it sight. Thus, unless it be very real, there is the danger that that sight may kill illusion and spoil two lives. Of course, Jack has grown to regard you as an angel in courting days. Then don't let a few hours' solitude spring too suddenly on him the fact of your humanity. Try and keep up the angel's prestige by continuing the sweetness and wiles of courtship, and let him see that you expect to find the lover in the husband, too.

Begin both of you as you intend to go on, for as you start to mould your lives during your honeymoon so will they develop as the years go by. Start by being wedded lovers, and don't slip into the commonplace attitude of indifference to small details. Value kisses and petty attentions as you valued them before that plain gold band found a resting place on your finger, and above all, be guided by love.

A honeymoon is at best but a brief period. It should be life's brightest page, and it will be if you and Jack bear well the fact in mind that love is yours in all its full perfection, and must be guarded and treasured for all time beyond every other earthly possession.

Don't take all your outfit with you. This was designed to last for many months. It is probable that you only contemplate being away one [illegible]

Don't only take new gowns. Even for your wedding trip the weather cannot be altered, and it is more than likely that you will have wet days when you will grudge wearing your nice clothes.

Don't spend all your money, or indeed live in an [illegible] customed way. You can [illegible] if spent reasonably, and the [illegible] may be very useful later on.

Don't forget all the foolish little ways your [illegible] when you were lovers, only remember that you have heaps of quiet [illegible] of exercising them. There is [illegible] to let the whole world see—and smile.

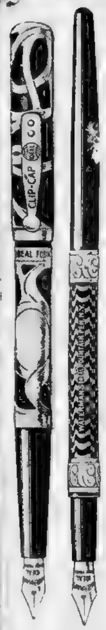
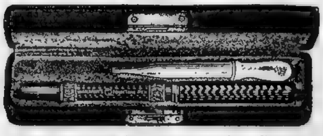
Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen



When You Need a Pen A Pencil Won't Do

IT is as easy to have a pen at hand at all times as a lead pencil.

Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen makes this possible. It is a perfect combination of pen and ink and yields the limit of service and satisfaction. It never floods nor overflows. It always gives enough, never too much ink.



Pens for Gifts in Presentation Boxes

It has taken years of experience to make Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen—the Pen of the Hour—what it is to-day.

Because a fountain pen in its crudest stages may have proven unsatisfactory to you at some time in the past is no reason why you should be willing to do without this ideal writing instrument, which is practical in every feature, and is absolutely guaranteed to be constant, cleanly and positively efficient in every respect.

Give it the same care as you would a steel pen and it will do better work alone than the steel pen will with the aid of an ink bottle.

The Clip-Cap—for a man's pen—adds slightly to the cost, viz.:—German Silver, 25c; Sterling Silver, 50c; Rolled Gold, $1.00; Solid Gold, $2.00.

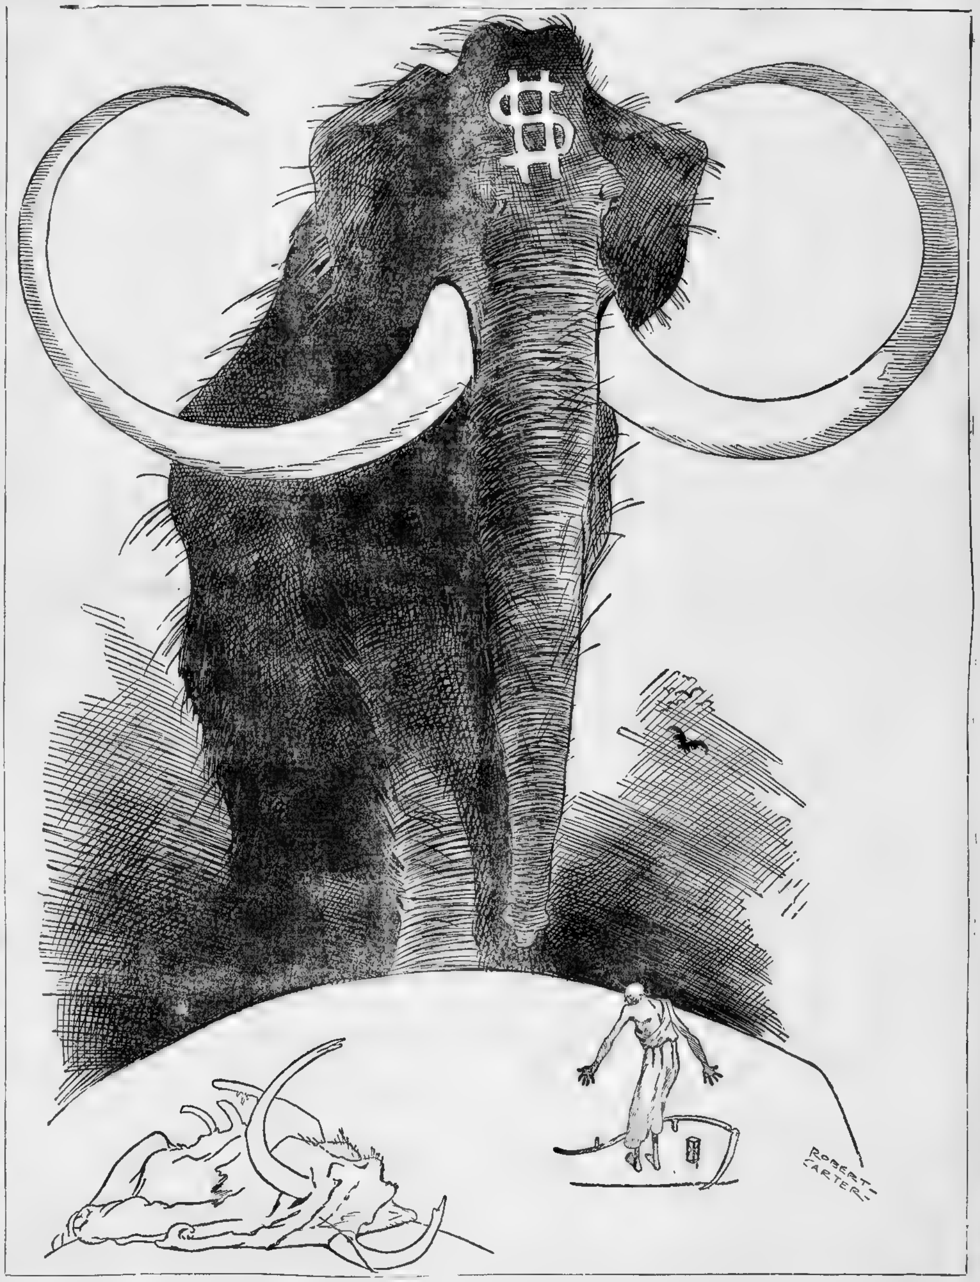
BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1906.

Is This Creature to Rule PERMANENTLY?



The Money Mammoth Is Now THE POWER on the Earth. Its Look Frightens the Timid, the Weight of Its Step Shakes the Ground. Old Father Time Himself Bows Cowering Before Him. BUT THERE IS A POWER GREATER THAN THE MONEY MAMMOTH. It Is the VOTER'S Power. When Will It Take Its Place AS THE RULING POWER?

THE question on this page is to be answered by the men of the United States at the polls. There is not a man, intelligent and disinterested, who fails to recognize the truth in this striking picture of ruthless power.

A mammoth INDEFD is Trust organized money. IT tramples over the small people heedlessly, unknowingly, AS THE OLD MAMMOTH IN HIS THUNDERING RUSH TRAMPLED THE BODIES OF SMALL ANIMALS.

Citizens of America, this picture has its meaning in every little village, in every INDIVIDUAL FARMER'S HOME, in every town, IN EVERY BIG CITY.

Everywhere the feet of the Money Mammoth shake the ground. Everywhere that power is felt.

It is felt in the railroads that make the farmer work year in and year out for a scanty living, AND FOR FAT DIVIDENDS ON THOUSANDS OF MILLIONS OF WATERED STOCK.

The Trust criminal power is shown in the household bills that worry and torment millions of anxious women in the United States.

The power is shown in the suffering that the Coal Trust inflicts upon the poor in Winter.

It is shown in the criminal heartlessness displayed by the Ice Trust last Summer, when, according to cold statistis, in addition to the usual mortality, FIVE HUNDRED INFANTS died unnecessarily in the single city of New York every week. AT the end of this butchery the Ice Trust declared an extra dividend of 9 per cent.

The power of money that rules us, that sits in the seat of government, THAT CAUSES TEARS AND ANXIETY FOR THE FUTURE IN THE HOMES is as CRUEL as it is mighty.

The Milk Trust, the most shameful perhaps of all the recently organized Trusts of this country, REACHES FROM THE FARMER AT HIS WORK IN THE COUNTRY TO THE SICK CHILD IN THE BIG CITY. The farmer is robbed. The child dies.

Millions of UNWILLING men do the bidding of this Trust power. They are the men kept down by the force of united capital, and unable to protest efficiently against Trust organization throughout the land.

In addition to its unwilling, but helpless slaves, the Trusts have THE GLAD, WILLING SERVICE OF THOUSANDS OF INTELLIGENT, BUT UNSCRUPULOUS MEN.

These dangerous servants of the Trusts you find sitting in your legislative bodies.

You elect an important official, AND YOU FIND THAT HE WAS CHOSEN FOR YOU BY THE TRUSTS, AND NOW SERVES THE TRUSTS.

You send men to Congress, and the Trust pocketbook buys them there, IF IT HAS NOT BOUGHT THEM BEFORE.

You vote for two candidates, and only too often you find that BOTH represent the same Trusts.

If you try to elect a man opposed to Trusts YOU FIND THAT THE MYSTERIOUS FORCES ARE ARRAYED AGAINST HIM.

Apparent "respectability" suddenly develops as the violent enemy of the man WHO DARES TO OPPOSE TRUST POWER.

Cleverest lawyers in the country are the willing servants of Trust Money, TWISTING the laws to suit, MAKING the laws to suit.

Judges even are put upon the benh, and they sit there, THE SLAVES OF THE MONEY THAT PUT THEM THERE.

In the city of New York this year the Gas Trust Lawyer Choate selected and nominated an entire bench of Trust candidates for the Supreme Court.

The people of the United States cannot tolerate FOREVER the exercise of government power by Trust money.

It is not possible that they will be permanently satisfied to have their lives, their laws, their fortunes, their prospects of future prosperity put at the mercy of a Trust organization, that has no conscience and no heart.

There is an election NOW coming in which the men of America will go on record FOR THE POWER OF THE TRUSTS, or against it.

There is no question in any man's mind as to where the Trust power stands. There is no question in the mind of any manly man as to the outrageous influence that the Trusts already possess in government.

The issue before American voters is this:

SHALL THE TRUSTS BE ALLOWED TO RUN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES PERMANENTLY? SHALL IT BE RECOGNIZED AS PART OF OUR NATIONAL LIFE THAT A MILLION DOLLARS HAS MORE POWER THAN A MILLION MEN?

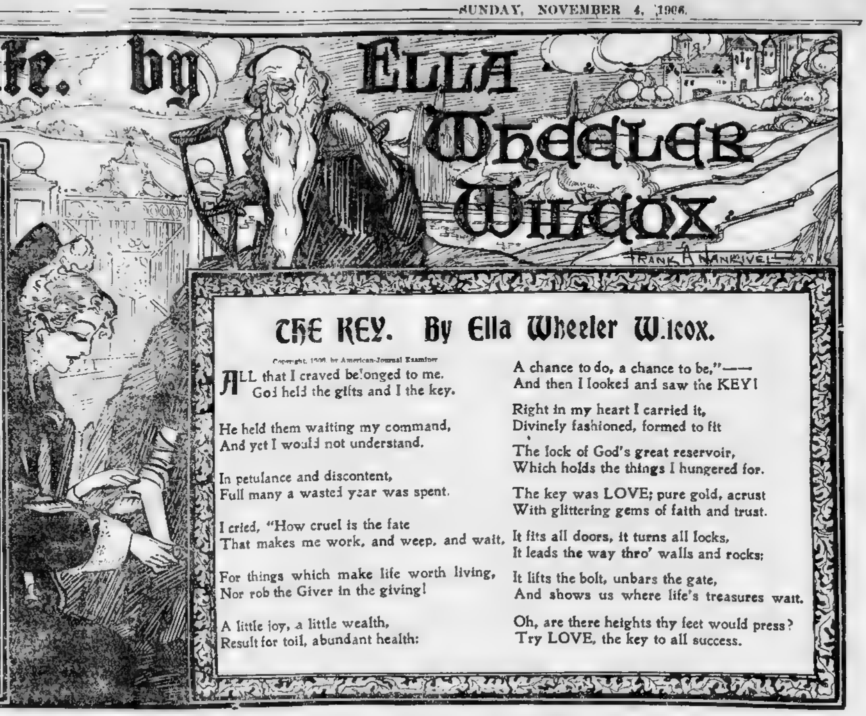
IS THE NATION THAT WAS FOUNDED UPON RESISTANCE TO TAXATION WITHOUT REPRESENTATION going to allow irresponsible Trust managers to tax this nation indefinitely?

Do men who allow others to tax them irresponsibly show a real spirit of manhood IF THEY FAIL TO PROTEST?

Men who vote this Fall will vote FOR THE TRUSTS OR AGAINST THE TRUSTS.

That is the one big question. YOUR vote will answer the question as to where our people stand on the Trust question.

The Unselfish Life. by ELLA WHEELER WILCOX



Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner

"For I came not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

THESE were the words of a great Teacher, a great Master, who came to earth nineteen hundred years ago, and left a track of splendor behind Him, a Path of Light, which leads out into Infinity.

The [illegible] of this Master was [illegible] Love [illegible] always. It has [illegible] Christianity, and has grown most complicated with the manipulations of translators [illegible] for [illegible] ceremonies of churches.

There are great Institutions of Religion which teach [illegible] to [illegible] of their teachings [illegible]

There are some [illegible] who affirm [illegible] great Master the Master so great that [illegible] seem like atoms of [illegible] not exalt Himself [illegible]

He was no respecter [illegible] and He was simple and approachable [illegible] common people [illegible] mother."

There is no [illegible] in the Bible, save the simple command, "Love one another," which impresses me more than the words placed at the beginning of this article.

It is perhaps because I opened to them one day, when I was a bit fatigued and overtaxed with duties [illegible] for others. It seemed to [illegible] appreciated [illegible] pitying moods, which [illegible] moods where we [illegible] ties and forget [illegible] our troubles and magnify our blessings [illegible] recall the benefits we have bestowed [illegible] unworthy and take no heed [illegible] good actions have been repaid a hundred fold.

So when I had succeeded in making myself believe that I was an utterly misused and unappreciated person, deserving much better treatment than Fate had accorded me, I opened my Bible to see what word of sympathy might be offered me.

And then I read those words.

"For I came not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

And immediately I perceived what a petty and ridiculous and wicked person I was making myself.

Surely, when the world's great Master, who, having passed through all His earthly incarnations, was now ready to become one with God as we all will become in time, effaced himself by saying "I came not to be ministered unto, but to minister," it behooves those who in any way believe they are living an unselfish life to abstain from self pity.

Every time we indulge in the mood of sorrowing over our hard lot in life we commit a sin, as well as a folly.

Every time we regard ourselves as separate [illegible] set apart to be ministered unto by others, we are guilty of colossal egotism, an [illegible] which will prove a stumbling block in [illegible] progress.

Thousands of women to-day imagine themselves great Christians while they are missing [illegible] children and their own lives [illegible] over their lot in life.

[illegible] more pleasure, more [illegible] more attention. They feel that, unlike the Master, they came to earth to be ministered unto, not to minister.

[illegible] they would be indignant were they told they had no right to be called Christians.

Yet men and the women of earth who are continually [illegible] in sympathy for themselves, who are always thinking of the pleasures and blessings and benefits denied them, are not Christians.

If this applies to you, take it home.

If you cannot echo from your heart the words of the Master, do not call yourself a Christian.

And of one thing be sure.

If you do echo from your heart those words, and if you seek to minister, rather than to be ministered unto, you will find as the years go by, that many will seek to minister unto you.

Hands and hearts will offer you the best they have! And the thorns will be taken from the paths you tread, by invisible fingers.

Just so sure as you forget yourself, in the effort to "minister unto" others, just so sure as you begin to count your blessings, and to accept your troubles as a part of your spiritual education, just so sure will greater happiness and pleasure and success come to you.

It is the Law.

Set yourself the task of making over your blessings, as a nun tells her beads, each morning when you awaken.

No matter how unfortunate you believe yourself to be, when you begin to take stock of the benefits fate has bestowed, you will find a goodly number.

Each time you name one of them thank the Great Giver and know that whatsoever else you desire is also yours.

The Key to the Reservoir is yours.

I see it

THE KEY. By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal Examiner

ALL that I craved belonged to me.
God held the gifts and I the key.

He held them waiting my command,
And yet I would not understand.

In petulance and discontent,
Full many a wasted year was spent.

I cried, "How cruel is the fate
That makes me work, and weep, and wait,

For things which make life worth living,
Nor rob the Giver in the giving!

A little joy, a little wealth,
Result for toil, abundant health:

A chance to do, a chance to be,"——
And then I looked and saw the KEY!

Right in my heart I carried it,
Divinely fashioned, formed to fit

The lock of God's great reservoir,
Which holds the things I hungered for.

The key was LOVE; pure gold, acrust
With glittering gems of faith and trust.

It fits all doors, it turns all locks,
It leads the way thro' walls and rocks;

It lifts the bolt, unbars the gate,
And shows us where life's treasures wait.

Oh, are there heights thy feet would press?
Try LOVE, the key to all success.

The Stage Novelist. By Clara Morris

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

IN this brilliantly restless period of change of view, of thought, of position, there has been none more marked than the changed attitude of the novelist toward the theatre.

Since the time, at least, of Charles Reade and Wilkie Collins—who were advanced masters upon many subjects—writers have admitted the necessity of reading up, of enlarging their stock of information before tackling a medical or legal story, as the too-knowing public has only heartless laughter for the author of the hero who speaks several pages of high flown sentiment while s[illegible]ing a hemorrhage of the lungs or of that deep-dyed youth whose acumen and learning put to shame the judges on the bench, but who searches houses and people without the formality of obtaining a warrant. They [illegible] somewhat into the [illegible] of the counting [illegible] theatre!—that was indeed another story. Who under Heaven ever thought of informing themselves about theatrical life before writing of it?

To recall some of those novelists of the past, their utter ignorance of things professional and their childlike confidence in spreading it before the public is both irritating and amusing. These inspiriting romances were all cut by the same pattern. The trimmings might differ slightly, some running to poisoned flowers, or toy daggers, while others preferred a generous spangling of tears.

Let us hie to the heroines of that period. These embryo stars [illegible] invariably from the lower ranks of life. No, please, I am not furnishing reasons. I am simply recalling stories — stories that never had any reason in them, that I could find. Well, these lovely heroines were all inhumanly beautiful, and uneducated—mark that, please. They were always loved by young aristocrats, and were bound to be deserted—else how would they become actresses or prima donnas, pray tell me? Then, being abandoned, they straightway disappeared, and I never knew one of these heroines to take a trunk; a small bundle, holding all their worldly belongings, may be touching to read about, but it must have been rather inadequate during that brief period when she was turning into a great artist.

Then there was always a hiatus; and I remember one novel in particular; it was from the German, where the peasant girl and her bundle disappeared one October evening, and three years later, on one October evening, the small town was illuminated in honor of the coming of the world-famous prima donna, who had set all Europe aflame with her incredible beauty, and voice, and utter magnificence. And there was one word in particular that did much to impress me with that splendor, that word was "retinue." "She was attended by a retinue of servants, and the modest little inn was not large enough to properly accommodate them all."

Readers wondered how many constituted a retinue. Some argued for one number, others for another. I thought a courier, two maids, a manager and a cook might render the prima donna sufficient service to secure a modest comfort. Ah, how ignorant! Where were the beauty doctor, the masseuse, the private secretary, the press agent, the companion and the boy in buttons? Necessary, every one. But yet, if I was ignorant, the novelist was doubly so, and impertinent besides, in that he dared to attempt that of which he knew naught.

Only three years since her departure! It must, even with the aid of a hydra-headed press agent, have taken more than a year for her to set Europe aflame and to have received honors from all crowned heads, and that would have left less than two years for the training and the development of the peasant girl's voice, all stage training being cut out entirely—truly it was to laugh.

Another tale—very tragic it was—of stage life had the most famous actress of her time, warbling on her balcony before her 6 o'clock breakfast. Summer vacation?—not at all! "She had supped with her court friends after her great performance the night before—but she loved the morning hours!" It was only fair to kill that woman—she deserved it.

The same story had the stage doorkeeper dressed in a plush livery. I don't know which it was, but either the author or the door-tender must have been intoxicated. Yes, these uneducated, low class young females were fired to the heights of fame in a jiffy, and it would be untrue to say they never did a thing to the aristocracy when they got there, because they did many things. But that's neither here nor there. I'm only speaking of the beautiful, the monumental ignorance of things theatrical shown too often by the novelist.

And yet there was something more, something worse, than sheer absurdity about these extravagantly unreal pictures of stage life. There is the power of the printed word to be considered. There have been many young girls ready to believe as gospel truth anything they saw in a book, and the more innocent the less suited they were to analyze the statements made in these inconsequent tales. They only saw that by the way of the theatre any pretty girl in trouble through poverty could in the briefest time become great, powerful and wealthy.

No word has been said of the drudgery, the long waiting, of the struggle against numbers; of jealousy and malice, of slow increase of salary, of equal increase of expense. The author was always silent as to these, and only dealt in large and vague splendors—never adequately accounted for.

Poor, romantic little maids! One does not like to think what the effect of that gilded nonsense about the stage may have been in many cases!

A Short Cut to Fame (The Song Writer) By William F. Kirk

"SONGS of battle, songs of strife," muttered the Song Writer, turning upon me his stern gaze. "That's [illegible]

"The [illegible] is [illegible] I [illegible] hold to assert

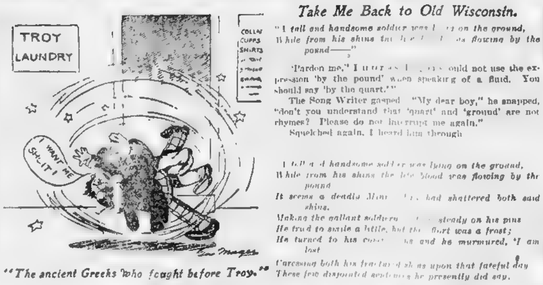
The Song Writer [illegible] smiling [illegible]

"So is the idea of [illegible] he [illegible] But nobody quits reading the Bible on [illegible] I have called you in to consult with you about some fitting music for my latest gem—not to get your advice on the value of my lyric."

Properly crushed, I waited for [illegible]

"I have here," said the Song Writer, "one of the finest war songs that was ever [illegible] song of bravery and action—a song that suggests the deeds of the ancient Vikings, who sailed around the West Indies and fought the West Indians single-handed; a song that echoes the heroic exploits of the ancient Greeks who fought before Troy, Albany and other New York cities. Of course my song is much more modern, because the public has been handed so many lemons that they won't stand for anything that happened a long time ago. Would you like to hear it now?"

Granted an audience, the Song Writer fished from an inner pocket and read to me the following tender lines



"The ancient Greeks who fought before Troy."

Take Me Back to Old Wisconsin.

"I tall and handsome soldier was lying on the ground,
While from his shins the life blood was flowing by the pound——"

"Pardon me," I [illegible] could not use the expression 'by the pound' when speaking of a fluid. You should say 'by the quart.'"

The Song Writer gasped. "My dear boy," he snapped, "don't you understand that 'quart' and 'ground' are not rhymes? Please do not interrupt me again."

Squelched again, I heard him through.

I tall and handsome soldier was lying on the ground,
While from his shins the life blood was flowing by the pound.
It seems a deadly Mauser [illegible] had shattered both said shins,
Making the gallant soldier [illegible] steady on his pins.
He tried to smile a little, but the effort was a frost;
He turned to his comrades and he murmured, "I am lost."
Caressing both his fractured shins upon that fateful day
These few disjointed sentences he presently did say.

"Upon his fetlocks the teardrops fell in gobs."

CHORUS:

"Take me back to old Wisconsin, my mother's waiting there,
She runs a flour and feed store in a city named Eau Claire,
I also have a sweetheart there, her name it is Clarice;
Take me back to old Wisconsin, where my shins may rest in peace."

II.

"His breath grew faint and fainter, his shins grew yet more sore,
They felt his ankles for the pulse and found it beat no more.
The general galloped swiftly past upon a weary nag
And found this perished soldier was the guy that saved the flag.
Tears came into the general's eyes; his throat was choked with sobs;
Upon his horse's fetlocks the teardrops fell in gobs.
He gazed upon the hero who had took the count that day,
And by a strange coincidence the same words he did say:

CHORUS:

"Take him back to old Wisconsin," etc.

Loveless Marriages. By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

I'VE just been reading about the girl who found out the day before her wedding that her sweetheart had jilted another girl for her, and so she invited the jilted girl to the wedding and made the bridegroom marry the girl he was trying to forget instead of the one who had made him do the forgetting.

Nice story, isn't it? Every one seems to be feeling sorry for the girl who gave up her own marriage for the sake of the jilted rival. I don't. I'm sorry for the girl the unwilling man married. When I hear of a man who marries a woman because he thinks he has to marry her, I don't waste a minute's time being sorry for him. I'm sorry for the woman who marries him.

Wouldn't you love to marry a man who made you his wife because some one made him do it or because he thought you'd die if he didn't?

Wouldn't it be fun to go to the theatre with such a husband and see him grow reminiscent over the love scenes and restless during the "For better, for worse, for richer, for poorer" dialogue.

I'd love to be a man's wife and meet the girl he gave up to marry me because she was so sorry for me she made him do it, wouldn't you?

Wouldn't it be comfortable to feel that everything you did and said or didn't do and didn't say were being compared to the sayings and doings or the unsayings and undoings of the girl who so generously gave you the man and kept his heart?

Of course, if you were clever enough and patient enough and determined enough, you could plot and plan and scheme him into loving you—after a fashion. Oh, yes, I've seen it done.

The plainest woman in the world can make herself so useful, so indispensable, to her husband that he'll wonder how in the world he ever dreamed of getting along without her.

She can be his rock of refuge from the world, his inspiration, his courage, his brains, his feet and hands.

When he burns his fingers in a bad bargain she can be his mother and tie them up for him. When he makes a success she can be his chum and hurrah with him; when he's blue she can either agree with him that all the world is out of joint and have a lovely time helping him be gently melancholy, or she can make him laugh and forget it all.

And at the end of a few years of absolutely self-repression, absolute surrender of her brain and soul and heart and very life itself, he will give her, if he is even half a man, a kind of grudging gratitude which he may call love but is it all worth while, I wonder?

I met [illegible] mine once, a very [illegible], who married a man [illegible] dead in love with another [illegible] on his very wedding day. She had been married to [illegible] year or so when I met [illegible] she was perfectly happy [illegible] she said.

"I don't have a bit of trouble getting on with Tom," she said. "I understand him so well; for example, I've been dying for a big hat, a great big, floppy, plumy thing, don't you know, like the ones in the old Gainsborough pictures, and how do you think I went about it?

"Why, I began to rave over a little postage-stamp of a thing that I saw in a window. I made Tom believe that I was dying for a little hat, and before we were through with the hat business he had marched me downtown and made me buy the very biggest hat in town, which was exactly the hat I was dead in love with all the while.

"If I want to go out in the evening I say to Tom after dinner, 'Isn't it cosey here to-night? I'll slip on my teagown and we'll have a delicious evening at home all to ourselves.' That means the theatre for me. If I'm tired and want my kimono and a cup of tea, I talk about the theatre. Oh, it's so easy that it's almost tiresome."

I wonder if that poor woman really imagined for one moment that she was really happy.

What's the use of a husband if you can't say just exactly what you think to him and have him interested in it no matter how silly it is, just because you say it? What's the fun of being married unless you can be a goose once in a while and not worry for fear you've lost an inch or two in the fight for his love by doing it?

Why, the woman who is married to a man who only half loves her is only half alive.

The little foolish nothings of real love—why, one-half hour of delicious nonsense is worth more than a lifetime of tolerated good sense.

I'd rather marry a fool who was dead in love with me and with whom I was dead in love than to marry the cleverest man in the world who made up his mind after thinking the matter over very carefully that I would do.

There is no purgatory in real marriage—you're always either in heaven or—the other place, and whisper, I'd rather be quarrelling myself into a fury in the other place with the man who loved me and whom I loved than to sit with placidly folded hands in the most beautiful heaven that could be imagined.

Poor girl, you who are married to the man who was not so dead in love with you that he thought your commonplace, shallow little eyes the most beautiful orbs in the world. Poor woman, you who married your husband just because he seemed to want you to marry him so badly. Poor, "sensible" wife, poor, "practical" husband, what an absolute fizzle you're bound to make of the glorified joy we call marriage.

From the bottom of my heart, I'm sorry for you whoever you are, and wherever you live.

UNUSUAL NUMBER OF FAVORITES RETURNING.

FAVORITES, both in plays and players, hold the boards on the local stage this week. E. S. Willard, the great English actor of the present day, returns with a new piece, "Colonel Newcome," to the Colonial, to be followed by a repertoire of his best plays; dainty Katie Barry comes to the Boston Theatre in a new musical piece, "Mamselle Sallie"; the Rays, John and Emma, bring back their success of last season, "Down the Pike," to the Globe. The favorite plays which are to be revived are "A Trip to Chinatown," which continues for another week at the Bijou, "Trilby" at the Castle Square, and "When the World Sleeps" at the Grand Opera House. Four successes also continue for another week: "Peter Pan" at the Hollis Street Theatre, "My Lady's Maid" at the Majestic, "The Mountain Climber" at the Park, and the new Savage grand opera, "Madam Butterfly," at the Tremont.

It is a big burlesque week also. "Wine, Woman and Song" comes to the Columbia, the Transatlantic Burlesquers to the Lyceum and the City Sports to the Palace. All the vaudeville houses, Keith's, Orpheum and Howard, present new bills with many headliners.

Novelty of the week is the attraction at the Bowdoin Square—a play without a name, written by Mildred Champagne of "heart-to-heart talk" fame. The patrons of the house are to be allowed to name the new piece, which is said to be very strong and full of interest.

Boston Theatre

Originality and melody are the great features of "Mamselle Sallie," the attraction at the Boston Theatre for two weeks, commencing to-morrow evening. The piece is by Raymond Hubbell and Robert B. Smith, authors of "Fantana" and other musical successes. The company numbers 103 persons. The stars are Katie Barry of "Chinese Honeymoon" and "Fantana" fame, and John Slavin, who has been identified with most of the successful musical comedies since the days of Rice's "1492." Supporting them are George E. Mack, a Boston boy, William P. Carleton, Sidney De Grey, Agnes Finley and Florence Quinn in principal roles. Like all of the Fisher productions, such as "Florodora" and "The Silver Slipper," magnificent costumes, gorgeous scenery and beautiful women are striking features. Of the latter it may be said that Manager Fisher has surpassed all his previous endeavors, for in the beauty chorus of "Mamselle Sallie" he has brought together sixty-five of the most beautiful young women it was possible to secure. There will be matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Tremont Theatre

To-morrow night Henry W. Savage's English Grand Opera Company will begin the last week of its Boston engagement at the Tremont Theatre in Giacomo Puccini's Japanese grand opera, "Madam Butterfly." In the past six days Boston, usually so slow to give its approval to a musical novelty, has found more than ample time to agree upon a verdict in the case of "Madam Butterfly," and that verdict has spelled nothing but "success." The story of the opera is, of course, the same as the drama. Pinkerton, the American lieutenant, marries the Japanese Geisha maiden, Butterfly, in order to pass the time pleasantly during his stay at Nagasaki. He leaves her for three years, promising eagerly to return. Butterfly remains faithful, but Pinkerton marries in America, and when he returns to Japan he brings his American wife with him. In her broken hearted disgrace Butterfly commits hara kiri.

The arrangement of the principals in the casts for this week is as follows: Monday, Miss Vivienne, Miss Behnee, Mr. Maclennan and Mr. Goff, Walter Rothwell conductor. Tuesday, Mme. Szamosy, Miss Behnee, Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Richards, Alfred Feith conductor. Wednesday matinee, Miss Vivienne, Miss Bloomfield, Mr. Maclennan and Mr. Goff; Alfred Feith conductor. Wednesday evening, Mlle. Janssen, Miss Behnee, Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Richards, Walter Rothwell conductor. Thursday, Mme. Szamosy, Miss Bloomfield, Mr. Maclennan and Mr. Goff; Alfred Feith conductor. Friday, Miss Vivienne, Miss Behnee, Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Richards; Walter Rothwell conductor. Saturday matinee, Mme. Szamosy, Miss Bloomfield, Mr. Maclennan and Mr. Goff, Walter Rothwell conductor. Saturday evening, Mlle. Janssen, Miss Behnee, Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Richards; Alfred Feith conductor.

Colonial Theatre

Foremost of contemporary English actors, E. S. Willard will begin at the Colonial Theatre to-morrow night an engagement of two weeks. The important addition to his repertoire this season is Michael Morton's play of "Colonel Newcome," that achieved so great a success in London. Perhaps no play brought out in recent years has given rise to so much controversy as this one. When it was announced for production in London some very [illegible] communications to the press expressed the opinion of the writers that it would be nothing less than sacrilege to transfer Thackeray's novel to the theatre in a stage version of the story. It is something in the days of curious dramatic "problems" to get a wholesome ideal on the stage, and there luckily is no question of the wholesome charm of "Colonel Newcome," the fine old fellow who met adversity as bravely and sweetly as with modesty and simplicity he had born dignities and honors in prosperity. "Colonel Newcome" will be played for the entire first week. For the second week the plays will be: "The Middleman," "David Garrick" and "The Man Who Was," "The Professor's Love Story," "A Pair of Spectacles," Saturday matinee, "David Garrick," Saturday night "Tom Pinch," besides a repetition of "Colonel Newcome."

Keith's Theatre

A fine bill is scheduled at Keith's new theatre this week. George W. Wilson and company head the bill. "The Crickets" is the name given to the miniature ballet of Geisha land that Joseph Hart is sponsor for. It is one of the prettiest acts vaudeville has yet seen. The greatest dancing act of the Four Fords and a tumbling act by Hassan Ben Ali's troupe of Arabs, the Quigley brothers in an Irish comedy skit, Welch, Mealey and Montrose, Sam Elton, "the man who made the Shah laugh," Harry Brown, colored comedian; the Columbia Comedy Four, Lelia Taylor, balladist, Earle and Bartlett, Will Mead and his educated dog, the Frampin Trio, instrumentalists; the sisters Noble, and timely pictures by the kinetograph complete the program.

Orpheum Theatre

The bill at the Orpheum this week has great variety. Prominent in it are the Fays, whose exhibitions of the thaumaturgy have aroused general interest [illegible] the country. They come here after a twenty weeks' engagement in New York, where the remarkable gifts claimed by Mrs. Fay have caused discussion as to the source of her remarkable powers. During their stay Mrs. Fay will answer the questions sent her from her audiences and show her wonderful faculty for identifying and describing persons and things beyond the usual powers of discernment. Among the other acts are the new sketch, "A Friend of the Family," by Josephine Cohan and company; a humorous budget by Fred Niblo, a new skit introducing Tom Nawn, the Irish comedian, and his company, laughable ventriloquism by A. O. Duncan, a notable acrobatic act by Deirick Brothers, a humorous skit by Mills and Morris and some juggling by Valoni the European juggler.

Majestic Theatre

To-morrow night at the Majestic Theatre "My Lady's Maid" will enter upon the second and last week of its Boston engagement, giving, as usual, Wednesday and Saturday matinees. This latest importation from England in the musical comedy line has proved a dainty offering. There is nothing loud or boisterous about "My Lady's Maid;" its story, its lyrics, its comedy, its music, all are delicate and pretty. The company includes Miss Madge Crichton, as Lady Betty, the part she originated in London, Joseph Coyne as Trooper Smith, the Piccadilly type of Englishman; R. E. Graham, Della Mason, Elsa Ryan, William Cameron, Henry Bergman, Frank Rushworth and George Carroll, a late comer to America, whose droll [illegible] and expressive face succeed in bringing many hearty laughs. It also includes many handsome girls. Joseph Coyne's topical song, "It's Hard to Understand the Ladies," is the hit of the piece.

Hollis Street Theatre

Time in its flight is nightly turned backward and thousands of grownups again made children by the combined art of Miss Maude Adams and J. M. Barrie at the Hollis Street Theatre. "Glimmering through the dream of things that were," there is revealed the day when [illegible] of us [illegible] heart whole and [illegible] in the land of Make-Believe, when to journey on moonbeams, to fly to unknown worlds, to defeat savage Indians and real pirates were the simplest feats of the world. There is something lost in the makeup of every grown-up who has not had such delightful boyhood day dreams and for whom Peter Pan cannot recall them. Why the men see the fun and the women only the pathos of Barrie's strange fantasy would be an interesting speculation for a psychologist.

Park Theatre.

Francis Wilson in "The Mountain Climber" will begin the second and last week but one at the Park to-morrow night. In this new play the comedian has achieved one of the greatest successes of his career. The plot revolves around the deception of one Montague Sibsey, who, in order to mislead his wife, tells her in letters about his marvellous mountain climbing feats in the Alps. He is really having a gay time in Paris and the wonderful adventures he writes are copied word for word from a book on that subject. His wife, proud of his daring, has the letters printed in book form, and they create a stir. On his return home he is given a big job in the mountain climbing business, in which he gets into some of the most hilarious situations ever laughed at. Many of the complications of the piece are brought about when he meets the real author of the book. May Robson, as the woman behind the husband, is consistently enjoyable. Others in the company are Ellen Mortimer, Edna Bruns, Jane Gordon, Essa Garrett, [illegible] and Joseph Allen, Frank [illegible] and George Irving. The play is elaborately produced and the scene in the Alps is picturesque. During Mr. Wilson's engagement there will be but one matinee a week, and that on Saturday.

Castle Square Theatre

"Trilby" returns to town at the Castle Square this week, sure of a ready welcome. It is now some dozen years since she first astonished the world both in George du Maurier's novel and in the play made from it by Paul Potter. There are few whom the story of the bare-footed model is not known, and few who have not been impressed by Svengali's strange character. The three musketeers of the brush, Taffy, the Laird and Little Billee, all hold a high place in our affections.

Svengali, with his gaunt, angular body, his weird and piercing eyes will be acted by Ben Johnson, an actor of remarkable versatility. As Trilby, Miss Thais Lawton will add to the reputation won here, and Taffy will be played by John Waldron, the Laird by Edward Waite, Little Billee by Louis Albion, Gecko by Charles Miller, Zouzou by Mark Kent, Madame Bagot by Leonora Bradley, and Madame Vinard by Kate Ryan.

Bijou Theatre

It speak volumes for the splendid manner in which John Craig's company have been presenting the Hoyt musical farce, "A Trip to Chinatown," that there has been an urgent call for another week of it. So [illegible] the attraction for the next six days. By

Plays to Be Seen Soon

"Rose of the Rancho" Coming

At the Majestic Theatre on Tuesday, November 13, comes an event of unusual importance in local theatricals—a David Belasco premiere. It has been Belasco's habit to make his first productions in either Washington or Pittsburg, but it was decided some months ago that "The Rose of the Rancho," the new Belasco play, should first see the light of day in Boston. It is a play of the American invasion of Spanish California. David Belasco and Richard Walton Tully are the authors. The period and the people have never before been handled by an American dramatist. [illegible] the unusual opportunities afforded [illegible] and the mixing of the Anglo-Saxon and Latin races represented by the Mexican grandee with his motto "To-morrow," and the bustling American gradually forcing him away from his chosen home, have been taken hold of by Belasco enthusiastically and treated in a brilliant way. "The Rose of the Rancho" has a love story. The man is the young American, the woman the Spanish beauty, "The Rose of the Rancho." The incidents that mark the consummation of their romance have their origin in the American invasion, which gives these incidents a setting of unusual dramatic value. The cast includes Charles Richman, Hamilton Revelle, Frank Losee, John W. Cook, Grace Gaylor Clark, Frances Starr, Marta Mclean and Maria Davis.

"The Girl Raffles."

Cecil Spooner, the petite young comedienne, in "The Girl Raffles," a musical melodrama by Charles E. Blaney, comes to the Globe on November 12. Miss Spooner is an actress of strong dramatic and emotional power. She is winsome and refined in her comedy work, and her specialties are gems. "The Girl Raffles" affords her unlimited scope to display her versatility. Mr. Blaney has surrounded Miss Spooner with an especially selected company of recognized ability and a large chorus.

"John the Baptist" Coming

"John the Baptist," or "Johannes," as the play is known in Germany, is one of the plays in which E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe will appear at the Boston Theatre in January. It is in five acts and a prelude, the time is about the year 29 A. D., and the scenes represent a country road near Jerusalem, an open square before Herod's palace, a hall in the palace, the house of Jehosaphat, one of the disciples of John the Baptist, and a city in Galilee. Mr. Sothern is cast for the title role, and Miss Marlowe will be seen as Salome, the daughter of Herodias.

"The Man from Mexico"

"College Widow" Returns

George Ade's irresistible "College Widow" with her merry crowds of rollicking students, pretty girls and rich galaxy of campus types, embellished in the typical Henry W. Savage environment, returns to the Tremont Theatre on Monday, November 12, with the prestige of many record marks. Seat sale opens to-morrow.

What an Observer Saw at the Theatre

By Clement L. Pollock.

"MY yodle's punctured," says Francis Wilson in the second act of "The Mountain Climber" at the Park. He's 'way, 'way up in the Alps, and he tries to say "Leigh Ho." Instead he says "Oooo, Oouch," just as though it hurt painfully. We don't believe it's so, Mr. Wilson. You can't convince us you can't yodle. Nor for the matter of that are we convinced you couldn't interject just one of those charming little vocal stunts and one of those little side-steps, as of old, if you wanted to. But never mind, Francis. If you came pretty near reaching the heights in musical comedy, you don't fall far short of ballooning to the tip-top pinnacle of real, honest good farce in your present effort. And there we leave you—'way, 'way up in the Alps.

But wait a second—while I am on the "Mountain Climber" theme, let me mention a little opportunity which the Park Theatre audience missed on last Monday night. I don't quite know whether it was a reflection on the quick-wittedness of the audience, or whether the chance was not quite improved by the artists on the other side of the curtain, but it seemed something was askew somehow. You know at the finish, in a little aftermath after Montague Sibsey extricates himself from an endless maze of embarrassing complications, a little drop curtain comes down and we descend from "Delectable Mountain" to the exuberance of a street serenade to the conqueror of the Alps. The audience is the procession going by the house. And from the windows peer forth Francis Wilson and May Robson, and Joseph Allen and Joseph Brennan, and all the rest of the amusers—and all wave to the passing imaginary parade of serenaders.

And of all the audience only two or three keen women admirers gave the handkerchief salute in response. It was a prime chance for the enthusiasts that gave Francis Wilson six curtain calls and insisted on a little speech. But they failed to grasp this rare opportunity to overdow a bit. While they were applauding at the drop of the final curtain it occurred to many. It did to me. It was a lost opportunity.

It is pleasant to record the musical, dramatic and scenic success of Mr. Savage's beautiful production of "Madam Butterfly" at the Tremont Theatre during the week. Whether the venture was all that had been hoped for financially is another matter. If it was a disappointment in this respect it was through no fault of the talented singers, men and women, or of the orchestra or the remarkably effective stage and scenery management. That the artists in varying lines assembled by Mr. Savage to show Puccini's opera to Boston were able to make the piece as attractive as it was is a proof of their high abilities. They were asked to set forth a story essentially sordid with an end that is shockingly tragic. In the drama of Belasco the tale is made palatable, even charming, by the delicacy and piquancy of its treatment. One is transported from the realm of everyday life to cherry-blossomed Japan very largely through the dialogue, so that the wretchedness of the affair and its dreadful ending are well-nigh forgotten.

The Japanese atmosphere and the illusion that make the drama bearable are lost through the total submergence of the language of the piece by its being sung instead of spoken. Mr. Savage and his associates by doing as well as they have in "Madam Butterfly" have proven that with real grand opera they can give performances here that will enable Boston to get along very comfortably without Herr Conried and his costly stars.

Girls, pretty, dainty, bewitching girls, are the feature of "My Lady's Maid" at the Majestic Theatre. There are girls dressed as girls in some of the most fetching costumes that could well be conceived, and girls dressed as boys in a manner that makes them—well, very attractive. It was supposed that Boston would like this bright and lively musical play fresh from Broadway and with a bit of the London fog in it. It has been said that Boston is more like London than any other American city. Boston did like it. The house was crowded on the evening I attended the performance, and good humor permeated the entire audience. Madge Crichton, as "Lady Betty," is the centre of interest. She is a veritable school girl in action and looks and in reality little more than that in age. She is a madcap for fun and she sings and dances like a sprite. She impersonates her own maid in order that she may be wooed by a young trooper, whom she induces to pose as a butler. Assisting her in her ladylike antics were Elsa Ryan and Della Mason. The trio are remembered here as members of the "Three Little Maids" company.

Joseph Coyne was the chief fun producer of the piece. He is one of those real comedians who seem to be born for the part they are playing. He was the trooper and later the butler, and he seemed to like "butling" about as well as he liked trooping. Coyne was ably seconded by the very English and very diminutive corporal, George Carroll. His acting was very telling and a look at his face was worth a laugh. There were some good songs for the principals, one of the best of the musical numbers was "Hard to Understand the Ladies," sung by Coyne. Another was "I Want You," by Miss Crichton. The play is here for another week.

Second Week of the Tremendous Success!!

A Trip to Chinatown

John Craig proved the surprise of the whole production. How an actor who has proved that he could play Shakespearean characters so well as he has done could take up the imaginary [illegible] of this hilarious farce with equal facility was certainly surprising. Even the specialties which fell to his lot were not shirked a particle. Miss Young was dainty and demure as the widow and her songs were given so well as to recall the days when she made her first successes here in musical comedy. [Transcript.

It is worth a week's pay to see little Mary Sanders in a dress suit as a boy, or to see Mary Young cavort as the captivating widow. Scenery, music, everything is perfect. The play will stand repetition. American.

The company took hold of the piece with enthusiasm, and it went with commendable smoothness. [Herald.

Miss Young simply covered herself with glory in the role of a singing comedienne. Mr. Craig gave his [illegible] a new insight into his wonderful versatility. [Post.

Mr. Craig [illegible] a distinct success. Miss Young again proved that she is a very versatile little woman. [illegible]

PUCCINI'S GREAT MUSICAL TRAGEDY "MADAME BUTTERFLY"

By Eleanor Ames.

GIVEN a musical setting, which for rare beauty of Orientalism and delicate mysticism, is a triumph, even for so great and famous a composer as Giacoma Puccini, John Luther Long's already familiar story of "Madam Butterfly" gives evidence of being the sensation of the operatic season.

As a matter of practical fact "Madam Butterfly" has fluttered into Boston and alighted in the Tremont Theatre, a little too early, for the operatic mood has not yet completely taken possession of the public. When she has sung her last song and gone on her way, Boston will wake up and realize that it did not count its blessings soon enough. Whereupon [illegible] their gladdest rags [illegible] and journey in [illegible] Butterfly" going [illegible] York to hear in Ita[illegible] M. Conried's management at the Metropolitan Opera House, Puccini's exquisite music-tragedy which Mr. Henry W. Savage is now offering them in English, first hand, with all the pristine freshness of setting, costuming and voice.

Notable Event of Season.

In the opinion of those whose ears are close to the operatic ground, "Madam Butterfly" is destined to be the most notable event of the opera season.

[illegible]

[illegible] the child [illegible] be cared for as she [illegible]

It is the introduction of the child, the bringing out of the little Japanese woman's love for her baby, her self-forgetfulness for the boy's sake that makes "Madam Butterfly" a great, strong, tragic creation. It is the secret of why the story made a great drama and of why it has given the inspiration for a great opera.

Leave out the boy, and what have you?

A pretty geisha, who was deceived and who in her trusting has suffered.

Told in such fashion, it would make a sadly sweet story, which would touch the heart to-day and be forgotten to-morrow.

But it would never have lived.

It would have been impossible, for instance, in the nature of things, to have let three years elapse between the first act and the second.

Grant that "Butterfly" was all she was, sweet and good and faithful, can you imagine her watching and waiting and hoping against hope for three long, weary years, if she hadn't [illegible] baby?

Do you believe she would have endured poverty and loneliness and the taunts of her own people so nobly if there had been no golden-haired [illegible] thing "Trouble"?

[illegible] that she w[illegible] the offers [illegible] who was [illegible] with jewels to pla[illegible] clothe her in fine [illegible]ment, to give her back her rightful position, if she had been all alone with naught but the memory of her happy bridehood to hold her true?

Dying for Love of Child.

The true heart-interest of "Madam Butterfly" centres not in Butterfly, the beauteous bride, but in Butterfly, the devoted mother. And in reaching the dramatic heights of this mother, dying for love of the child whom she gave life, such incongruities as the American and real wife of the faithless one being willing to adopt the child of a [illegible] husband [illegible] a pretty [illegible] of Nagasaki may [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] must know it,
[illegible]
Never to feel the torment when you are older;
[illegible] father forsook you.
O, my son, sent to me from Heaven,
[illegible] from the throne of glory!
[illegible]
Farewell, beloved!"

And as she falls in the roses strewn on the floor to honor the return of the one whose coming only emphasized his treachery, her last glance and gesture belong not to the man she loved, but to the child, for whom she has died.

The first act shows a hill near Nagasaki, with a wonderful fairylike house, with a terrace and [illegible] room, and below, between a tangle of flowers and foliage, the blue bay, the harbor and the quaint town appears.

Like troupes of little ladies off a screen or fan, the chattering, giggling, blushing girl friends of the bride come dancing in, and the relatives of Cho-Cho-San, Madame Butterfly, gather to pay homage to the bride and her handsome American husband.

"A crowd of women hustling like the wind in branches rustling" describes Garo, who has sold the dainty Cho-Cho-San for a hundred yen. And then comes Butterfly, dainty and brilliant as the fragile, winged creature for whom she is named.

Bows Before Her Master.

Fifteen years has she known, but her heart, pure as a child's, trusting as an infant's, is yet capable of a woman's love. She bows before her master. She orders her girl friends to do the same.

"Handsomer men you never saw, not in your dreams," she carols forth to them [illegible].

Exquisite in its tenderness, its dainty abandon, its impetuous phrasing, is the love scene between the two, which closes the first act.

Was ever treachery begun so sweetly? Was ever girl more earnestly won who was so basely deserted?

But what a changed Butterfly! Gone is the care-free baby face; gone the airy happiness. The lieutenant and his ship sailed away—and never came back.

Baby Claims Her Love.

Since he went away Butterfly has borne a child, fair of face, blue of eyes, gold-haired, a typical Anglo-Saxon. Her love for her child matches the faith [illegible] in his father. But she has no [illegible] in retaining her belief in the [illegible] whom she so firmly believes she is [illegible]. Garo, the marriage broker, be[illegible] her hand for one who has wealth [illegible]

Suzuki, her faithful maid, has lost hope. Poverty and want, the necessity of again becoming a geisha, stares her in the face.

The American Consul brings her a letter [illegible] from the lieutenant. It announces the arrival of his ship at Nagasaki and his marriage. His wife will be [illegible] him.

In vain does the Consul try to make Butterfly understand. "He is coming back! He has not forgotten!" She only understands that which her heart has be[illegible]. As if to clinch her argument she [illegible] forth the baby. "[illegible] such as this well be forgotten?"

A warship booms in the harbor. With [illegible] she deciphers its name. She has [illegible] the same thing with every ship for three years, but never before with these results.

She orders the place strewn with [illegible]

The rooms, gay with color, fragrant with perfume, the baby and she must be [illegible]

She confesses to her mirror, then cries, [illegible]h that longing which every woman of whatever land feels when the choice of her heart approaches:

"Make me pretty! Make me pretty."

She dons the wedding gown, she wraps the baby in the obi, she twines [illegible] in her hair, and, making three holes in the shoji, through which they watch the harbor, begins her vigil.

Thus has she watched before, but to-night will end it.

Gazes Into the Night.

The lanterns burn steadily, the darkness outside deepens, [illegible] night falls. Still she stands at the window. So she shall stand till dawn.

With the morning there comes the lieutenant and his wife, ready to take the child. The former just misses Butterfly, who is in an adjoining room with the baby, but he sees the garlanded room, and has proper pangs of remorse.

He gives money to the Consul for Butterfly and leaves.

The Japanese mother and the American [illegible]

[illegible]

"In half an hour he shall [illegible] child," she [illegible], and at the appointed time he [illegible] the room [illegible] "Butterfly! Butterfly!"

The baby, blindfolded that he may not see his mother die, waves an American flag. Butterfly lies dead.

Announce Miss Sears's Engagement

WITH their customary quiet way of doing things, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bacon Sears (Mary E. Sparhawk) of Marlboro street announced, the last week, the engagement of their beautiful daughter, Katherine, to Henry Endicott, Jr., Harvard '97.

This announcement, with the two weddings of the week, has been the chief topic with the smart set, in which Miss Sears has been a recognized belle since her debut. The interesting bride-to-be has just returned from the Sears estate at Weston, where with her parents and her brother, Francis Bacon, Jr., she spent the greater part of the Summer.

Mr. Endicott is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Endicott (Mary Howe) of Marlboro street, and is a popular member of the Boston Athletic Club. His sisters are the Misses Augusta and Marion and his only brother is Lawrence Endicott, who graduated from Harvard in 1901.

Many Society Leaders Leave Town

THE growing popularity of a Winter spent at our national capital or in travel abroad is seriously thinning the ranks of smart society, and it seems that hardly a day passes that some society matron does not announce her intention of leaving town for the Winter.

Mrs. Julia Dumaresq (nee Jordan) of Chestnut Hill is the latest to add her [illegible] to the long and fashionable list of those sailing this month to spend the [illegible] season in Europe.

It is rumored that a niece of Mrs. Dumaresq, a fair young member of the [illegible] Club, whose heart affairs have become seriously tangled, is to accompany [illegible] of course, if the father and mother of the pretty danseuse, who has [illegible] her own, succeed in their efforts to offset these other interests by the [illegible] promises of foreign travel.

Opening Town Houses for the Winter

AS society begins to settle itself for the coming few weeks, great interest is manifested as to the place—which is the problem confronting many of the [illegible] ones to whom the season in town holds out few inducements.

Society has watched with interest the movements of that charming young matron, Mrs. William Beal, who before her marriage was the beautiful Lilian [illegible]rrows, and is visibly surprised to learn that she is to give up her house on [illegible] street and spend the Winter with her mother-in-law, Mrs. James H. [illegible], at her home on Beacon street.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul (Saltonstall), who have been for the Summer [illegible] their beautiful Beverly Farms estate, opened their town house on Beacon [illegible] Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Higginson, who, with their daughters, Juliet and Barbara, have been for the past few months at their Pride's Crossing estate, returned to their Winter residence on Beacon street early in the week.

Mrs. Edward Johnson has gone to Annapolis, Md., to visit her daughter, Mrs. William V. Pratt, wife of Lieutenant-Commander Pratt, and upon her return will open her Marlboro street house for the Winter.

SMART SET SOON TO LEARN THE REAL "FOUR HUNDRED"

Somerset Functions That Fix Society's Rigid Limits Again Eagerly Awaited by the Socially Ambitious.

"See Venice, and then die!" says the beauty loving Italian.

"Be invited to the exclusive subscription assemblies of Boston, then ask nothing more," says the social aspirant of the Hub, for you have then attained the ultimate, you have reached the zenith of social glory.

The dates of these most exclusive events of the Winter are already fixed. They will be held at the Hotel Somerset on Friday evenings, January 4 and February 8.

The season of social anxiety and heart burning begins when the list of invitations for the assemblies is prepared and the powers that be sit in judgment—then there is realization of "just what is in a name."

The managers for the assemblies this year are the same as last, Messrs. J. Grafton Minot, S. Hooper Hooper, Philip S. Sears and Barrett Wendell, Jr., who, with Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer and Mrs. Bryce J. Allan, make the committee of arrangements.

It is these three last women especially who "make the assemblies shine," for they are all society stars of the first magnitude. There is Mrs. Bryce J. Allan of Beacon street and Beverly Farms, who before her marriage was Anna Palfrey. Mrs. Allan is clever and vivacious. She is an excellent whip and tools her coach and rides hounds as well as Mr. Allan, who delights in his wife's skill as a horse woman.

Mrs. Allan is one of the few Boston women who possesses a private ballroom, and her hospitalities, for which invitations are at a premium, are both lavish and elaborate.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer has long been an acknowledged leader and after her return from Europe in the early Summer she, with her two daughters, Cornelia and Sallie, were prominent for a time at Newport.

The Thayers are now at their Lancaster estate and will not return to town until after Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, who before her marriage was Helen Ames, is one of the most popular as well as one of the most distinguished and exclusive matrons in Boston. Her home at No. 477 Beacon street is the scene of many of the smartest hospitalities of the Winter.

Well to the fore among November weddings will be that tomorrow of Miss Lucy Thomas, daughter of Mrs. H. L. Thomas of Beacon street, whose Summer home is at Babylon, L. I., and Frederick Bedford, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Bedford of Clinton avenue, Brooklyn. The ceremony, which will be witnessed by only relatives and intimate friends, will take place at the home of Miss Thomas's grandfather, S. S. Stevens, on Beacon street. Miss Thomas is an unusually attractive young woman and will make a distinguished bride. After a short wedding tour Mr. Bedford will take his bride to his home city to reside.

One of the prettiest weddings of the month will be that on Wednesday at the Somerset of Jessie Langmaid, a sister and popular member of the Vincent Club, to Conrad Hobbs of Commonwealth avenue, Harvard '00. Miss Langmaid is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Langmaid, formerly of Newbury street, now of the Kempton. The ceremony, which will take place at [illegible] o'clock, will be performed by Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham, and will be followed by a reception to relatives and a few intimate friends. The bride will be attended by her sister, Bertha, as maid of honor. Soon after the marriage the young people are to sail for Europe, where they will spend several weeks.

St. Paul's Church, Brookline, will be the scene of an interesting wedding on Saturday, when Miss Helen Leverett Chase, daughter of Mrs. William Leverett Chase, becomes the bride of Lawrence Bertram Flint. The ceremony will take place at noon and will be followed by a reception at the Chase residence, No. 64 Alton place, Brookline. After December 1 the young people will be at home Friday afternoons at the Charlesgate, Beacon street. Miss Chase, belonging to one of Brookline's best-known families, is a girl of rare grace and charm, and will be one of the most beautiful brides of the month. She has only recently returned from an extended absence abroad, and many of her pretty bridal frocks were purchased in Europe.

Miss Rosamond Little, still another of the Vincent Club brides to choose November for her wedding, will be married on the 22d to Karl de Laittre, the well known Minneapolis bachelor and clubman, to whom her engagement was announced shortly after her debut last Winter. Miss Little is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Kimball Little of Salem, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. David P. Kimball of Commonwealth avenue, who introduced her and her sister, now Mrs. Talbot Aldrich, at one of the smartest balls at the Somerset last December. The two sisters, both exceptionally pretty girls, were to the fore in all the fashionable functions of the Winter, and bear the distinction of being the only debutantes of last season to become engaged. Shortly after the announcement of her engagement Miss Little sailed with her sister and grandparents for Italy, and after a tour of Egypt and the Holy Land spent some time in Europe, where Mr. de Laittre joined her.

The prospective groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John de Laittre of Minneapolis and is a graduate of Harvard. After an extended honeymoon the young couple will live in the groom's home city, where, since his graduation from college, he has been in business for himself.

November 29, Thanksgiving Day, has been chosen by Margaret Winthrop for her wedding to J. Grant Forbes, to whom her engagement was announced late in the Summer. Much to the disappointment of her numerous friends, Miss Winthrop will be married at the home of her mother, Mrs. Robert C. Winthrop, Jr., on Walnut street, as the family is still in mourning for the prospective bride's father, the reception [illegible] to the relatives and more intimate friends.

BLANCHE OELRICHS ENTERS CONVENT AND SWAINS MOURN

Newport, Nov. 3.—Miss Blanche Oelrichs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Oelrichs, famed as the prettiest girl at Newport the past season, has entered a convent in New York to remain the greater part of the Winter. Therefore, the numberless swains that have been kneeling at her feet must await the arrival of another Summer before resuming their court and, besides, Mrs. Oelrichs says her daughter is altogether too young for serious attentions.

Among the Boston people still at their country places at Newport [illegible] are the Misses Ellen F. and [illegible] Miss [illegible] Lyman, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] ford Norman, Colonel and Mrs. Reginald Norman, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Hunter, Mrs. Boutelle Noyes, Mr. and Mrs. "Willie" Mayer, and Mrs. Woodbury Kane.

Mrs. Aurel Batonyi, who captured three firsts at the Philadelphia dog show, will enter her Elm Court Kennels at the Boston dog show. Mrs. Batonyi will drive her guests to the show herself in her handsome four-in-hand coach with her husband, who taught her the art of four-in-hand driving, on the box seat from the Two-Mile-Corner [illegible] in Middletown to Boston.

Mrs. Guy Norman (Louisa Palfrey) of Boston has been spending a few days at the Norman villa, Beale, in Newport. Mrs. Richard T. Czar Watches His Beaten Army Driving Back an Imaginary Foe

St. Petersburg, Nov. 3.—Since the overwhelming defeat of the Russian army in Manchuria by the Japanese, Czar Nicholas has been trying to personally learn why his troops are not as invincible as he had believed. Formerly he took but passing interest in army matters, leaving all details to the military ministers. But since the war he has been as close a student of his armed forces as Kaiser William is of the German cohorts.

Czar Nicholas often dismounts at reviews and manoeuvres and inspects ordnance and regiments while afoot. He feels that his safety on the throne depends entirely upon the bureaucrats and the soldiery and is anxious to have troops that are as good as any in the world.

At recent corps manoeuvres he dismounted, and, followed by his staff afoot, climbed to the top of a hill so that he could command a view of the whole field where artillery, cavalry and infantry were going into battle formation. Without insignia of imperial rank, he sat on the ground in the centre of a line of officers and sadly watched General Kuropatkin's beaten veterans as they drove back an imaginary foe.

PRINCESS VICTORIA'S MIND GIVING WAY

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Nov. 3.—Various rumors are current regarding the unsatisfactory state of Princess Victoria's health, and all the circumstances seem to indicate that the trouble is mental. It is reported that the King's eldest daughter may soon retire from the social world altogether.

The Princess's visit to Norway for her sister's coronation had a bad effect upon her, the excitement having somewhat unsettled her.

Princess Victoria's retirement—temporary, at least—from court will therefore take place immediately, to save her from possible complications.

MAKES MACHINE TO STOP SEASICKNESS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Berlin, Nov. 3.—Seasickness is now prevented by machinery. A young German engineer, Otto Schlick, has invented mechanical means for steadying a ship in rough weather and so removing the cause of mal-de-mer.

Herr Schlick's device is a special kind of turbine which is fitted to the ship's bottom, and its motion counteracts her rolling to a great extent. It has been tested on a German torpedo boat, which, before the turbine was set working, rolled nine degrees, but afterward only one degree.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Nov. 3.—"There are no more tenors," cry the musical critics, and ask why this is so. Some doctors reply that the tenor voice is due to a disease of the throat, just as the pearl is a disease of the oyster. Others say that indulgence in violent exercise destroys the tenor voice among young men, others attribute the scarcity of tenors to the prevalence of tuberculosis.

CZAR WILL CARE FOR PILOT'S ORPHAN.

9-YEAR-OLD BOY NOW AT PETERHOF

By Robert Crozier Long,

Special Correspondent in Russia for The Boston Sunday American.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 3. When the Czar's yacht Standart cast anchor off Peterhof, on her return from her Finnish tour, one of the first passengers to be taken to Peterhof Palace was the nine-year-old son of a Finnish pilot named Kolainen. While the Standart was steaming away from Pyk[illegible] Island, where the Czar had spent a day shooting, Kolainen was drowned, owing to the torpedo boat which he was steering [illegible] rapidly into the swell of the [illegible]

[illegible] Standart stopped [illegible] [illegible] offered to look after the [illegible] Young Kolainen was taken on board the Standart and is now at Peterhof.

Every day shooting parties were organized on the group of Finnish Islands known as the Scheri. The Czar is an excellent shot. The official account of his bag states that he killed fourteen blackcock with twelve shots.

The islands in some cases had no landing places, and sailors from the cruisers and torpedo boats accompanying the Standart were sent on in advance to build pontoon landing stages. One of these landing stages was washed away by the waves within a few minutes of the Czar's expected arrival, but the Emperor and Empress insisted on the whole party scrambling ashore over the steep rocks.

Every master pilot was presented with a gold watch and each of his assistants [illegible] either a silver watch or a signed photograph of the Czar and a present of $15. When on board the Standart the chief pilot and his wife dined with the Emperor and Empress.

33⅓% PROFIT IN ONE WEEK

If you buy stock in the Parral-Mexico Mines Co. before Saturday, Nov. 10th, at midnight, you will have made a profit of 33 1-3 per cent by Monday morning, Nov. 12th. This stock sells this week only at 7½ cents per share and 10c per share on time payments. On Monday, Nov. 12, the price will be 10c per share cash, or 12½c per share time payment.

THIS IS A REAL MINE

This stock has a tangible value. It represents a property consisting of 6,000 acres of land, upon which is, at least, $200,000 worth of fine timber, a perpetual water right and a proven mine, upon which are four true fissure veins; all of these veins lie within a space of 300 feet across, and show plainly on the surface by outcroppings for over a mile on the property. The history of all fissure veins in this district which lie as these do proves that they converge and become one great mass of ore when greater depth is reached. Upon one vein 500 feet of development work has been done, and other development work has been carried on on other parts of the property.

PLENTY OF RICH ORE READY

The assays of the ore show values up as high as $400 to the ton. The company has a 10 Stamp Mill on the property, which was bought of Messrs. Fraser & Chalmers of this city, and which cost, when installed, in the neighborhood of $30,000. The Company also has a number of buildings on the property for the purpose of housing men and machinery, in addition to a store building where it purposes installing a stock of goods for sale to the miners on our property, and those who work in the mines adjacent to ours. The Company's store should be a very profitable enterprise in itself.

A CLEAN CUT PROPOSITION

We want to emphasize once more the fact that this is a legitimate mining proposition; that we are not going to the public and asking them to subscribe for stock that represents nothing but promises. Just as soon as sufficient money is subscribed we can begin work, and when we begin work we can begin taking out bullion. You are not going to be asked to wait four or five years until we discover whether we have a mine or not, then be asked for another long wait while we build a mill, supposing that we had made a discovery of rich ore.

PROMINENT BANK AS DEPOSITORY.

If you prefer, you are at liberty to make your remittance in payment for stock certificates to our bankers, Messrs. A. W. Jefferis & Co., Monadnock Building, Chicago, Ill., who will upon receipt of said remittance, return to you certificates of stock, sealed and signed by the officers of the Company.

We believe that if you will come to our offices, which are at Suite 703, 167 Dearborn St., directly opposite the First National Bank Building, and talk to us this week, that you will buy all of this stock you can pay for. You certainly will if you buy mining stock of any kind.

NO POOR MINES IN PARRAL.

Some people are prejudiced against mining stock, but the fact remains that the mines of Parral, Mexico, have never known a failure in any case where there was ore in sight. They have paid back billions.

We believe that with our present equipment we can earn $1,000 per day. We may earn ten times that, but we can't earn much less than $1,000 per day.

SHOULD EARN $2,000 PER DAY.

Just as soon as we have sufficient money, we shall double the capacity of our present plant, which will give us a daily output of 80 tons, and this should net us not less than $2,000 per day. We are surrounded by some of the richest mines in the world and are in the richest mining district in the world beyond any question. We have every right to expect that when we get down deep enough, we will uncover ore of fabulous richness and may earn $25,000 per day.

Don't forget that the price of this stock will advance after Saturday next. The safe plan would be to send your remittances, attached to the Coupon herewith attached TO-DAY.

There is still time to get our Prospectus, which goes into detail about the property, and which we will mail promptly upon request.

Fill out the enclosed Coupon, and mail with your remittance to-day. If you prefer, send your remittance to A. W. Jefferis & Co., Bankers, Monadnock Building, Chicago, Ill., or direct to us.

DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH AND HER CHILDREN.

DUCHESS, WHO HAS SEPARATED FROM HUSBAND, WITH HER TWO BOYS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

[illegible] Nov. [illegible]—The Duchess of Marlborough's [illegible] in her hour of separation from her husband is her two sons, whom she thinks are the two handsomest boys in England. Both of them resemble [illegible] in feature and disposition more than the Duke. She has been such a devoted mother that she has preferred the nursery to drawing rooms and her friends say that her slight deafness did not retard her social triumphs so much as her domestic [illegible].

The eldest son is the Marquis of Blandford, and the younger is Lord [illegible] Churchill. The latter, who bears [illegible] Duke of Marlborough, [illegible] young [illegible] and is eagerly sought as [illegible] by photographers for the aristocracy. Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Berlin, Nov. 3.—The Berliners have just discovered that Caruso is a great tenor. Although the famous singer created no furore when he appeared at a suburban opera house two years ago, his engagement just closed for three special performances at the Royal Opera House filled the house with [illegible] who gladly paid prices 200 and 300 per cent above the ordinary rates.

There was a queue 100 yards long outside the opera house when the box office opened, some people having waited from daylight till 10 a.m. to buy tickets.

Every seat for the three performances was sold in forty-five minutes and hundreds of people were turned away.

Vienna, Nov. 3.—When Caruso appeared at the Imperial Opera House here for charity [illegible] bookings. One box was sold by auction at [illegible] for $1,000, while seats in the fourth gallery, the ordinary price of which is 75 cents, were sold at from $7 to [illegible].

A crowd of several hundred waited all day for the fifty standing places which remained [illegible] when these had been [illegible] the disappointed majority had to be [illegible].

Singer Caruso has been appointed court singer to [illegible] Joseph.

FRENCH PRETENDER HOLDS SHAM COURT

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Nov. 3.—The entente cordiale which has already resulted in the interchange of all kinds of official visits between the English and French authorities has now advanced another step. This Fall it is the fashion for French and English people of position to exchange visits to their country houses.

The aristocratic Frenchwoman's idea of the English country house has yet to be recorded, but a British [illegible] who has just returned from a round of visits in France is [illegible] delighted that she has told all her friends to go and do likewise. Among the houses she visited was the chateau of the Duc de Luynes, where, unknown to the majority of English people and many Frenchmen, a regular little court is kept up when the Duc d'Orleans, the rightful King of France, stays in the house.

The Duke is always addressed as "Your Majesty," [illegible] At the chateau is a wonderfully interesting visitors' book full of historical names. To enter one's name in this book is recognized as a sacred privilege. The volume was buried in the grounds during the time of the French Revolution.

English visitors to French country houses are much impressed by the fact that house parties seldom exceed fifteen in number and at [illegible] each guest has a complete suite of rooms like a flat. This [illegible] a great contrast to the crowding and discomfort often found in large English country house parties.

LET ME MAKE YOU RICH
AT GOLDFIELD

It is a hard matter for the average man to imagine what $40,000,000 means, and when I tell you that Goldfield will produce in the neighborhood of $42,000,000 within the year ending July 1st, 1907, I am simply stating a fact that can easily be corroborated. On one piece of leased ground, perhaps 150x600 feet in area, which is leased by the Hayes-Monnette crowd, there will have been taken out during the month of October the stupendous total of 2½ tons of chemically pure gold! As a ton of gold has a coinage value of a little over $602,000, it means that this little block of ground on the famous Mohawk Mine will add to the world's circulating medium and the world's wealth $1,500,000 during the glorious month of October. This is at the rate of $50,000 a day; but the lessees are not satisfied with this production and are confident of doubling it before the year is over.

A few days ago the Hayes-Monnette people obtained permission at Denver to hook on two carloads of machinery on specially constructed cars, which were attached to the fast express, which cost them the trifling sum of $6,000 in freight charges. These cars contained large sized air-compressors and other machinery for their mines, and will break ore daily to the value of $100,000.

H. L. STEWART.

I am an old time miner. I have worked in the mines with a pick and have held various important positions in and about mines from the old bonanza days of Flood, Fair and Mackay, all of whom I knew personally, and worked with, down to the present day, when Goldfield is occupying the center of the stage. Like all other mining men, I have had opportunity come and knock at my door, and I have sometimes refused to open to her. I have been successful in the mining business, and the firm of which I am a member, Messrs. Killen, Warner & Stewart, stands high in the business world. We have made great mines. In days gone by I have tramped all over that section of Nevada, the Goldfield camp, that is now astonishing the world. I know every foot of that country.

I have just returned from there and have made an exhaustive and painstaking examination of the entire district. My knowledge of mines and mining and ores and the trend of ore bodies is now standing me in good stead.

Every shaft that is sunk in Goldfield will not be a second Hayes-Monnette by any manner of means, but experienced mining men, such as I claim to be, would have no difficulty in following the general direction of this great ore body, which underlies the whole district. I have followed as closely as possible the Mohawk vein, and have bought a property which, my judgment tells me, is on the same lead as all of the great producers, which are a little farther north from us. In fact, in the opinion of well posted miners, the district a little south of Goldfield proper will show even greater riches than the claims farther north. I am ready to stake my reputation and money that such is the case, and have bought a tract 1,200x1,500 feet, and shall begin operations there just as soon as the necessary funds are available.

The officers of this company have decided to offer this stock to the public at a popular price, inasmuch as it has been impossible so far for people of moderate means to buy Goldfield stock at any price less than 25c. on the dollar.

Of course, $100 invested in 25c. stock a year ago would have made a man enormously rich, provided one had bought stock in the Hayes-Monnette, this wonderful mine that I have referred to, which at one time sold for 15c. a share. To-day it would be impossible to buy a share of it at any price. The Florence stock sold at 40c., and was worth $3.00 per share on the first of September last. The Mohawk was first offered at 10c. On Wednesday last it was quoted at $12.50 and climbing. The Belmont is $6.12½ to-day. The Jumbo was started at 20c. a share, and is selling at $1.41 to-day. These stocks will in all probability quadruple in price within the next year. I confidently expect Mohawk to sell at $35 per share when the leases expire and the property is returned to the owners, and as Goldfield has been a camp of surprises, it would not at all surprise me if this stock went to $125 or more before two years have elapsed, if, indeed, any of it will be procurable at any price.

There is nothing to measure Goldfield by. There has been no camp like it, and, while Nevada has added nearly $1,000,000,000 to the world's supply of gold, yet it would appear that her mineral resources were still in the early development stage. While it is true that the Comstock Lode, Virginia City, Nev., produced more than $700,000,000, it is also true that at no time during its early development did it show such values as are shown in the district of Goldfield, which up to four or five years ago was a trackless desert. To-day an area covering 100 miles in length and between 30 and 40 miles in width has been staked out by thousands; and upon all sides mills have been erected, shafts are being sunk, strikes of ore carrying fabulous values in gold and silver are of daily occurrence. The camp looks more like an oil field than a gold camp, owing to the large number of shafts that are being sunk in all directions.

I take it that you will follow the same course in buying stock in a gold mine that you would if you were going to buy real estate, or diamonds, or any other commodity about which you were not thoroughly posted. You would naturally go to a man who had made a study of the commodity that you wished to buy; a man who had a reputation for square dealing as well as a knowledge of his business. For these reasons I am going to ask you to come and talk to me about this Goldfield stock. We own our property. Our title comes direct from the United States government by mineral location and is absolutely perfect. All the mining laws of the United States and of the state of Nevada have been complied with. The Goldfield Syndicate Mining Co. is incorporated under the laws of Arizona with capitalization of $1,000,000, divided into 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $1.00 each; fully paid and non-assessable, of which 500,000 shares are in the treasury.

JAMES I. JONES, Milwaukee, Wis.
E. W. DONAHOE, Chicago.
FRED B. MAGAW, Chicago.

Our claims cover 40 acres of ground, direct southwest of the city of Goldfield. On all sides of us are wonderful showings, and we have done enough preliminary work to warrant the belief that a valuable mine is here. The Company with which I am connected, the Killen, Warner & Stewart Co., will act as fiscal agents for this Company. We occupy a suite of offices on the 9th floor of the Merchants' Loan and Trust Co. Building, 135 Adams St., and you will find evidences of prosperity on all sides when you come to see us.

We have made a success of the mining business, and I am going on record here by saying that I believe this Goldfield stock that you will buy today at 10c per share or 12½c on time payments will go to par before many months have passed, and that it will be worth five times its par in two years.

I believe I am as well posted on the Goldfield situation as any man in the west to-day, and I am not going to start in at my time of life to back a loser. I am not going to put my money back of a loser, neither are any of the gentlemen connected with our Company, or the Company who own this mine.

If you can't come to our offices and talk to me this week, do the next best thing; send for our literature, and do it right away, so that you can get your portion of the allotment at the opening prices.

If you buy a block of this stock of sufficient size, even if it taxes your resources to meet the payments each month until you have paid for it, I want to say to you as man to man that I believe it will make you independently rich in less than a year, and my opinion is worth something, because I know the situation, and can read the handwriting on the wall.

The world has not yet waked up to what Goldfield is, or will be within the next few years.

Opportunities to buy stock at a low price in a mine almost within hailing distance of those record breakers will be few and far between. Come and talk to me this week.

If you can't come in, send in your remittance with coupon to be sure of getting in at the opening prices. It may mean your independence for life.

H. L. STEWART.

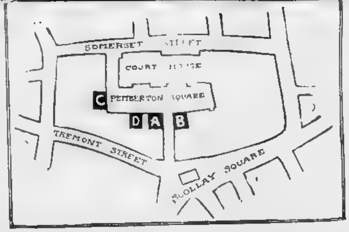
OWNERSHIP OF LAND IS AN ANCHOR TO WINDWARD



PEMBERTON SQUARE IN 1885, AND AS IT IS TO-DAY.

Four Arguments for the Doubter to Consider

Here is another quartette of arguments for the man who may be hesitating about investing his savings in real estate. In 1885 the value of the land in Pemberton square, according to the assessors' books at City Hall, was $1,099,400. To-day the same records show that the value of the land is more than $2,500,000.

Here are four parcels that strikingly illustrate the handsome profit to be gained from investment in real estate, aside from the unearned increment in the way of rentals. These values refer to the land alone:

	Sq. Feet.	Value 1885.	Value 1905.
A—Site of Pemberton Building ..	8,884	$61,100	$249,300
B—Site of Barristers Hall.......	11,000	86,800	345,200
D—Adjoining Carney Building .	4,300	34,400	88,300

THOUSANDS of dollars are being in[illegible] [illegible] by the wage-[illegible] of [illegible]. The men who work [illegible] week [illegible] to secure the means of support for themselves and families are [illegible] to the magnificent opportunities for the safe and profitable investment of a portion of their earnings offered by the [illegible] value of real estate in this [illegible]. It is an encouraging sign of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. Letters [illegible] by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN [illegible] advice as to the best places in which to buy the parcel of real estate that the wage-earner is beginning to realize will give him greater independence and a more free hand in shaping his own destiny. Time does not permit [illegible] reply to each of these communications. To all we should in any event have only this to say. Use your own best judgment. The articles printed from week to week in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN are not expected to create in the intending purchaser [illegible] for [illegible] locality in Boston [illegible].

[illegible] the earth that is bought by the wise man [illegible] is a security that can never get away from him through the dishonesty or business jugglery of others.

Any Man Can Own Home.

In the course of an interesting discussion recently at the opening of a new course in real estate at the Y. M. C. A., Charles S. Rackemann, a recognized local authority on problems and matters relating to real estate, said:

"Our experience is that any man who wants a home can have one of his own. Everybody who lives in America and is a citizen of the United States, and is interested in earning his livelihood and has some notion of his civic duty, should feel interested in all questions relating to land. [illegible] for [illegible] simple reason [illegible] contrasting the system in Europe and other [illegible] we find that in the United States the idea is always prominently before your mind of individual ownership.

There is food for thought in those words to the man who wants to be something more than a part of the [illegible] of the community in which he lives. As has been repeatedly stated, capital is not necessary to own your own lot of land either for investment or to erect upon it your own home. By [illegible] the easy payment plan, the man with only sufficient money to pay the first instalment, may become a land owner.

Buyers Now Cannot Lose.

In the estimation of men who are best qualified by long experience in the Boston realty market to judge conditions, the man who buys real estate to-day, using ordinary business judgment, cannot lose money.

"There is no doubt that properties bought anywhere in and around Boston, where a man uses any kind of good judgment, are bound to increase in value," declared John J. Cadigan, real estate appraiser, with offices at No. 110 State street, yesterday. Mr. Cadigan has had [illegible] extending over twenty years [illegible] his line of work. He is a recognized expert on the appraisal of [illegible] estate.

"The city of Boston is growing larger all the time," he said, "more people are coming here, and although property may get a setback for a time on account of labor troubles or high price of materials for building, it is bound to increase. And when the reaction does come it will more than make up for the temporary setback.

Suburban Property Good.

"The man who wants to own his own home cannot do better than invest in the suburbs of Boston to-day. The extension of transit facilities is bringing the suburbs closer to the heart of the city. For instance, in Mattapan there are streets and sections which only a few years ago were considered so far out that it was almost impossible for an owner to rent a house there.

"To-day, as the result of the extension of rapid transit to [illegible] [illegible] within [illegible] distance of the centre of the [illegible]. A great demand for land and houses has followed. Property has greatly increased in value, and rentals of $30 and $35 a month are easily obtained by owners to-day where a few years ago only $25 a month could be obtained.

"The man who buys a piece of land in the suburbs to-day, if only as an investment, is following in the path of the shrewdest business men with large capital, who are investing their money in downtown property. The way this property has increased in value and the handsome profit made upon the investment in past years, proves the soundness of their judgment."

The Girl who travels ALONE

IT was the proud boast of all zealous Americans for many years that this was a country in which a young woman might safely travel from sea to sea without a companion, so chivalrous were our men, so helpful and hospitable were our women. Europeans, hearing this boast, often remained unconvinced.

This theory held good up to a decade or two ago. Could it be confidently counted upon at the present day?

An answer to this question will be found in Eleanor Gates's series of articles on "The Girl Who Travels Alone," the first instalment of which appears in this issue of the Cosmopolitan. This magazine has presented many articles on social conditions, but in none has there been so widespread and vital an interest as there will be in "The Girl Who Travels Alone." And this is for the reason that the problem reaches into every household where there are girls to safeguard.

Miss Gates, who is the author of that charming study of Western life, "The Biography of a Prairie Girl," and of the no less carefully drawn "Plow-Woman," is a young woman of the West, who has also lived several years in New York. She has crossed the continent eight times. When she tells of the experiences of the lone girl traveler, she knows what she is writing about. At the same time her work is done with the delicacy of a graceful and uplifting womanhood.

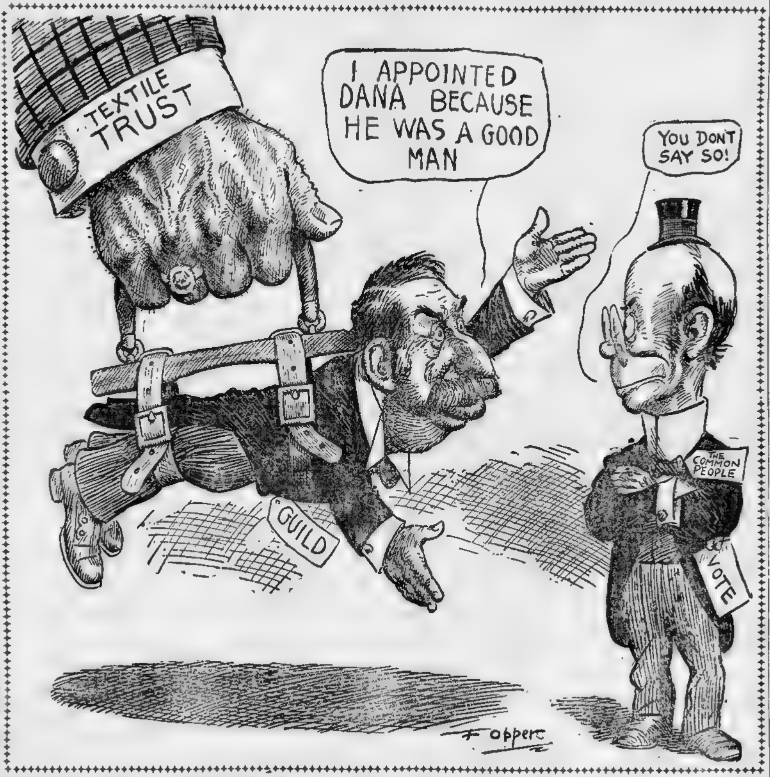
Cunning "Curtis"--The Trusts' Hand Out!



JURY GIVES WOMAN $2,000, IN SUIT FOR RICH MAN'S LOVE

Northampton, Nov. 3.—A jury verdict for $2,000 was to-day returned in the breach of promise suit of Emma M. Brodeur, a Boston milliner, against Frank P. Clark, a wealthy retired business man of Ware. The suit was for $20,000. The jury was out two hours and a half considering sensational testimony given at the trial.

A motion for a new trial was at once filed by Carroll & Simpson, attorneys for Clark. It will be argued before Judge Brown in Boston during the coming week.

Miss Brodeur wept when Attorney Carroll in his summing up denounced her. When he referred to Clark and declared that he came here in despair and [illegible] at the story in all its [illegible] the [illegible] covered her face in her hands and sobbed.

A sensational development in the trial was the discovery that Miss Brodeur had received only $50 of the $200 which Clark is alleged to have given to a lawyer named Kelley to procure a release from her.

SUES UNITED FRUIT COMPANY FOR $2,000,000

American Banana Co. Charges Conspiracy to Kill Its Trade.

New York, Nov. 3.—Charging conspiracy to monopolize the trade in bananas shipped from ports in South America to this country, the American Banana Company to-day began suit in the United States Court to recover $2,000,000 damages from the United Fruit Company.

It is charged in the complaint that the defendant company conspired to buy up the interest of a score or more of other shippers as well as buying out the options of a large number of owners of banana plantations.

It is claimed that the defendant company invested $450,000 in an effort to establish an independent line, but were compelled to close because of the opposition.

FIND WOMAN LOST 5 DAYS PINNED UNDER BOULDERS

Uxbridge, Nov. 3.—Her shoes torn, her clothing in tatters, her hair dishevelled, her features shrivelled and sunken, her hands lacerated and her feet bleeding, Miss Mary Sweeney, sixty-eight, barely alive, was found pinioned between two boulders at Rockdale to-day by one of the posses that have been [illegible] her ever since her [illegible] on Monday.

Miss Sweeney, who has been making her home with relatives at [illegible], four miles from this town, left there on Monday to walk to Rockdale, two and one-half miles on the other side of the town, for a visit to her brother, Paul Sweeney.

Never Reached There.

She never got there. All trace of her was lost with the report of acquaintances who had seen her passing through Uxbridge. It is supposed that the aged woman was suffering from temporary aberration, and that, confused, she wandered far from the beaten track. Her condition to-night is such that it is absolutely impossible to get any account of her terrible experience.

Many parties started out to beat the countryside in the effort to find her. That which succeeded was captained by Constable [illegible] Allen of Uxbridge, and it was to Constable Allen's home that the frail woman, more dead than alive, was borne to-night by her rescuers. Charles Johnson was the man who found her.

Afraid of Rescuers.

She apeared to be partially wedged between the boulders as if she had fallen exhausted, and at first she seemed to be in fear of the rescuers.

Hopes are entertained of her ultimate recovery and feeling of keen satisfaction pervades the community to-night at the solution of the week's mystery.

WAGE INCREASE ASKED BY FALL RIVER MILL WORKERS

Fall River, Nov. 3.—A demand for a 10 per cent. increase in wages has been made on the Manufacturers' Association by the Textile Council of Fall River.

The demand was forwarded to the secretary of the association a week ago. As yet no reply has been received, or, if it has, neither the employers nor the employes has made it public.

The increase asked, if granted, will restore the old wage scale in effect in the mills in 1903. In November of that year wages were cut ten per cent. The following July another cut of twelve and a half per cent. was made. This caused the great strike in which there was so much hardship and suffering.

Now the textile workers say the mills are prosperous and are making money rapidly. They believe that the owners can afford to increase wages, and they are sure they are entitled to more. The prosperous conditions of the mills was shown at the last quarterly meetings in October. These meetings showed that business during the past year has been exceedingly good. The Chase mill, for instance, during the past year has purchased a mill at Burlington, Vt., and paid for it in full out of its earnings, besides paying to its stockholders a 6 per cent. dividend and reducing its debt $31,000.

The Textile Council probably will meet early next week and a statement regarding the matter is expected.

WEALTHY AUTOIST KILLED AS MACHINE CRASHES INTO POLE

New Britain, Ct., Nov. 3.—Harvey Maxwell, aged 33, son of a wealthy Farmington merchant, was instantly killed this afternoon in an auto accident near the Berlin railroad station. He and two others were riding toward the south with a chauffeur in charge of the machine.

When [illegible] under the [illegible] road bridge near the station the chauffeur lost control of the steering [illegible] and the auto struck a telegraph pole and was wrecked. All were thrown out. Maxwell struck the pole and was killed instantly.

Watch the American's Election Bulletins On Night of Election

On next Tuesday night, the BOSTON AMERICAN will establish a complete bulletin service with the earliest results from all over Massachusetts and New York at the two most central points. One set of bulletins will be displayed at the juncture of Summer and Devonshire streets. The other will be located in Adams square.

These returns will give the results first in the greatest political battles ever waged in the two states.

Remarkable Wave of Enthusiasm Follows Brown and Williams in Whirlwind Auto Tour of Boston Wards, Thousands Cheering the Leaders.

WILL BEAT DOUGLAS' VOTE, SAYS FEENEY

Protest Against Bossism That Promises Hearst 200,000 in New York Is Sweeping Massachusetts.

Broken down by overwork, utterly exhausted by the labors of the campaign, and forbidden by his physician, Dr. V. C. Stewart, to leave his bed, John B. Moran passed the day and evening yesterday at the Quincy House, while thousands of voters, listening to E. Gerry Brown, George Fred Williams and other speakers at many rallies in the city and State, enthusiastically cheered his name whenever it was mentioned, even at the Republican rally in Tremont Temple.

Although anxious to do his share of the work in the whirlwind auto tour, embracing seven city wards and Hyde Park, which formed a fitting climax to the campaign, Mr. Moran was physically unable to do so. Early in the day it was realized that he could not appear and Dr. Stewart issued this bulletin:

"Mr. Moran is completely worn out. I have advised him that he make no more speeches. His condition demands absolute rest."

Later in the day Dr. Stewart issued this bulletin:

"Mr. Moran has been sleeping most of the time since early this afternoon. He is worn out from his exertions on the stump, but with rest and quiet I expect that he will be able to resume his speaking campaign Monday night. I positively refused to allow him to leave his room and attempt to speak to-night."

"TO EXCEED DOUGLAS' PLURALITY."

Although there will be rallies Monday night, those of last night practically ended the campaign. And the attendance at last night's meetings, together with the great enthusiasm shown, convinced the Democratic leaders that not only would Moran and Brown be elected, but that they would receive pluralities even greater than that given William L. Douglas in 1904. Late last night John P. Feeney, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, issued a statement in which he said:

"Mr. Moran will receive a much larger plurality in Boston than did Mr. Douglas, who, in 1904, was given 33,079 over Governor Bates. Mr. Moran received from 15,000 to 20,000 Republican votes in the contest a year ago, and he will receive every one of those votes in his contest this year. It is certain that Governor Guild's vote of last year will be greatly reduced, and Mr. Moran will be elected by a larger majority than Governor Douglas had."

Cheering news was received by the Democratic leaders here from New York, where, as in Massachusetts, a fight is being waged for the people against boss rule and oppression. Advices received late last night confidently predicted the election of William R. Hearst by at least 200,000 plurality.

The wave of enthusiasm that followed E. Gerry Brown and the Hon. George Fred Williams in their tours of the city was the most remarkable demonstration that Boston ever has seen. Nor were these speakers the only ones who were cheered by the voters of the city. Other speakers at the rallies, Mayor Fitzgerald, Congressman Keliher, Andrew J. Peters and many others, received ovations in the wards in which they appeared and Moran's name was cheered to the echo at practically every meeting.

LOOK FOR 35,000 BOSTON MAJORITY.

It was evident that, although he was unable to speak himself, "Achilles absent was Achilles still" and that his absence had no effect on the admiration which is felt for him and his principles.

Mr. Feeney's prediction as to the size of the plurality Mr. Moran will receive is more than borne out by the result of a straw ballot which the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN has been taking for ten days in Boston and thirty-five outside towns and villages. This ballot indicates:

Moran and Brown will carry Boston by 35,000.
Moran will be elected Governor by 95,000.
Brown will be elected Lieutenant-Governor by 125,000.
In 4,554 votes Moran's plurality over Guild is 1,096.
581 Republicans vote for Moran.
682 Republicans vote for Brown.
55 Democrats vote for Guild.
101 Democrats vote for Draper.

In the face of this great demonstration of Moran sentiment, and despite the fact that a large part of the audience at their biggest rally in Tremont Temple cheered when Moran's name was mentioned, the Republican speakers last night put forth strenuous efforts in behalf of their candidates. At the Tremont Temple meeting the speakers were Lieutenant-Governor Draper, Congressman George P. Lawrence, U. S. District Attorney Asa P. French, Congressman John W. Weeks and Henry L. Higginson, the presiding officer. Governor Guild was on Cape Cod, having made a tour of that district during the afternoon and evening and passing the night at Hyannis as the guest of Captain Robert Hammond. The Attorney-General of the United States, William H. Moody, made appeals for the Republican ticket in two Boston wards.

HUNDREDS UNABLE TO GET IN THE HALL.

The two principal Democratic speakers, Mr. Brown and Mr. Williams, left the Quincy House in automobiles about 7:30 o'clock. Mr. Brown was alone and the Hon. John A. Coulthurst accompanied Mr. Williams, who went direct to Hyde Park. When Mr. Williams reached Waverly Hall he found it jammed with people, while hundreds more were in the streets outside, unable to get in. James P. Ratigan presided and introduced the speakers. Besides Mr. Williams and Mr. Coulthurst they were David W. Murray, candidate for Congress [illegible] and Timothy F. Daly. The meeting was a most enthus[illegible] and [illegible] speakers were frequently interrupted by cheers.

The first place at [illegible] Mr. Brown spoke was Morton Hall, Forest Hills, in Ward 23. He arrived there at eight o'clock and found the hall crowded with people.

The presiding officer was John F. Cronin. Mr. Brown made a speech of about ten minutes, and then left the hall for Ward 21. After he had gone, Andrew J. Peters, candidate for Congress in the Eleventh District, made a sharp attack upon his Republican opponent, Daniel W. Lane. Other speakers at the rally were Mayor Fitzgerald, Joseph [illegible] O'Connell, candidate for Congress in the Tenth District, Congressman John A. Keliher and John P. Feeney.

When Mr. Brown arrived at the Dudley Street Opera House in Ward 21 he was obliged to force his way through the crowd to the stage. The opera house seats about 800 people, but it is estimated that fully 1,200 were crowded into it last night. Every inch of standing room was taken, and there were hundreds who either waited outside or returned to their homes disappointed.

Michael Shea was chairman of the meeting. When Mr. Brown entered Joseph A. Dennison was speaking. He yielded to Mr. Brown, who spoke about 15 minutes, and continued his speech after Mr. Brown left.

GIVE BROWN A ROUSING WELCOME.

Mayor Fitzgerald and Mr. Peters also spoke here, as did ex-Mayor Ramsdell of Lynn; Edward E. Brown, candidate for the House; W. T. A. Fitzgerald, candidate for register of deeds, and Senator John F. Cusick.

From Ward 21 the auto was speeded to the old Roxbury Court House, in Ward [illegible], where between 400 and [illegible] people had gathered to welcome the candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

Mr. Brown made a brief speech, and when he left his place on the platform was taken by W. T. A. Fitzgerald. W. J. Barrett, president of the Common Council, presided, and the other speakers were Mayor Fitzgerald, Mr. Ramsdell, Mr. O'Connell, Mr. Peters, John P. Feeney and F[illegible] J. [illegible].

Mr. Brown's next appearance was at the Ward 19 room on [illegible]wood street. This [illegible] the most enthusiastic meeting of the night. Eight hundred people [illegible] cheered enthusiastically [illegible] Mr. Brown and at the mention of Moran's name.

The presiding officer at this meeting was Timothey J. Ahern. Other speakers were Alderman Frank J. [illegible], Councilman Daniel J. [illegible], Councilman Timothy Murphy and J[illegible] F. O'Connell.

The last meeting which Mr. Brown addressed and which, next to the one in the Dudley Street Opera House, was the largest of the evening, was in Warren Hall, Brighton.

It was late when Mr. Brown arrived there and the crowd, which numbered more than [illegible], was beginning to leave. As they were streaming down the stairs Mr. Brown arrived. He was at once recognized, and almost every man turned and followed him back into the hall.

J[illegible] was the presiding officer and introduced the speakers, [illegible] Fitzgerald, Congressman Keliher, Andrew J. Peters, Joseph F. O'Connell, Street Commissioner James A. Gallivan, M. J. Cowie, P. H. Barry and James McGeough. This meeting ended Mr. Brown's tour, and thoroughly worn out, but happy, he started for his home in Brockton.

MANY INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE RALLIES.

It had been intended to have either Mr. Brown or Mr. Williams speak in Ward 11, but neither could get there, so those who gathered were addressed by Mayor Fitzgerald and John P. Feeney.

In many cities and towns outside of Boston enthusiastic rallies were held [illegible] by the Independence League.

[illegible] largest held by the latter was in Associate Hall, Lowell. The [illegible] the speakers, [illegible] Osgood, president of the League, [illegible] Bates and ex-Senator Philip J. Doherty, were given close attention and hearty applause.

Another meeting was held at North Attleboro, where Timothy W. Coakley was the speaker and which was attended by voters from many of the neighboring towns and villages.

[illegible] was the protest made at Salem by Rev. A. A. [illegible] of Congressman A. P. Gardner. A large [illegible] argument and applauded him heartily.

In [illegible] contrast to the attendance and enthusiasm shown [illegible] Democratic rallies [illegible] the meetings addressed by Attorney-General Moody in Wards 12 and [illegible]. At the Ward 22 meeting there were perhaps [illegible] people present. Senator Frank Seiberlich presided. Mr. Moody [illegible] much time in attacking John B. Moran and William R. Hearst. Others who spoke were Edward J. B[illegible], Daniel W. Lane, M. J. Murray, John Bleiler, Guy A. Ham, [illegible] Webster and Congressman Samuel W. McCall.

Mr. McCall [illegible] spoke at a rally in Ward [illegible] which addresses were [illegible] J. Elder and Congressman Gillett. Another Republican [illegible] attended by about 600 people [illegible] in South Boston in the interest of Hon. E. B. Callender, candidate for Congress. The only [illegible] of note beside Mr. Callender was Street Commissioner Hannan.

ENTHUSIASM FOR BROWN AND MORAN.

These were only a few of the rallies, large and small, that were [illegible] all parts of the State. Everywhere it was evident that the preponderance of sentiment was with Moran and Brown. Where there were Democratic and Republican rallies in the same locality the former, almost without exception, were the larger, while in the matter of enthusiasm [illegible] noticeable that the Republicans were hopelessly behind.

Guild and Lodge Dodge Issues.

Governor Guild has attacked Mr. Moran on the ground that he has neglected his duties as District Attorney by stumping the State the past three weeks. Mr. Moran [illegible] the past year. While Mr. Guild was stumping in Maine Mr. Moran was at his desk in the District Attorney's office. This fact is generally known. Therefore [illegible] along this line [illegible] to have made a strong impression.

Mr. Guild and also Senator Lodge [illegible] the other leaders of Republican [illegible] speaking [illegible] last week [illegible] Mr. Moran [illegible] they have attacked the BOSTON AMERICAN and its editor, William Randolph Hearst, who is not a candidate for any office in Massachusetts. Mr. Guild has [illegible] number of occasions [illegible] the BOSTON AMERICAN [illegible] of veracity [illegible] newspaper could not [illegible] cast light on his [illegible] Moran's fitness or unfitness to hold the high office of Governor.

Republicans for Moran.

Various newspapers have conducted polls [illegible] show throughout the State [illegible] gain for Moran and a loss for [illegible]. The poll of the Boston Globe [illegible] to be most systematic and [illegible] shows a percentage of Republicans [illegible] men as [illegible] Mr. Moran [illegible] by a good plurality. Why Moran Wins Voters.

"I believe Moran will enforce [illegible] the law now in existence with just [illegible]"

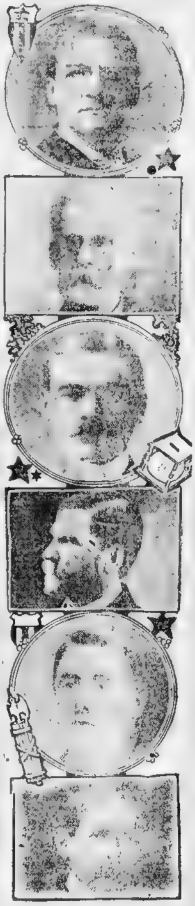
VOTE FOR THESE CANDIDATES ON ELECTION DAY



They are the Independence League [illegible] for Governor, John B. Moran; [illegible] Lieutenant-Governor, [illegible] for Secretary [illegible] Charles C. Paine for [illegible] George M. Harrigan for [illegible] Thomas L. Hisgen, and for [illegible] John A. Thayer.

See Defeat of Draper.

[illegible] Republicans [illegible] certainly [illegible] defect [illegible] very great [illegible] of Governor [illegible] controlled by [illegible] Whitney, [illegible] leaders of the [illegible] his opponent [illegible] they did not mean [illegible] that Draper [illegible] more for the [illegible] Brown himself a [illegible] argument [illegible] any work [illegible] office. And [illegible] its logical conclusion [illegible] that every Trust [illegible] positions [illegible]

Begin when your children are young. Buy them each a tooth brush; let them use your Sozodont, and you will find that the first teeth will remain much longer and give way quickly to the second ones.

Don't let them wait until they can read before they learn about Sozodont. The sooner they learn, the better for their teeth. Sozodont is the very best thing for the teeth.

Sozodont is made in three forms: liquid, powder and paste. Sozodont is sold everywhere.

U.S. BATTLESHIP VIRGINIA IN COLLISION

GUNS DISPLACED AND SHIP'S SIDES SCARRED

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 3.—The battleship Virginia, passing up to the Norfolk Navy Yard today, was rammed on the [illegible] by the Old Dominion steamship Monroe, coming in from New York.

The vessels came together with [illegible] force, resulting in the [illegible] battleship [illegible] fixtures. The [illegible] of the Monroe were stove in.

Both vessels were steaming [illegible] the river, the [illegible] suddenly [illegible] and the Monroe [illegible] time to avoid the collision [illegible] engines were [illegible].

Nothing official [illegible] from either ship regarding [illegible] the action of the [illegible] collision it seems certain [illegible] machinery [illegible] signals to the [illegible] given or misunderstood.

WOMAN AUTOIST IN BALLOON RACE AND COURSE.

"La Centaure" Breaks All Speed Records in Splendid Voyage Through Air, Culminating in Thrilling Descent at Edge of Long Island Sound.

New Haven, Nov. 3.—The balloon La Centaure, starting from Pittsfield, Mass., after breaking all aerial speed records in this country almost carried its three occupants—Leo Stevens, Captain Homer Hedges and Lieutenant S. L. Butler of the army, into Long Island Sound this evening. The daring aeronauts, flying ahead at the rate of 60 miles an hour in a terrific gale, suddenly saw almost beneath them the dark waters of the Sound. The valves were torn open and the gigantic bag descended with a crash into a clump of trees within 200 feet of the beach at East Haven.

The basket miraculously passed through the branches without overturning and the balloonists escaped with a shaking up [illegible] a few [illegible] was the [illegible] aged greatly [illegible] believe although on account of the darkness they were obliged to leave it in the trees until tomorrow morning.

Aeronauts Are Delighted

Of [illegible] the aeronauts are immensely pleased at the success of their trip because they think the highest rate of speed ever [illegible] in this country was made. The 156 miles from Pittsfield to East Haven was covered in 170 minutes. This includes one stop on the top of a high hill near Otis, Mass. A strong northwest wind grew into a gale at sundown and the speed from the vicinity of Hartford to this city was about sixty miles an hour.

Mr. Stevens tells of the trip this way:

"We left Pittsfield at 4.10 o'clock this afternoon. The wind was from [illegible] strong [illegible] the north with a [illegible] westerly [illegible] sky was clear and we moved up to [illegible] 2,000 feet and covered distance rapidly. About 5.30 o'clock we could see Springfield to the northeast and [illegible] far southwest.

"We [illegible] started out for a hunting trip with [illegible] idea of shooting at something from the balloon. We thought we saw something in the woods so we landed but it was not anything worth shooting so we went up again after a couple of minutes.

"All this time a number of autoists had kept after us. Mr. Knight and Mr. Bis[illegible] of Pittsfield followed about seventy miles. Knight was a wonderful driver, without fear but as darkness came on he had to fall behind.

"That was as we were passing to the westward of Hartford in sight of the Connecticut River on our left as we [illegible] along. We went down near the ground as we passed Hartford and lots of people hurried out into the fields and [illegible] to us, but we could not hear them, we were going so fast and the wind was blowing so hard.

"As the sun went down, instead of d[illegible] away the wind blew stronger and stronger [illegible] around to the north. There [illegible] sized cities between Hartford [illegible] New Britain, Meriden [illegible] and North Haven [illegible] in the gathering darkness [illegible] speed of the fastest express.

[illegible] it was getting dark no one saw [illegible] we passed the vicinity of New [illegible] we had decided what it was [illegible] almost over it.

'Came Down Like Lead.'

We hastened to open the valves and [illegible] came like lead. We thought we were going to be blown out into the water. [illegible] caught in a clump of trees [illegible] beach, near East Haven, about [illegible] from the shore and we landed [illegible]. The balloon was [illegible] but we were deposited on the ground all right, though a little shaken up. [illegible] at 7.15 o'clock then [illegible] dark, [illegible] decided to leave the balloon until [illegible] morning. We [illegible] way to [illegible] and were [illegible] to the line at East Haven where we took [illegible] for this city, four miles away. [illegible] was the most successful trip I ever [illegible]. It was a beautiful day and evening and everything worked smoothly. We could have gone 100 miles more as far as the balloon was concerned. It was a [illegible] sensation, speeding through the [illegible] towns and fields and cities especially through the darkness with the twinkling lights below.

"The highest altitude we made was [illegible] feet. The wind was generally [illegible] but we struck one or two cross [illegible] that threatened to make trouble [illegible] was not very cold. We estimate [illegible] at 170 miles, and [illegible] rather slowly at first it is easy [illegible] that we were hustling along [illegible] the end of the trip. This will be [illegible] last trip this season.

We are all feeling very well except that Captain Hedges strained his back a little in landing."

Thrilling Descent of Balloon As Told by Aero Club Voyager

Suddenly we saw the black blot on the face of the earth made by the Sound. We hastened to open the valves, and we came down like lead. The anchor caught in a clump of trees near East Haven, and we landed with a bump.

The balloon was caught in the trees, but we were deposited on the ground all right, though a little shaken up.—Leo Stevens

MAMMOTH POULTRY FARM

Largest Enterprise of this Character Ever Undertaken. A Chance for All to Participate in the Profits.

10 Per Cent. Dividends Guaranteed

AN UNEQUALED OPPORTUNITY FOR SMALL INVESTORS

To raise Poultry upon a scale never heretofore attempted is the purpose of some hard-headed business men in New York State. A 260-acre farm, offering ideal conditions for poultry raising, has been purchased and is being rapidly stocked.

Mr. Chas. A. Cyphers, of Buffalo, N. Y., one of the foremost poultry experts of the United States, is directing the enterprise and his marked ability [illegible] guarantees beyond question [illegible].

Persons [illegible] with the poultry industry have [illegible] of its magnitude. According to [illegible] Five Hundred Million [illegible] of Poultry and Eggs are produced annually in the United States. This vast sum exceeds [illegible] the iron and steel products [illegible] far in excess of the wheat and corn grown on the farms of the country and is more money than all the gold and silver mines of the world produce in a year.

The peculiar feature [illegible] immense industry is the fact that fully four-fifths of the product is raised by farmers and small poultrymen, who care [illegible] knowledge of the science of [illegible] or raising poultry. The stock [illegible] for [illegible] are [illegible] we are [illegible] and yet [illegible] under most circumstances poultry keeping frequently pays as high as fifty per cent on the investment.

To enter the poultry business on a large scale under the most favorable [illegible] and management [illegible] the Model Poultry Company was formed.

The plan enables one to make money out of [illegible] poultry without knowing anything about the business [illegible] devoting any time to [illegible] $10.00 up. [illegible]

CHARLES A. CYPHERS

The Man at the Helm

[illegible]

Ideal Location.

[illegible] recent interview with Mr. Cyphers [illegible] enterprise [illegible] For several years I have [illegible] time [illegible] 42 [illegible] from Buffalo [illegible] By buying three adjoining farms [illegible]

With the [illegible] advantage of a good growing climate, we have an ideal location for a large and successful poultry farm."

At Least 10% Guaranteed.

"No matter how promising the future of a business may be, the first year or two are generally looked upon as a constructive rather than a profit making period. In the case of the Model Farm I have the business so well in hand that I WILL PERSONALLY GUARANTEE AN ANNUAL DIVIDEND OF [illegible] PER CENT, FOR THE FIRST TWO YEARS.

"I confidently expect the business to earn more than this the first year and more than 20 per cent, the second. Title to the farm was not secured until the middle of April, and yet in this short time just see the remarkable progress we have made. Carpenters and laborers have been steadily working all Summer, erecting large brooding and laying houses, and by the time snow flies we will have brooding capacity for 50,000 chicks and [illegible] houses for eight thousand head. Notwithstanding the confusion caused by the building operations we started right in to raise poultry. By running our incubators and using a portable equipment of colony brooders and small colony houses we overcame every obstacle. We had, on October 1st, after a period covering only five and one-half months, over 16,000 growing chicks and over 3,000 ducklings, and had already marketed over 3,000 ducklings and twice as many broilers. Our receipts from the broilers and ducklings now going to market are already meeting our expenses for poultry work and within thirty days we will be making a handsome profit.

$50,000 Yearly Profit.

"For the second year I plan to raise [illegible] hundred thousand broilers and roasting chickens and to carry from twenty to twenty-five thousand [illegible] for market eggs. For the full first year's [illegible] of a hen's life an average profit of $1.2[illegible] can be made. Twenty thousand head will [illegible] net a profit of $25,000.00. A hundred [illegible] broilers and roasters will net as much [illegible].

"The Model Poultry Company is incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, capitalized at $100,000.00—10,000 shares of a value of $10.00 each, fully paid and nonassessable. I personally subscribed and paid for $[illegible] worth of stock. A portion has been set aside and is being sold in small subscriptions to poultrymen who wish to ship their product to our selling agencies and to profit by the educational value of the bulletins which will be issued for the benefit of all stockholders who keep or contemplate keeping poultry for pleasure or profit. We shall establish our own selling agencies, eliminating the middleman and securing the top price for the company and for the subscribers.

"To properly finance the company and enable it to do a large and profitable business, a portion of its capital stock is offered to investors.

[illegible] proposition without any [illegible] work [illegible] stock in the Model Poultry Company is being sold only at par [illegible] every share of stock [illegible] has been paid for and is worth one hundred cents on the dollar."

Safe as a Savings Bank.

"This is not a wild-cat mining proposition, with [illegible] to one of success [illegible] inviting one to [illegible] which exists only on [illegible] profits. The Model Poultry Company [illegible]. The Model Farm [illegible] than five months show [illegible] money for its [illegible] to secure a safe [illegible] investment [illegible] as safe as the usual [illegible] mortgage that pays [illegible] I will personally guarantee a 10 [illegible] dividend for two years covering the construction period of a new [illegible] I will do this because I KNOW THE [illegible] ARE ALL AT [illegible] of a stock [illegible] must be [illegible]

[illegible] interested [illegible] in which [illegible]

MORAN WILL WIN THROUGH POPULAR REVOLT—FEENEY

John P. Feeney, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, last night issued a statement in which he said:

"The entire Democratic ticket will be elected. Close observation of the tremendous reception which Mr. Moran and his colleagues upon the ticket have received in every city and large town in the State has shown that there is in progress an extraordinary popular awakening.

"It is not an aimless discontent which will defeat Governor Guild and his colleagues, but it is the result of [illegible] constant evidence which has convinced the great popular jury that the present [illegible] and the men who [illegible] for them have become [illegible]. It is a revolution of public opinion.

Guild Vacillating in Office.

"While Governor Guild and Lieutenant Governor Draper will lose thousands of votes this year on account of a weakness peculiar to their own personalities, Governor Guild because he has been weak and vacillating in office, and Lieutenant Governor Draper because he has set his face against the overwhelming sentiment of Massachusetts against further tariff robbery, we do not rely upon the personal weakness of our opponents. Our hope rests on the great change which has come over the public mind.

"Mayor Fitzgerald, probably the best judge of politics in Boston, claims that Mr. Moran will receive a majority of from [illegible] to 30,000 votes in Boston. In the [illegible] a year ago, when Mr. Moran was opposed by both political machines, [illegible] received from 15,000 to 20,000 Republican votes. Mr. Moran will receive [illegible] of these votes in his contest this year. Mr. Moran will, therefore, receive a much larger plurality in Boston [illegible] did Mr. Douglas, who in 1904 received 35,079 plurality over Governor [illegible].

NIGHT OF SONG AT SYMPHONY CONCERT.

Dr. Muck, with Mme. Fremstad as Soloist, Gives a Melodious Program.

AUDIENCE MOVED TO ENTHUSIASM

By Kent Perkins.

It was a lyric evening at the fourth Symphony concert of the season in Symphony Hall last night. For those good folk to whom tuneful melody is all in all, the programme was one long uninterrupted pleasure.

They were unvexed by any staid classicism that, according to their view, leans too far backward in its dignity to be pleasing; they were untroubled by any geometric figuration or brazen blare of the ultra-modern striving for novelty. They drank deep drafts of glorious song from Weber, Schubert and Schumann, and were content without surfeit.

Now Dr. Muck dearly loves a song—a real song—and it delights his soul to help the Symphony Orchestra sing it with all the moving force that high artistry can command. So he threw himself into the work of last evening with a fervor and illumination of interpretation that developed new beauties in the well known melodies given forth by the musicians.

The "popular" character of the programme and the presence of Mme. Olive Fremstad as soloist served to fill every seat in the hall.

First came Weber's ever gentle [illegible] overture to "Der Freischütz." Then Mme. Fremstad sang the lovely [illegible] aria from the same opera, "How [illegible] I slumbered," and "Softly [illegible]." Her dramatic expression was satisfying and not overdrawn, while her singing of the air made familiar by [illegible] use as a church hymn gave extreme pleasure.

Schubert's Unfinished Symphony in B minor, in which if in any human song the music of the spheres may be heard, was played with uplifting effect.

Mme. Fremstad sang Schumann's "Ich Grolle Nicht" and "Mondnacht" and Schubert's [illegible]. She was [illegible] only with the piano and it seemed [illegible] like a recital at this [illegible] Symphony Concert. She was [illegible] in the "Erlking" with its dramatic possibilities and was recalled repeatedly [illegible] hearty applause.

Schumann's Symphony No. 1, [illegible] the hope and beauty and glory of S[illegible] are pictured in matchless melody and harmony, called forth the highest efforts [illegible] of Dr. Muck and the [illegible] results that will long be remembered [illegible] their hearers.

Next Friday and Saturday the orchestra will be on tour, so there will be neither rehearsal nor concert.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and, mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies, soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article and sold by druggists and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin diseases as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers" will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers, a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

SHILOH GIRL FLEES CITY

Mysterious 'Holy Ghost' Disciple Eludes Half-Crazed Mother

COLONY WILDLY CALLS SANDFORD IN ITS FIGHT

Fears Probe Into Charges Made by Mrs. Phelps in Her Search.

ALL MAINE IS AROUSED

May Phelps, the mystery girl of Shiloh for whom her mother has been seeking two weeks and who has thus far been successfully hidden by the elders of the Holy Ghost and Us colony, has now fled from her hiding place in Milton, where she was discovered by the BOSTON AMERICAN.

To-day the mother, Mrs. Alice Phelps of Kansas City, is in Boston, baffled in her hunt for the girl and heartbroken over this latest escapade of her daughter. Where the girl is now her Milton protector, Mrs. [illegible] Craig, refuses to state. She says [illegible] last she is [illegible]

Mrs. Phelps [illegible] SUNDAY AMERICAN [illegible] on Mrs. [illegible]

Asked for Miss Phelps.

"I should like to see Miss Phelps," said the reporter.

"She is gone," said Mrs. Craig.

"Did she leave [illegible] night after she [illegible] to an AMERICAN reporter?"

"Yes," answered Mrs. Craig. "She did [illegible] where [illegible]. She said [illegible] be where she could rest undisturbed [illegible]"

"Has her mother been here looking for her?"

"Yes," replied Mrs. Craig. "Mrs. Phelps was here [illegible] I could tell her [illegible] you. I don't know where Miss Phelps has gone."

Mrs. Craig said that neither Elder George Jewell nor any other Shiloh apostle had visited her home to see Miss Phelps. Reports have come from Maine that the Shiloh leaders were about to send a man to Boston to take her back to the colony.

Says Mother is Misled.

In her statement to the BOSTON AMERICAN, Miss Phelps said:

"I have not been detained at Shiloh [illegible]. My mother is a good [illegible] but she has been misled by re[illegible] about Shiloh. When she said that [illegible] left there she would appeal to the [illegible] to come to Massachusetts. [illegible] here and it was easy to do so because of my good friends.

"It is unjust to say that we are starved and abused at Shiloh. We have all we need and I have been perfectly happy during the years I passed there. I wish to remain there and spread the Gospel to the ends of the earth."

A dispatch to the SUNDAY AMERICAN received last night from Lewiston, Me., said:

Elders Discuss Case.

The case of Miss Phelps was discussed by the elders in the Tabernacle, as well as the threat of Maine authorities to step in and find out the true condition of affairs through a rigid investigation.

"Governor Cobb is said to be behind County Attorney Ralph W. Crockett in the latter's expressed determination to break up the colony. State Agent E. N. Perry of the Maine Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children is to visit the settlement Monday and learn if there are any little ones there who require his intervention.

"Statements that children are famished have been spread broadcast. Agent Allen of the Society visited Shiloh and reports that conditions are deplorable.

"When Elder Jewell was asked if he was going to Milton, Mass., to see Miss Phelps, he said: 'May Phelps will return to Shiloh despite investigations, petitions and all kinds of attempts by her mother to win her from our religion. I refuse to say when she will return. That is our business only. Her mother will not know and has no right to know. Just now she is resting in Milton. I will not state which one of our members has been sent away to see her.'

Elders Will Resist.

"State Agent Perry may have an exciting experience if he tries to visit Shiloh.

MAY PHELPS, SHILOH GIRL, WHO AGAIN ELUDES MOTHER.

The elders are preparing to vigorously resist any attempt to break up the colony by legal proceedings. They are making ready to defy Governor Cobb and County Attorney Crockett if the officials resort to courts or legislature to execute threats.

"Whatever move is made the elders will depend upon Attorney Henry E. Coolidge of Lisbon Falls, Sandford's personal counsel to fight for their cause. 'I will fight Sandford's battles as I have fought them before,' said Attorney Coolidge to a SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter, 'and I am quite as positive that Maine officials will be no more able to drive the Holy Ghost Society now than in the past.'

"Nothing has been heard as yet in reply to the cablegram sent 'Elijah' Sandford. It implored his presence at Shiloh to direct resistance. Leaders are anxiously awaiting a message from 'Elijah' in Jerusalem. Another cablegram in cipher was sent to him to-night by Elder Jewell. It is believed to be another frantic appeal. It is said that it also informs him that $5,000 in contributions had been received."

SIGNS POINT TO VICTORY FOR HIGGINS.

Democrats and Reformers Now Claim Lower House of Legislature.

Providence, Nov. 3.—All signs point to the election of Mayor James H. Higgins of Pawtucket on Tuesday next as the next Governor of Rhode Island.

This means the downfall of General Charles R. Brayton as the Republican boss of the State. The main issue of Mayor Higgins' campaign has been "Braytonism," and he has promised that, if elected, he will end boss rule and drive General Brayton from the State House.

But should all signs fail and Mayor Higgins be defeated, the election will still mark the end of "Boss" Brayton's career if Governor Utter is sincere in his denunciation of boss rule.

Governor Utter has publicly denounced General Brayton as a menace to the State and a blot on its escutcheon. By his course he has virtually read himself out of the Republican party and laid himself liable to knifing at the hands of General Brayton's friends, and has greatly strengthened the chances of Mayor Higgins' election.

All over the State Democrats are jubilant and Republicans [illegible] the outlook. The hard fought and most important campaign the State ever has seen practically closed to-night after almost half a hundred rallies in different cities and towns.

The claims of the Democrats are large, but it is undoubtedly the fact that the conditions justify large claims. The leaders of the party declare that Mayor Higgins will be the next Governor and there will be a Democratic majority in the Lower House of the General Assembly, and that the party has more than an even chance to control the Grand Committee. Going through the hospitals in our large cities one is surprised to find such a [illegible] proportion of the [illegible] women [illegible] [illegible] Why [illegible] at [illegible] case? The following letters cannot fail to bring hope to despairing women.

I Am Not Treating

MARY BAKER EDDY FOR CANCER

Dr. James M. Solomon, Boston's Eminent Cancer Specialist, Says

But was called by Mrs. Baker, sister-in-law, who suffered from the terrible disease. If Mary Baker Eddy has cancer I can cure her without an operation

It has been publicly announced in the Daily Press within the last few days that the founder and leader of the Christian Science Church was afflicted with cancer and was under treatment by a Boston Specialist. This report has since been vigorously denied by Mrs. Eddy and others, and apparently the report is untrue and without foundation. As I am the best known Specialist in the treatment of cancer in Boston (and in fact in this country), I have been asked by a great many people if I was treating Mrs. Eddy. I have not treated her, never have seen her, and do not know anything about her. I was, however, a few years ago sent for by a Mrs. Baker, who said she was the wife of Mrs. Eddy's brother, who was sick, and asked me to examine her. I found her suffering from a very large and malignant growth which I diagnosed as cancer. There was no question of this diagnosis as others had examined her and pronounced it Cancer. She had been under Christian Science treatment for some time and was finally given up as an incurable and hopeless case, and this proved to be true, as I found her beyond all help, but I firmly believe that had I seen the case early I could have effected a cure.

I mention this circumstance to show the utter fallacy of any one afflicted with cancer or tumor submitting to any but common sense, rational, tried and proved treatment. Cancer is a fact, not a fancy; it is real and not imaginary; it must be vigorously and persistently fought until every root and branch is destroyed. This can only be done in one way, destroy the cause. My treatment accomplishes this and is the secret of my success in these diseases. I cannot cure all cases that come to me, no man can, but I can cure all cases that are not beyond all help when I see them. Cancer is a disease that will not admit any delay. If you have any bruise, lump, sore, wart, mole or anything that does not readily disappear with ordinary treatment, come to me at once, as it is often the beginning of serious trouble. It will cost you nothing for consultation or examination, and I will advise you fully regarding the proper treatment for you to pursue.

My method of treatment is entirely by absorption and requires no operating. No loss of blood, no pain, no shock, no confinement. Nothing used but nature's remedies, roots, herbs, gums, barks and berries, gathered and compounded under my personal supervision, no poisonous or harmful minerals. My external remedies consist principally of soothing, healing and balmy oils. My cures are positive and permanent. My fees are reasonable and within the reach of all. Consultation is free at office or by mail. If you cannot call send for BOOKLET and SYMPTOM BLANK. References and testimonials furnished if desired. Address

THIS WEEK 50,000 shares at 5c. a share for eastern investors.

FORTUNES MADE IN A DAY The wildest excitement ever known prevailed in the San Francisco stock exchange last week when Goldfield mining stocks began to take such a sensational rise. Many stocks jumped from a few cents to several dollars a share in twenty-four hours, and the man of modest circumstances of yesterday is the millionaire of to-day.

The New York Herald of Nov. 1 tells the dramatic story of how W. B. Thompson, the mining engineer, made $5,000,000 in the past three months in the Nipissing mine. The stock jumped from $4.00 a share to $33.87!

Sensational as has been this advance, conservative mining men predict that it is only the beginning.

The Goldfield Ledge mine is on the same formation; it actually adjoins the group of claims owned by Charles M. Schwab, the millionaire steel trust king, and it is quite possible that the Goldfield Ledge will be THE GREATEST MONEY-MAKER OF THEM ALL!

TREMENDOUS FORTUNES IN GOLDFIELD MINES!

Rielly Lease of the Florence, Goldfield, from which $750,000.00 was taken in seventy days by the lessees, leaving a fortune in sight at its expiration. The high grade ore carrying $5,000.00 per ton, some worth $10.00 a pound.

CARLOAD OF ORE VALUED AT $1,000,000 CREATES GREAT EXCITEMENT AT GOLDFIELD

What can I say and what can I do to still further open the eyes of eastern investors to the enormous possibilities of the CONSOLIDATED NEVADA MINES SYNDICATE? I fully believe [illegible] the stock in this great company I am now offering you at 40 cents a share will [illegible] to several dollars, perhaps to $5 or $[illegible] in 60 days. I should not be surprised [illegible] of recent developments, if that [illegible] place within [illegible] days.

Think what your investment, even a modest one, would amount to then?

Perhaps you read my advertisement last week. If you did you are more or less conversent with this great proposition. But for the benefit of those who did not let me briefly review the facts:

The Conslidated Nevada Mines Syndicate is, in truth as it's name implies, a consolidation of ten great mining properties, [illegible] in ten of the richest mining camps in Nevada. In Goldfield, 400 acres; in Bull Frog, [illegible] acres; in Tonopah, 80 acres; in Manhattan, 2[illegible] acres, in Palmetto, 200 acres; [illegible] 450 acres; in Silver Peak, 1[illegible] acres; [illegible] 150 acres; in Clifford, 120 acres; in Death Valley, 240 acres.

Think of a company owning property enough for 50 great mines, any one of which should pay big dividends on its low capitalization of only $1,250,000.

Telegraphic dispatches to Eastern newspapers state that the brokers on the San Francisco Stock Exchange have been simply deluged with orders for Nevada mining stocks—brokers fought and scrambled with one another to fill orders amid the utmost excitement!

I have never known such a period of excitement and such a rapid, although healthy, rise in mining stock values as at the present time. Tonopah extension has advanced to $[illegible] share and Montana to $1.7[illegible].

The Mohawk advanced by leaps from $[illegible] to $11.00 a share and eager buyers [illegible] that was offered. But little over [illegible] ago Mohawk went begging at 14 cents [illegible] while six months ago it was selling at 40 cents a share!

Of these Goldfield is just now the center of the greatest excitement. A single car [illegible] of ore will soon be shipped from the H[illegible] & Monnette lease on the Mohawk in Goldfield which will contain $1,000,000 worth of gold ore!

On the Rielly lease of the Florence in Goldfield $750,000.00 was taken out in seventy days. Think of it! The photograph at the top of this ad shows the high grade ore stocked up in sacks—some of it worth $10.00 a pound!

And these are our neighbors! You see we are in good company. Not in one camp but in ten! Not on a few claims [illegible] claims (2,400 acres) [illegible] mines.

2,400 ACRES

In Proven Locations Where Many Fortunes Have Been Made

Do you realize for one moment [illegible] means to you? It means [illegible] opportunities for making a fortune [illegible] greater than stock in any one [illegible] offered the public to-day!

Use your own solid common sense [illegible] tell me why you should pay from [illegible] 50 cents a share for stock [illegible] owns about 100 acres in one [illegible] can buy stock in this company [illegible] acres in ten camps. On the same basis our stock ought to be selling for $8.00 a share!

It isn't necessary for me to take a whole page to convince you that your chances of wealth are ten-fold greater if your properties are scattered in ten rich districts.

Would you prefer to wait and pay $5.00 a share for this stock or will you buy this week and secure it for 40 cents a share? Keep watch of the newspapers and note the rapid even sensational advance of Nevada mining stocks and you will begin to realize the magnitude of the proposition I offer you.

I desire to be conservative in every statement I make to you. I will tell you the exact facts. It is then for you to exercise your judgment.

I have sought out these facts for myself. I have exercised my judgment on the facts as presented and finally I have backed my judgment with a personal investment of $5,000.00 in this company. It remains to be seen whether I—rather let me say whether YOU and I will make our fortunes.

In Goldfield there lives a man whom I know well. He has sat at my table and accepted my hospitalities. Three years ago he did not have $500 as the sum of his earthly possessions. To-day he is rated at over one million dollars. I know that he made it all in Nevada gold mines and I asked his advice. He said: "Buy it. Buy all you can afford to. Buy it now, NOW!"

On his advice I did buy and I am passing his advice along to you to-day for what it is worth.

I am authorized to sell CONSOLIDATED NEVADA MINES SYNDICATE to you this week for 40 cents a share. It is an utter impossibility to guarantee this price for any length of time on account of the rich strikes in Nevada and the extreme probability of a rich strike being made on one or more of our ten properties any day.

Very truly yours,

Lafayette E. Pike

CAPITALIZATION 1,500,000 SHARES; 500,000 IN TREASURY, PAR VALUE $1. Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

The Company owns outright four full mining claims, or eighty acres, on Bonanza Mountain in Bullfrog Mining District, situated within half a mile of the town of Rhyolite. The claims are known as Rush, Rush No. 1, Index and Keystone. They adjoin those of the Bullfrog Denver Mines Company and the Peerless Mining Company on the North, while on the East is the property of the Bonanza Mining Company.

Development work was commenced on the Rush Group February 7th, this year, since then one of the greatest ore bodies ever opened up in Nevada has been disclosed.

There are four great veins on the property, the Rush vein being over 300 feet wide, of which 179 feet will pay to mill, giving average values from $8 to $10 per ton.

The great Denver vein, forty feet wide, passes completely through the property. On this same vein in the Denver ground, at a depth of 300 feet, a tremendous body of ore has been exposed, averaging $60 per ton. A double compartment shaft, now down 90 feet, is being sunk at the junction of the Denver and Peerless ledges, and it is expected at the 300-foot level to find even greater values than have been found on the Denver, as on the RUSH ground the two great veins come together.

The amount of development work accomplished on the Rush Group since it was taken over by the Company nine months ago is one of the wonders of the Camp. More than two thousand feet of tunnel work have been driven, besides shafts and winzes amounting to a thousand feet more. Tremendous bodies of free milling ore have been exposed, and the property is justly regarded as one of the great mines of the Bullfrog District.

The development work done on the main and north lateral tunnels thus far on the Rush claims, allowing fourteen cubic feet to the ton, shows seven hundred thousand tons of good milling rock, which will average from $8 to $10 per ton, according to Superintendent Boston's report.

On the Index Claim of the Rush Group, which is located on the east side of Bonanza Mountain, extensive development work has also been accomplished, but the ore tonnage has not been blocked out as on the Rush claim, but the various tunnels and shafts demonstrate a continuous ore body for the full length of the claim, with the high average milling values of $14 to $16.

More than SIX MILLION DOLLARS' WORTH OF ORE has already been blocked out in this property, and the amount exposed will warrant the erection of the largest reduction plant in the District, which the Company will build at the earliest possible date.

This great property, with huge ore reserves and tremendous veins, is more of a commercial proposition than a mine, as is generally understood, and with a proper reduction plant should be able to pay dividends of not less than twenty per cent. per annum upon its capital for years to come.

Professor G. E. Bailey, former professor of mineralogy in the State School of Mines of South Dakota, later Superintendent of the Harney Peak Mining Company in the Black Hills, which treated 250 tons per day in its mills, and other experts on the ground, with whom the officers of the Rush have consulted, all of whom are conversant with the history of the Homestake, have supplied facts and figures from which a comparison may be made of the Homestake with the Rush as regards ore bodies, location, proximity to railroads, nearness to water and fuel supply, and future profits in the reduction of the ore on the property, and the facts apparently warrant the belief that the BULLFROG RUSH has a tremendous advantage over the Homestake.

Estimates as to the grade of ore that can be mined and milled at a profit in Bullfrog vary from $1.20 to $4 per ton, and the consensus of opinion of the great mining engineers now in Nevada who have been consulted on the subject is that $4 ore will be mined and milled in Bullfrog within the next twelve months at a profit, and this is believed to be a conservative statement. The cost of mining and milling the ore of the Homestake is from $1.15 to $2 per ton. The Oro Fino Mining Company in the Black Hills mines and mills its ore at a total cost of 96c per ton. The Alaska Treadwell mines and mills its ore at a cost of $1 to $1.25 per ton.

In the Homestake mine they are milling 4,000 tons of ore per day and drop 1,000 stamps. The Homestake is paying dividends of $1,200,000 per year. The company is incorporated for $22,000,000. The par value of the shares was originally $100, and they sold for $1. The company is paying dividends at the rate of $6 per share per year, or 600 per cent. per year profit annually on the original investment of the stockholders.

When development work on the Homestake was commenced it was found necessary to ship supples for the mine by wagon and mule team 326 miles from Cheyenne. At the start it cost the Homestake $1 per stamp per week for water. Water was later located thirty miles away from the mine and piped into the mills on the ground at tremendous expense. There was no wood at first to be had except from a distance of twenty-five miles.

Water can already be had in Bullfrog from a distance of three miles, and is already piped into the town by three different companies, and can be had at nominal cost.

The Las Vegas and Bullfrog Railroad is now completed to within three miles of the mine and will pass within two hundred feet of it, which will insure cheap fuel, as crude oil can be landed from California, so that mining and milling can be done from 80c. to $1.05 per ton, and ores of even a lower value than now treated in the Homestake mills can be mined and milled in the Bullfrog District at a profit.

This property is one that should be looked upon in the light of a conservative investment, yet one which will return large dividends for many years to come.

At the price the treasury stock is now offered it is without question the most desirable investment on the market to-day, for not only is it certain to enhance in value from the recovery of the millions already exposed, but from the practical certainty of bonanza values being found as depth is gained.

We unhesitatingly recommend this stock to the most conservative investor. WE WILL LOAN 30c. PER SHARE ON THIS STOCK OR BUY IT ON A MARGIN OF 10 PER CENT.

Reservations should be made by telegraph, to insure consideration, and remittances in full, by bank draft or certified check, must be forwarded immediately after allotment is made. Otherwise allotment will be rendered void. The right is reserved to reduce or refuse any subscription tendered. ACT QUICKLY IF AT ALL. We do not think it will be necessary to make a second announcement of this offering.

THE AIR LINE NEWS

is something new in periodical literature. It tells the story of building the only direct railroad line between New York and Chicago, which is as absorbing in interest as the most thrilling fiction.

An urgent need of such a road has existed for many years. The Air Line News tells why it has not been built until now.

It tells about the gigantic plan and scope of the railroad now under construction—of the men who conceived the idea and put it in execution—of the progress being made and how obstacles have been overcome. It will make an intensely interesting story, which you should not miss reading.

COPPER PAID
SIX HUNDRED MILLIONS IN DIVIDENDS

DIVIDENDS paid on COPPER PROPERTIES last year in the United States amounted to more than half—OVER 50 PER CENT.—of the total cash dividends paid to stockholders in GOLD, SILVER, COPPER, LEAD and ZINC Mines.

If all the dividends of all the banks in the United States were added together, the sum total would be less than the dividends paid by its copper mines. It is not generally known, but the figures prove that the dividends paid by the colossal railroad corporations do not equal the dividends paid by the Copper mines of this country.

The greatest fortunes of to-day are being made in Copper mines. Almost every rich man whose name often occurs in public prints—Senator Clark, Rockefeller, Greene, Gates, Schwab, Rogers, Lawson, Morgan, Gould, etc., owns copper stocks. Some first made their fortune in copper. More made their money otherwise, and now make their fortunes earn new fortunes from the perpetual dividends of copper.

Copper Pays Dividends for Life

Not only does copper pay the BIGGEST dividends, but it pays PERMANENT dividends. No real copper mine has ever been exhausted. [illegible] have been worked for over two thousand years [illegible] worked for 700 years, [illegible] in this country in 1845 and in the Lake Superior [illegible] ever before in their history. The famous Anaconda mine is steadily increasing in production. The United Verde in Arizona is turning out more and more copper every year. No man can tell how long a good copper mine will last, for no man has ever seen one exhausted.

Demand in Excess of Supply

Enormous as the supply of copper is, the demand is for twice the amount. If the world's production were doubled, the demand would still be in excess of the supply. The world's supply HAS doubled in the past few years, and the demand to-day is for twice or three times the SUPPLY. This means a constant, continuous, ever-increasing need of copper, in other words, A PERPETUAL MARKET. [illegible] increase in the supply, higher prices per pound have been offered [illegible] for the metal to no avail. This STEADILY INCREASING DEMAND PER POUND and increase in price of copper will [illegible] last throughout the lifetime of the present generation, possibly longer.

How Can You Get Into Copper?

You cannot buy out Senator Clark's United Verde, it is true. Your opportunity must come when a new copper find is made. That's whet we want to tell you about. If you are interested so far—Don't stop—READ ON!

Croppings are 15 feet in width in many places [illegible] surface assays well [illegible] Golden Chief has a 40-foot shaft. The ore vein [illegible] on the surface, but the ore is very rich, going about $40 to the ton to a depth of [illegible] the bottom of the shaft the ore is wide, but does not run over $4 or $5. All experts [illegible] short distance farther the values will come up [illegible] encountered. The smelter [illegible] statement is [illegible] estimated, as [illegible] went higher [illegible] smelting. The [illegible] has not been stoped at all. It can be taken out and shipped at small expense.

Admiral, of copper claim, has been opened by a crosscut 70 feet to cut the ledge. A drift was then run in on the ore for a distance of 10 feet. The ore vein is continuous for this distance. As this working is near the apex of a sharp little hill, and very near the surface, the ore body is only from 6 to 18 inches in width. It carries nearly 8 per cent of copper, with some gold and silver. Assays taken from places show $17 ore. Other assays show much better.

A winze in the tunnel about twenty feet from where the crosscut struck the ledge was sunk to a depth of 47 feet. Ore was found all of the way. At twenty feet or so we struck very high grade copper ore running over 20 per cent copper, together with gold and silver values. This streak of high grade copper is not over 4 inches wide, but the ore on both sides is very good. A goodly lot of this first grade ore could soon be extracted from this point. Shipments of $80 to $100 ore could easily be made to the smelter.

The [illegible] ledge runs at right angles to the Cottonwood gold ledge. WHERE THE TWO LEDGES CROSS THERE IS EVERY INDICATION FOR A LARGE COPPER MINE. COPPER GOSSAN OUTCROPS WIDE AND STRONG ON THE SURFACE. Garnet croppings are also encountered at this point, which is at the apex of a rounding hill, about 1,500 feet from Cottonwood tunnel. A large basaltic dyke also crosses at this point. The tunnel is on this dyke for some distance. Basalt and copper gossan are the very best evidences of a strong copper vein.

Many mining experts, among them Mr. Gaffney, late of Colorado, but now in charge of the Charles [illegible] properties in Arizona, report most favorably on this entire property. Mr. Gaffney was positive in his statements that THERE EXISTS A GREAT COPPER DEPOSIT WHERE THESE VEINS CROSS EACH OTHER.

THE WELLINGTON MINE IS MADE——STOCK IS GOING UP

Its marvellous development has astounded the Mining World. It is without question the greatest mining success in years. In a few days it will be completely financed and the stock will be taken off the market. This is positively the last time this advertisement will appear, and it is your last chance to share in the profits of the World's Greatest Lead and Zinc Mine

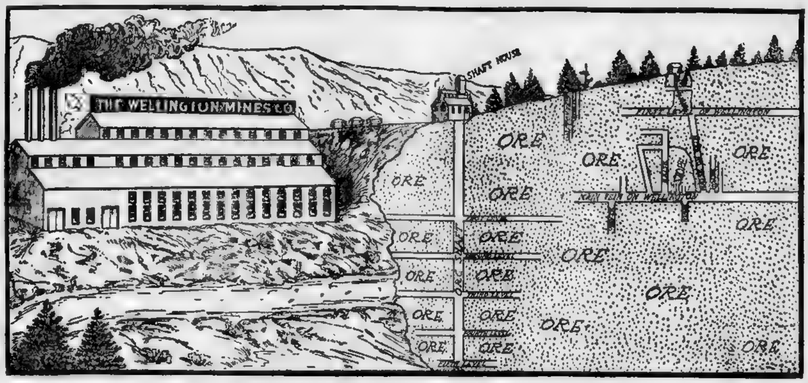
You never had an opportunity to invest in a mine like The Wellington. It is one opportunity in ten thousand to become independent for life. Its ore bodies contain countless millions. The main ore vein, running continuously through The Wellington property, is now over 4,000 feet long. There are seven true fissure veins already developed, varying in width from 4 1-2 to 20 feet, which will supply a 300 ton mill for ages without exhausting the ore bodies. This ore can be mined cheaper than coal. In addition to the immense Lead and Zinc values, Wellington ores carry as high as $60 per ton in gold.

Immense Profits in Lead and Zinc

Lead and Zinc mining in Colorado offers the greatest opportunities for profitable investment of any metals mined. The true fissure veins of solid ore in a mine like The Wellington reach down into the bowels of the earth. No man can tell how deep, as similar veins have been worked for years and the bottom has never been reached. These true fissure veins are capable of producing millions of of dollars worth of ore at a very low cost per ton. There is a ready market at good prices for every pound that can be produced. The Lead and Zinc production is not near equal to the demand and the balance must be imported. There are more than 700 paying Lead and Zinc mines in the states of Colorado, Kansas and Missouri, and the thousands of stockholders in these mines find their lead and zinc stocks the most profitable of all investments.

Invest Your Money in a Lead and Zinc Mine of Proven Value

And provide a reliable income for life. The Wellington is a developed mine—not a prospect, and an investment in this stock is buying ore blocked out. It offers greater profits and quicker profits than any investment you can find anywhere. Never in the history of mining in Colorado has there been a developed mine of such value as The Wellington offered to the public as an investment. You take no chances in buying this stock, as the immense amount of ore blocked out in The Wellington provides greater security for your money than any bank, insurance, mortgage or bond. It cannot be burned, lost or stolen, and you know it is there waiting to be mined and milled when it is ready for a spot cash market right on the ground. See the accompanying illustration showing the immense amount of underground development work already done on The Wellington. The ores taken out in developing the mine have paid for all this work, and the main ore bodies remain untouched awaiting a mill and modern facilities for handling the ores.



PLAN OF PROPOSED WELLINGTON MILL

Together with Longitudinal Section showing the development work actually done on the property. Plans and specifications for this mill and other improvements have been completed and orders for the lumber, machinery, etc., have been placed. Work will be pushed rapidly with the object of getting the mill in operation at the earliest possible date. The Wellington will be the best equipped mine in the entire state of Colorado. The latest improved methods for mining and handling the ore will be installed. Everything will be done automatically by machinery, entirely eliminating all hand work. In addition to the mill a complete electric power plant will be installed, together with an auxiliary steam plant for use in emergencies in order that the mill can be run day and night, year in and year out. The electricity will be produced by water power at a very small cost. The shaft will be provided with the latest and most improved hoisting machinery and the tunnel will be widened, making it a double track tunnel, which will greatly facilitate the handling of ore. We propose to use both the shaft and tunnel for taking out the ores. When these improvements are completed, Wellington stock will be worth many times its present value.

Wellington Stock Will Be Listed on Leading Mining Exchanges

We propose to list Wellington stock on the leading mining exchanges in order to provide a reliable market for those who may desire to sell their stock and take advantage of quick profits. Wellington should be one of the most attractive stocks on the Mining Exchanges as it promises to be one of the biggest dividend payers of the age.

Why We Are Selling Stock

A great many readers of this announcement who don't understand mining will doubtless ask why we are selling stock in a mine of such value as The Wellington. Every man or woman who is familiar with the mining industry knows that it requires a large and expensive plant and equipment to mine and market large quantities of ore. It's the tonnage a mine can produce and market that pays the profits. Sensational values per ton don't count for much unless the mine is capable of producing a large tonnage. The Wellington Mine has developed the largest and richest deposits of Lead and Zinc yet discovered. Now that we are ready to mine and market large quantities of ores it is necessary to have a mill of large capacity to crush and separate the ores, an electric power plant to furnish power, and complete modern facilities for handling ores. The officers and directors who have invested heavily in this enterprise are not financially able to do this and must have more capital. They believe it better business policy to sell a part of the stock and put the company on a dividend paying basis in a few months than to mine the ores without milling and without the proper facilities for marketing them. This would mean an enormous loss in values and require a much longer time to secure the necessary equipment.

Stock Now 25c a Share—Price Advances to 75c Nov. 24th

If you want a block of Wellington stock at the present low price you must act at once. Promptly at midnight November 24th the price will advance to 75 cents per share and no more stock will be offered for sale. Unless your application is in the mails on this date your opportunity to share in the profits of The World's Greatest Lead and Zinc Mine is lost. If you find that you haven't time to complete your investigation mail remittance for one-tenth of the amount of stock desired, with the privilege of having your money returned at the end of 30 days, if, after a thorough investigation, you are not satisfied that this stock offers the greatest money opportunity for legitimate money making you can find anywhere—barring none. The Wellington is open to the fullest investigation. In addition to prominent bank and commercial references, any reliable citizen of Breckenridge, Colorado, can tell you what The Wellington Mine is. We will be pleased to furnish you every facility for investigating this proposition, as we want every investor to know the true value of the mine.

SUBJECT:- Your order.

Gentlemen:-

We beg to acknowledge receipt of your order for machinery to be installed at your mines at Breckenridge, and attach a list of the different machines required for the Concentrating Mill.

Thanking you for this order and awaiting your further favors, we remain,

Yours very truly,

THE MINE & SMELTER SUPPLY COMPANY.

The Mine & Smelter Supply Co. is the largest mining machinery and supply house in the world. As the importance of selecting the very best machinery and equipment is apparent to every one with any knowledge of mining, we have taken great pains to secure the best in the market for the Wellington. We have secured the services of the best mine superintendent we could find in the State of Colorado; we are buying the best machinery and equipment that money can buy, and we will operate the Wellington for the benefit of the stockholders with the same careful and painstaking business methods that we are using in equipping it. When we start the Wellington mill we will operate it day and night, year in and year out, in order to give our stockholders the full benefit of the immense capacity the mine is capable of producing. We propose to make the Wellington the most famous mine in the State of Colorado, by making it the biggest producer and biggest dividend payer.

$3,300,000 Worth of Ore Blocked Out

IN THE WELLINGTON MINE. This is not guess-work, but the result of accurate measurements by mining experts of the ore bodies opened on three sides by various tunnels, drifts, shafts, winzes and upraises. It is proven that there are 110,000 tons of ore actually blocked out ready to mine and run through the mill. Figuring the value of this ore at the lowest possible price the smelters will pay for it shows that it is worth at least $3,300,000.

$35,000,000 in Ore in Addition to That Already Blocked Out

The amount of ore in the Wellington is almost beyond computation. The main vein alone, which is already opened up 2600 feet, averages 9 feet in width. Multiplying the length of the tunnel, 2600 feet, by the width of the vein, nine feet, and then multiplying this product by the depth of the vein absolutely proved by the Ore shaft, which is 400 feet deeper than the tunnel level, gives us at least $35,000,000 in addition to the ore blocked out. Just think of the immense amount of rich ore which can be mined cheaper than coal, awaiting a mill to convert it into cash.

These figures are extremely conservative and are based on the reports of George D. [illegible], mining engineer, and John G. G[illegible], mining expert, and proven by smelter returns from ores taken out in doing development work. There is every reason to believe that this ore body extends thousands of feet deeper, as the richest mines in the Leadville district, which is only 18 miles away, have attained far greater depth and the bottom has never been reached.

Wellington Ores Valued by Smelter Sales, Not Assays

The value of Wellington ores has been determined by actual smelter sales. Assays [illegible] samples of ore may or may not represent the true value of the ores in a mine, but the prices paid by the smelters in large shipments can be relied upon absolutely. [illegible] the value of Wellington ores on the basis of assays [illegible] would be more than twice as [illegible] the smelter returns would indicate. However, there is no question but that The Wellington mine contains much ore [illegible] of far greater value than any which has been shipped in the past, as only the ores taken out in doing development work have been shipped. The great bodies of ore have been left untouched, awaiting the erection of a mill where they can be properly treated before shipping [illegible].

As an illustration of the wonderful increase in value of Wellington ores as depth is [illegible] average samples of ore taken from three different [illegible] The Wellington mine were assayed [illegible] assayer of Kansas City, Mo. Mr. [illegible] reports that the ore taken from the [illegible] level [illegible] per ton. The ore taken [illegible] 117 feet from the surface, assayed $62.64 per ton, and the ore from the winze 65 feet below the main tunnel level 480 feet from the surface, assayed $77.18 per ton. Other assays show values up to $85.00.

These assays were made for the purpose of showing the increase in value as depth is attained, but they have not been used in representing the value of the ore blocked out. If this ore proves more valuable than past shipments to the smelters would indicate it will be clear gain to the stockholders.

$60 per Ton in Gold in Addition to Lead and Zinc

The Wellington Mine is a consolidation of the great Wellington and Oro properties, which have become famous as the most valuable mining properties in the entire Breckenridge District of Colorado. Mining men now recognize the Wellington as one of the foremost mines of the world. The Wellington is not only rich in Lead, Zinc and Silver, but recent discoveries show wonderful gold values. A vein of Lead-Zinc ore six feet in width, running parallel to the main vein, was opened up recently, which carries $19 per ton in gold, and ore from the bottom of the shaft, which is 400 feet lower than the tunnel level, runs as high as $60 per ton in gold. Investors should carefully consider these discoveries, as we have based the value of Wellington ores on a very low estimate of the Lead, Zinc and Silver they carry. The addition of the gold means that the ore will be worth many times its present value when the development is completed to the lower levels.

What Breckenridge People Think of the Wellington

William Mitchell, Manager Chamberlain & Dillingham, Ore Buyers, Says:

"I buy all the ores shipped out of this district, and am in a position to know what the mines are doing. I do not hesitate to state that I would sooner have The Wellington than any mine in Cripple Creek."

Fred C. Cramer, Deputy United States Mineral Surveyor:

"I made the surveys for The Wellington Mine, and have kept closely in touch with it since. There is no question that The Wellington is the biggest proposition in this district."

Judge W. L. Thomas:

"I have prospected and mined in Summit County since 1892, and The Wellington is the biggest thing I know of here."

Hon. W. [illegible] Foreman, Mayor:

"I have been through The Wellington Mine, and in my opinion there is nothing to equal it in this county."

George Engle, B[illegible]:

J. G. [illegible], Sheriff:

"I have lived in Summit County since 1880, and The Wellington [illegible] one of the biggest [illegible] the state. With the [illegible] modern concentrating mill and the installation of modern up-to-date machinery, The Wellington is a sure dividend payer."

Investors Who Have Personally Inspected the Wellington Mine

The following substantial business men have recently visited the Wellington Mine, and after spending hours in thoroughly inspecting it [illegible] of stock:

October 25th, 1906.

The Wellington Mines Company,
Breckenridge, Colorado.

Gentlemen:--

This department has made examination of the Wellington Mines, at Breckenridge, and I am pleased to state that there is every evidence of legitimate operation and business methods evidenced in the management of same.

There is a large development of workable ore, and the management is pushing on legitimate lines for its utilization.

I understand, since my personal knowledge of the property, that large additions to the area and equipment have been made, which materially increase the business outlook.

Commissioner of Mines

Consider the contents of this letter carefully, as it is one of the most important features of this announcement. The Wellington must be a mine of actual proven value and properly managed in order to secure the approval of the State Mining Commissioner of Colorado. The information given by the Commissioners can be considered absolutely reliable, as this Bureau was created for the purpose of preventing fraud and misrepresentation and to assist and encourage legitimate mining in this great state famous for its great mines. Every mine in the state has been officially inspected by competent inspectors under the supervision of the Mining Commissioner, and a complete report of each and every one is on file in the Commissioner's offices in the Capitol at Denver.

How many mines offering stock for sale have the endorsement of the State Mining Commissioner? How many mines can show such a bonafide list of references as we have furnished in this announcement.

TIES OF PARTY SHAKEN OFF; VOTERS FREE

Most Remarkable Overturn in Commonwealth's History Is Foreshadowed.

LABOR VOTE FOR BROWN

John B. Moran of Boston will be elected Governor of Massachusetts by 95,000 plurality and E. Gerry Brown, of Brockton will be elected Lieutenant-Governor by 125,000, if the straw vote taken by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN in nine of the fourteen counties of the State is an accurate indication of the vote at the polls on Tuesday next.

The ballot in straw balloting was conducted during the last ten days. The printed ballots were distributed among voters by members of the SUNDAY AMERICAN staff, correspondents in the largest cities and towns outside of Boston and by messenger boys who rode on Elevated trains.

The total of the balloting for Governor in thirty-six cities, towns and villages was 4,554. The total for Lieutenant-Governor was 4,447. In both instances the straw vote was more than one per cent of the total vote polled at the State election in 1905.

The count of the votes indicated a surprising political condition in the big centres of population in Massachusetts. A large percentage of the ballots were split. Nearly one-fifth of the Moran straw vote was cast by Republicans, more than one-fourth of the Brown vote was cast by citizens who supported Draper one year ago. About one out of eleven of the Guild straw voters supported General Charles W. Bartlett, Democrat, in 1905. Out of the 1491 votes for Draper, 101 were by men who marked themselves on the ballot as Democrats.

Party Fences Smashed.

The straw balloting signifies that all party fences are down and that the voters are wandering all over the political pasture.

The vote in Boston indicates that Moran and Brown [illegible] per[illegible] ger [illegible] torial candidates have ever received [illegible] this city. [illegible] split ballots point [illegible] both receiving thousands of Republican votes.

On the basis of the vote polled by General Bartlett and Henry M. Whitney in this city one year ago, the SUNDAY AMERICAN straw vote points to Moran and Brown carrying Boston by [illegible] or more each.

Most of the cities, towns and villages included in the straw balloting were carried by Guild one year ago.

The overturn presaged by the straw votes is startling. They point toward a landslide for the nominees of the Democratic party and the Independence League.

[illegible] where M[illegible] ahead of [illegible] are going to [illegible] significant signs of the straw balloting.

Ballot Impartial.

The utmost effort was made by the SUNDAY AMERICAN to [illegible] the voting fair and impartial [illegible] and [illegible] to the [illegible] and wherever [illegible] to reach all classes of voters.

They were [illegible] pains to have voters state for whom they voted in 1905, [illegible] inkling of the strength of [illegible] movement wh[illegible] on party lines [illegible] and other [illegible] of FEAR GYPSY BAND HAS SLAIN BOY.

Armed Posse of Over 500 Started at Sunrise in Hunt for Outlaws.

BLOODHOUNDS PRESSED INTO SERVICE BY TOWN

CAP FOUND ON STREAM, JACKKNIFE A MILE AWAY

Portland, Me., Nov. 3.—Over 500 men and boys, with two bloodhounds, start at sunrise to-morrow in the most remarkable search that has ever taken place in this section of the country.

They go in pursuit of a band of gypsies [illegible] they kidnapped [illegible] of Mapleton [illegible] son of Select[illegible] [illegible] last Wed[illegible] [illegible] sent by his [illegible] to a store and his way took him along a dark and lonely road.

The lad did not return home and the father found that he had not visited the grocery, nor had he been seen by any of his village playmates. As he was passing along the road, last evening, between the Tarbell home and the store, M. L. Stewart, proprietor of the Mapleton Hotel, saw two gypsies carrying a large bundle.

Find Cap in Stream.

Since then Mr. Tarbell has been leading searching parties in all directions. Half of the population of Mapleton has taken part in the hunt.

[illegible] have been formed by the [illegible] and [illegible] miles have been covered. That the party to-morrow will [illegible] in on a notorious band of men and women who have for a long time been suspected of child stealing is expected.

Traces of the missing boy indicate that he has met with violence. His cap was found floating in a stream leading to the Penobscot River and a jack knife belonging to the little fellow was found a mile from his home in the woods.

Thinking that the knife may have been dropped by him as a clue, the searchers who will beat the bush to-morrow will follow in that direction from the lad's home.

Many of the searchers are to go armed. They say that they will do so because of wild animals which may be encountered, but from their manner it is evident that their real purpose is to [illegible] the gypsies without any [illegible] [illegible] any resistance be shown.

Smouldering Camp Fires.

In their pursuit of the gypsies, searchers have come across smouldering camp fires deserted.

Mr. and Mrs. Tarbell fear that they will never see Linton alive again. They believe that the gypsies met their boy on the lonely road last Wednesday night and murdered him.

The authorities here do not believe that the gypsies would dare to kill the lad, but they think that the little fellow was kidnaped. They think that the large bundle which Landlord Stewart saw the gypsies carrying last night was the Tarbell boy, bound and gagged and wrapped up in a canvas bag.

Posse Gathers at Night.

To-morrow's search will be thorough. Those to aid in the work are gathering at Mapleton to-night so that they can get an early start and be long on their way before the sun rises.

One detachment will thoroughly drag the stream on which the boy's cap was found. Others will go after the supposed trail and follow after the band of gypsies.

CLAIMS DEMOCRATS WILL CAPTURE NEXT NATIONAL HOUSE

Chairman Griggs Also Predicts Election of Hearst by Independent Vote.

Washington, Nov. 3.—"We will control the House of Representatives by not less than twenty-five majority."

This was the final pre-election statement issued by Congressman Griggs, of Georgia, chairman of the Democratic Congressional committee, this afternoon. He did not go into details, he added nothing, only the confident statement that the House would be Democratic.

Chairman Griggs insists that the independent vote is going to be greater this year than ever before and that it will turn up in all parts of the country. He counts upon it to elect Hearst in New York [illegible] and to carry Ohio and Pennsylvania on the heads of the tickets.

PEARY PLANS TENTH DASH FOR THE POLE.

TELLS OF STRUGGLE IN THE FROZEN NORTH

Retreats Temporarily in the Arctic Night, but Will Again Seek Desired Goal.

New York, Nov. 3.—That Commander Robert E. Peary, the renowned Arctic explorer, contemplates a tenth effort to reach the North pole is now the belief of his friends in this city. The hint was conveyed in a telegram received to-day from Peary by Morris K. Jesup, president of the Peary Arctic Club.

The telegram is dated at Hopedale, Labrador, and tells of the terrible struggle which Peary and his little band of adventurous souls have had with the ice and the terrible Arctic night. It is a simple, straightforward narrative without a word of self-glorification, but it is a human document in its terse story of the hardships endured in the bitter cold of the far North.

Plans Renewed Effort.

It intimates that Peary is not discouraged by his failure to reach the desired goal, but that he has simply retreated temporarily in order to prepare for a renewed effort. The telegram reads as follows:

"Hopedale, Labrador, by way of Twillingate, N. F.

"Return voyage incessant struggle with ice to Cape York, September 26. Then storm and head winds to Labrador coast, October 31. Carried away two rudders, stern post and two blades of propeller, foretopmast and spanker boom. Lost one boat, all coal and some interior beams, using wood and blubber along coast.

Heavy Loss of Supplies.

"Expect to communicate again from Chapeau Bay. All progress will be slow and have no anxiety for our safety. Give no credence to exaggerated reports.

"Roosevelt is returning this year for additional supplies and for repairs.

"Several tons of whale meat and dog food thrown away last fall after poisoning number of my dogs. Other supplies lost by breaking of ice in April.

(Signed) PEARY."

Mr. Jesup declined to comment on the contents of the telegram, stating that the message spoke for itself.

HOSE WAGON HIT BY TRAIN; 1 KILLED; 1 FATALLY HURT

Responding to Alarm, Fire Apparatus is Struck by Locomotive at Worcester Crossing.

Worcester, Nov. 3.—One fireman was killed and another fatally injured when an express train on the Boston & Albany railroad crashed into a hose wagon at the Grand street crossing last night.

The dead man was Captain Pliny I. Wood, and the injured man is Edward K. Barrett, both of Hose Company No. 9 of the Woodland street station.

The hose wagon was smashed into kindling wood and one of the horses killed. Owen McNamee, the flagman at the crossing, who made an heroic attempt to stop the wagon, was knocked down and run over, being badly bruised.

Responding to an Alarm.

The wagon was responding to an alarm and came down Grand street, the horses running. The street curves just above the crossing and the view of the tracks is cut off by a shop on one side of the streets and a large dwelling house on the other.

McNamee waved his lantern to stop the wagon when he saw it approaching, as he knew that the Webster express was almost at the crossing. Captain Wood, who was driving, either could not or would not stop, and the horses dashed on to the tracks. Before the wagon was across, the locomotive struck it.

Wood was thrown thirty or forty feet, striking on his head. His skull was fractured and he died at the hospital within an hour.

Barrett, who was riding on the step at the rear of the wagon, was also thrown. Every rib was broken, his spine was injured and the surgeons believe his skull is fractured. They say he cannot live until morning.

Flagman McNamee and Leo Mulcahy were the only persons who saw the accident.

Saw Express Coming.

"I saw the express coming almost at the same minute I saw the hose wagon," said McNamee. "The fire apparatus from the Beacon street station had crossed just before. When I saw the hose wagon I immediately ran up Grand street to flag it with my lantern. I waved it but the driver paid no attention. I held my ground until I was knocked down by the horses. The next thing I remember was when I came to my senses on the sidewalk."

Captain Wood was 43 years of age and had been in the fire department twenty years, sixteen as captain. He returned yesterday from his annual vacation, which he [illegible] Bermuda. His only surviving [illegible] mother [illegible] years of age and is mar[illegible] at No. 2 Maywood street.

GARDNER'S FIGHT A DISGRACE, SAYS MINISTER.

Dr. Berle of Salem Closes a Hard Campaign Against Congressman, Who, He Says Drives People to Violence

SALEM, Nov. 3.—It was clergymen's night in politics here to-night when one pastor presided at an anti-Gardner rally and another made the chief address. The latter, the Rev. A. A. Berle of the First Congregational Church, closed his campaign against the Congressman with a fierce address. Rev. Nicholas Van der Pyl of Marblehead was the chairman of the meeting.

Mr. Berle referred in his speech to the aid given by a [illegible] to Gardner. Mr. Berle read letters [illegible] from many clergymen [illegible] district, saying that they were [illegible] Congressman.

VICTORY FOR HEARST BY 200,000.

Complete Estimates Show a Landslide for Independence League Candidate.

TRUSTS, IN PANIC, RAISE HUGE CORRUPTION FUND

IHMSEN SEES HUGHES BURIED IN TIDAL WAVE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Nov. 3.—Hearst will be elected Governor next Tuesday by over 200,000 plurality.

The Evening Journal is able to make this positive announcement from the latest estimates received by the Democratic leaders and managers in New York City, by the Independence League managers, and the Republican campaign managers as well.

A careful canvass of every county in New York State by both parties shows the utter defeat of Hughes.

The Republicans do not even hope to do anything in more than thirty counties up-State. The desperate efforts to stem the landslide to the people's candidate have failed utterly.

ENEMY IN DESPAIR.

Privately, they estimate that Greater New York will give 150,000 plurality for Hearst, and in all probability Hearst will come down to the Harlem bridge with a vote equal to that.

The Republicans are in such desperate straits that they are spending money by the bale in various parts of the State where the Hearst vote is likely to wipe out Republican majorities of past years.

Manhattan and the Bronx, according to the estimates of all the political managers, will give Hearst a plurality that will in itself insure his election. The estimate is that Hearst will get 150,000 plurality in Greater New York. There is not a district from the Battery to the Westchester border that is not for Hearst.

In Mighty Demonstration.

Mr. Hearst practically concluded his victorious campaign for the Governorship to-night in a tour of Manhattan which will be memorable among political demonstrations.

From the Battery to the Bronx the streets were ablaze with fireworks. Great [illegible] meeting [illegible] whole [illegible] cheers. His progress was [illegible] avenues [illegible] the city [illegible] during Mr. Hearst's [illegible] of the island, turned out to cheer [illegible] candidate [illegible] victory.

East Side Gay in Color.

It was a wonderfully picturesque scene that Mr. Hearst faced when he advanced to speak at this gathering. On all of the four sides [illegible] the tenement houses had [illegible] from top to bottom. Every window was filled with cheering men, women and children. Great [illegible] swung from house to house and the roofs were ablaze with red fire. Four searchlights played directly upon the speakers' stand.

Is Edgar Weston Meikle, the fifteen-year-old Lynn boy now held in Salem jail on the charge of killing his father, to be set free without being tried?

This is the question that the boy's friends are anxiously asking. It was learned that on two days last week witnesses in the case have been called before the Grand Jury, in session at Lawrence.

There is but one apparent reason for such action, that in spite of the fact that the boy is indicted the Grand Jury has been reconsidering the case.

Since the indictment new evidence has developed and new witnesses have appeared. Two of these, Mrs. Sophia Gaudreau of Lynn, and her daughter, Miss Della Gaudreau, who firmly believes in the boy's innocence and who has strenuously endeavored to assist him since his arrest, went before the Grand Jury last week.

Even should the Grand Jury, after reviewing the evidence and hearing the new witnesses, decide that the indictment was a mistake, action would have to come through the office of the District Attorney. He has the power to nol pros the indictment. The Grand Jury report is expected to-morrow.

The nature of the testimony given by Mrs. and Miss Gaudreau was not revealed. They were neighbors of the Meikles and knew both the boy and his father well.

After the shooting Miss Gaudreau talked with Edgar, who told her, she says, that his father had been despondent for some time. He told her of the quarrel [illegible] his father and declared that his father had shot himself. He added that he picked up the revolver and, to place it where his father could not reach it, tossed it on the ice chest, where it was found. Then he ran to the home of Mr. McCarthy, next door and told what had occurred.

Boy Seems Contented.

Mrs. Gaudreau always has substantiated the statements made by her daughter [illegible] them refused to [illegible] it is said they [illegible] before the Grand [illegible]

[illegible] Salem jail, the boy [illegible] more contented than one [illegible] would be expected to be. He [illegible] books and his teachers call on [illegible] regularly.

Yesterday the Rev. Albert E. George, who has visited him before, went to see him again. His account of the interview follows.

MEIKLE IN JAIL IS A MARVEL OF REAL CHEERFULNESS
By Rev. A. E. George.

"How are you feeling?" I asked Edward Meikle, the fifteen-year-old prisoner at the Salem jail, after he had [illegible] seated [illegible] on a stove before the [illegible] bars of the outer gate of the corridor where I stood.

"I'm feeling first rate; never felt better," he replied, just as a boy would say those words off hand at any casual event and [illegible]

"Well, doesn't this kind of life seem dull to you?"

"No, I have something to do every day. [illegible] pointing to the place where [illegible] afterwards he [illegible] his clubs, [illegible] better for it."

"What do you study?"

"I have arithmetic, algebra, geography, spelling and grammar [illegible] It's hard studying in [illegible] the teachers come here [illegible] and [illegible] me. I expected one this Saturday, but I guess she will come next Saturday."

"They have been very kind, have they not, Edgar?"

"Yes, very kind," he replied and looked out of the window with [illegible]

"Have any of your friends come [illegible]"

"Yes, but my relatives in [illegible] Boston, I forget which place they live in, never come here. Even at the funeral of my father, they didn't say anything to me."

All Alone in the World.

"Then you feel all alone in the world?"

"Yes, I—I suppose so," hesitating to [illegible] as the boy acknowledges [illegible] and the officers [illegible] for him.

[illegible] not lonely, you know [illegible] cheerful [illegible] that makes me [illegible]

[illegible] you associate with the other [illegible]

"No, the officers are very careful. They keep me to myself; let me have all the reading I want, and allow my friends to come whenever they please."

"Do you sleep and eat well?"

"I do sometimes. Last night I slept well. I get tired of the regular food, you know. Any one would soon get tired of that."

"When does your trial come off?"

Does this fifteen-year-old boy realize what is before him?

It seems not. As one looks into his [illegible] face that comes to view [illegible] which wins you a [illegible] to the boy.

He is just like a boy in every move [illegible] in the way he [illegible] He does not seem to be hiding any secret [illegible] when he will be again out in the world.

To stay day in and day out in such narrow [illegible] with such limitations is apt to make one serious-minded.

The Same Happy Boy.

Not so Edgar Meikle. He is the same happy boy to-day that he was six weeks ago. It is this happiness that makes a call upon him [illegible] a pleasure.

When I said to him "I have come to cheer you up to keep your spirits in good trim," he replied, "Thank you, I'm all right."

He really didn't need any cheer.

Then as I watched him leave me going toward his cell carrying the little [illegible] he [illegible] the same happy [illegible] marked his [illegible] himself [illegible] "goodbye." I could not suppress my feelings.

Happiness in a Tablet

Perfect Health for Every One Procured At Small Cost.

How many times have you sat down at your table absolutely disgusted at the thought [illegible] sight of anything to eat?

How many times have you sat down at your meals without the trace of an appetite, but just because it was "time to eat"?

How many times have you felt a gnawing, unsatisfied [illegible] hungry feeling [illegible] after [illegible] through eating?

How many times have you felt that lump of lead on your stomach after eating, whether your meal was well cooked or not?

And how many times have you suffered a whole lot of other things from your stomach that you couldn't explain, but that made you grouchy, miserable, out of sorts and generally sour on everybody and everything?

It is safe to say you couldn't tell. You didn't keep track of the things of course, but you know you've suffered them. You probably have had them for so long that they've become a habit with you, and you have come to the conclusion that your fate is to suffer them indefinitely and perhaps forever.

And so you're much like horses, standing [illegible] at the hitching post [illegible] and so their habit [illegible]

But no one need have dyspepsia nor indigestion, loss of appetite, [illegible] sensations, heart [illegible] bad memory, [illegible] and vigor and the happiness that comes from a healthy stomach and a good appetite if he will only leave his old hitching post and tie himself to a new one, one that will hold him to health, joy, ambition and a clear mind, memory and the sunshine that goes with them.

That indeed is Heaven! And you can get it in a little tablet already prepared for the purpose in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, those little cherubs of health and delight found in thousands of homes to-day. Listen—one ingredient of one of these precious little tablets will digest for you 3,000 grains of food.

This relieves your stomach of the work of digesting until your stomach can get strong and healthy again. Your stomach has been overworked and abused. It's fagged out. It needs a rest.

Let Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do the work of your stomach. You will be surprised how fine you'll feel after eating, and how lusciously good everything will taste to you. That's because the Tablets are thoroughly digesting the food which your stomach [illegible]

Have these tablets on your dining table and take one or two after every meal. [illegible] Then you will realize as never before that the human stomach decides for every man whether he will go forward or backward—and besides, you'll forget you ever had a stomach to torment you.

SCANDAL GROWS IN THE CASTELLANE DIVORCE

> ## Death and Ruin in Scandal
> "Society leaders acted as intermediaries between the Count and his favorites, permitting their houses to be used as places of rendezvous. France will be shaken by the revelations. It will lead to death and desolation."—From M. Cruppi's opening declaration in presenting Countess's case.

[illegible] permitted the Count to use their [illegible] as places of rendezvous [illegible] mercilessly revealed [illegible] to the auditor's [illegible]

Shocking Conduct Laid Bare.

[illegible] a French court [illegible] so freely [illegible] the scandalous [illegible] bare [illegible] of French aristocrats [illegible]

Cruppi's inferences were as plain as [illegible] Everybody in the court [illegible] without concealment. [illegible] of the women's letters to Boni [illegible] Cruppi read [illegible] A sensational [illegible] Boni's lawyer had outside of court [illegible] to make revelations [illegible] M. Cruppi frequently alluded [illegible] saying

Hurls Defi at Boni.

"We are not afraid. Our case is as open as the day. We have nothing to conceal. We defy you to deny a single charge that we bring against the Count [illegible] utmost."

M. Cruppi unhesitatingly denied [illegible] the [illegible] the prosecution [illegible] letters of Boni to a woman written [illegible] his marriage proposing to [illegible] money on the strength of his [illegible] engagement to an American heiress. The Count borrowed the money and married the heiress, but never paid the lenders.

Love Letters to Count.

Some of Boni's creditors include such fervent believers in him. Cruppi read several inflammatory letters that passed between Boni and his favorites. One from a Madame A., at Dijon, to Boni, said:

"I am still without news [illegible] while I pray God [illegible] or else your letters have been [illegible] before posting. I am ill with anxiety. I cannot sleep. Telegraph [illegible] not use my name. Send [illegible] of Madame X. She knows. [illegible] but write me. Use a double envelope, the inner one addressed to me. I will wait a few days. If the horrible uncertainty is not then relieved I shall go to Paris, perhaps to Tours. I do not know what to do. Please write. I am going to Paris to stay Saturday or Sunday. I will go directly to our nest from the station. Come there. Telegraph a reply. I must see you dear."

"I Kiss You Beloved, On Your Throat"

Another letter reads:

"Friday. I am still without news. I am convinced it is not your fault. I want to and will make you happy. I want you to be my dearest and I will make you so. But tell me that you are well. Tell me this is only a dreadful nightmare. Dearest, I will burn your letters. My love, console me quickly. I love you. What joy to receive your telegram last night. They did me more good in one minute than all the [illegible] medicines I have been swallowing for a week. I am well to-day. I am kissing you tenderly, beloved, on your throat, near your ear. Do you feel it?"

The following letter Boni declares was from a woman with whom he had no relations. He asserts that he gave it [illegible] to [illegible] to prove [illegible] was the victim of [illegible] women whom he [illegible] It reads:

"It seems to me you might have written. Maybe I am wrong [illegible] would have [illegible] your triumphant march through life and am, in spite of all, your friend."

"I'm Madly in Love," She Writes.

The following letter is from an actress [illegible] Boni [illegible] he had no real [illegible]

Another [illegible] letter after a quarrel [illegible] correspondence [illegible] Boni answered [illegible] She replied:

"I never [illegible] making a [illegible] It seemed to me [illegible] myself remained [illegible] by something of one who [illegible] you all [illegible] I beg pardon."

In another letter a correspondent alludes to Boni's passionate love making.

A banquet to the "Plain man of the people," as Mr. Cummings is called, was [illegible] by the Suffolk County Hibernians, as was one also by the State Board, but both of these were given up when it became known that a committee of prominent citizens, brought together irrespective of [illegible] in the order, meant to arrange [illegible] to be attended by men in [illegible]

When Mr. Cummings, who is a resident of Neponset, was elevated to the national presidency Boston gained much in having a high office brought to this city, the first time Boston has been thus [illegible] since the Ancient Order of Hibernians was founded, several centuries ago.

It was only a few months ago that Mr. Cummings went to Washington with two other Boston men, to lay before President Roosevelt the objections to the [illegible] in the immigration laws. [illegible] Chief Executive of the nation ran his eye over the three men, asking all their occupation.

"I am a workingman," said Cummings. And it was Cummings who succeeded in winning the President over to the views held by the visitors.

VINCENT CLUB GIRL LOVES COUNT BUT NOT HIS TITLE.

"Connie" Thayer, supposed to be, of all [illegible] to Cupid's darts, is engaged, and her clubmates are astounded.

"Connie," or Miss Cornelia Thayer, daughter of Nathaniel Thayer of Newport, Lancaster and Fairfield street, is to wed Count von Moltke, a Danish diplomat, whom she met in Europe. He recently visited the Thayers at Lancaster.

This engagement was [illegible] in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN two weeks ago. Miss Thayer's club friends, [illegible] her return to town, were wondering what new sensation she, who is the "fad discoverer" for the club, will have this Winter. Very few of them, however, realized that her method [illegible] would be by the [illegible] of her engagement.

When Miss Thayer last Winter met Count von Moltke abroad it was love at first sight, and she returned home engaged. She kept her secret well, only [illegible] more intimate friends having [illegible] inkling of the engagement.

GREAT CROWD SEES GAME IN STADIUM

BY I. S. CLARK.

Battling as the best she knew, Harvard could only beat the Brown team yesterday in the Stadium by the small score of 9 to 5.

To the Brown men it was glory enough to cross the Crimson goal line, but once succeeding in that direction the Providence boys started out to make a victory for themselves, and the 15,000 excited spectators who filled both sides of the big amphitheatre were kept in a state of expectancy up to the very end.

It was the first contest seen on the [illegible] battleground this season, and Brown proved [illegible] worthy foe against the more formidable eleven from the big uni[illegible] and [illegible] her prophecy that it would be a terrific encounter be[illegible] the smoke [illegible] away.

CADETS CROSS YALE'S LINE BUT LOSE GAME.

ARMY KICKERS ARE FIRST TO SCORE

Special to Boston Sunday American.

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Yale came up to the Hudson to-day and tackled the Cadets in their annual game here to-day. Grouped on the West side of the field, directly opposite the Cadets were fully a thousand Yale rooters, and in the second half they kept the old academy ringing with their yells as the cheer leaders with swinging arms worked themselves into a frenzy, cheering the team in an uphill fight.

In the first half the Cadets outplayed the sons of Eli, and their line met the onslaughts of the Yale backs and forced them to punt continually. In the second half, however, [illegible] came on [illegible] determined and Jones was seen to have [illegible] Tad Jones, who was decidedly off color to-day. His fumbling of punts giving the Army the ball several times and [illegible] missed Mountford's high kick on the 45-yard line the Army started their march for their touchdown.

Cadets Tally.

A forward pass [illegible] handled to Stearns around Yale's [illegible] end put the [illegible] Eli's 2[illegible] yard mark. Twice did the Army try to [illegible] Yale's centre but failed to gain more than three yards. A delayed pass was worked and Smith carried the ball just enough to make a third down. Hill hit the line for three yards, and off-side play was discovered [illegible] Yale line and the [illegible] was shoved five yards nearer [illegible] of the Cadets. With the Army [illegible] going wild and [illegible] for a touchdown, Hill hit [illegible] tackle for three yards [illegible] on the next play Smith was shoved straight through centre for a touchdown. Mountford [illegible] the goal.

The Yale team surrounded Bigelow and literally hugged the big fellow. Yale used very few trick plays and only tried the forward pass a couple of times with gain. West Point's handling of the forward pass in to-day's game surprised even her most ardent adherents and gained on almost every try. Summary:

BOWDOIN LOSES GAME WITH TUFTS.

Bowdoin College received the worst defeat of the season at the hands of her old rival Tufts, on Broadway Field by a score of 12 to 5.

Bowdoin played fast and furious in the first half, and after fifteen minutes of swift [illegible] and plugging made her only touchdown of the game. It took three downs for Bowdoin to push the ball over from [illegible] yard line, and then it was just [illegible] and the goal was not kicked.

In fact, the home team could not get close enough to the Somerville's goal line to [illegible] would even score. It can be said how [illegible] in justice to the Dorchester [illegible] played an excellent game considering the difference in weight of the two teams. Princeton Gets Sweet Revenge Over Hanover Boys for Last Year's Defeat.

FORWARD PASS USED WITH GREAT SUCCESS

Special to Boston Sunday American.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 3.—Princeton took the heavy Dartmouth eleven into camp here this afternoon by the score of 42 to 0 in the most brilliant game of football seen here this year. It was a [illegible] of excellent team work and [illegible] speed.

Dartmouth [illegible] as good a game as last year, when the Hanover boys beat the Tigers by a score of 6 to 0. It was sweet revenge to the Tigers to win today. [illegible] Roper did not start to substitute the [illegible] until a score of [illegible]

Columbus Electric's Trip

"In the face of the rapid successes of the gasoline car, many improvements in the application of steam as a motive power have been passed with little interest while the actual services constantly being rendered in a variety of ways by the electric machine are too largely ignored," says Charles S. Henshaw, who has recently secured the agency for the Columbus electric. Continuing, he said: "What the electric vehicle may become some day under the impetus of promised improvements, is [illegible] of less importance than what it is to-day. It has been sold over and over again [illegible] for the purposes of touring and extended route work, the electric machine is only able to take short steps within a certain radius from the charging station. And true as this is, the radius that can be covered by one of these machines is yet wholly unappreciated by the average individual. In order to demonstrate clearly what may be done in touring with the electric vehicle, George M. Ba[illegible] of Columbus recently made a run in a Columbus stock carriage from Newport, R. I., to Boston on one charge at an average pace of twelve miles per hour, and when this trip was completed, which was [illegible] trial not an attempt [illegible] at maintenance out of the [illegible] the vehicle was capable of travelling [illegible] to twenty miles further around the city before going to the charging station."

GYMKHANA SPORTS ARE RUN OFF SUCCESSFULLY.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

A decidedly interesting, attractive and popular innovation was the concensus of opinion among those who witnessed the gymkhana sports of the Bay State Automobile Association on the Newton Athletic Grounds yesterday afternoon. Their success was greater than had been anticipated, and of such a character as will surely result in more similar contests in the coming season. In fact it is the belief that these sports will later be substituted for the more dangerous and to a degree less interesting sport of motor racing.

The interest in the several events was [illegible] was of a [illegible] brought out the capacity and ability not only of the cars themselves, but likewise of the operators. It was really a test of men and machines under what might be termed more normal conditions than would exist in racing. [illegible] the stunts, if such they can be termed, were performed by cars [illegible] out of stock, not [illegible] prepared for the contests.

[illegible] two weeks ago the race [illegible] it was freely stated that they [illegible] of the same worked hard [illegible] the operation of [illegible] a list of entries greater [illegible] been secured for any [illegible] The men entered went to work with a will and a determination to win, the result being one of [illegible] sport enjoyed in this section.

The stunts [illegible] feats such for [illegible] on a teeter board, [illegible] ten pins with [illegible] placing [illegible] once circling the [illegible] agement and control brake te[illegible] events [illegible] proved [illegible] spectators who made up what they lacked in number in real genuine [illegible]

Murch Star of Day.

The bright particular star of the meeting was Harry J. Murch, who, with his little ten horse power Cadillac, carried off the lion's share of the prizes, winning the three firsts and three third prizes, taking the special cup for the largest number of points scored during the day, his grand total being 10. He won the ring, the pin and the control events and took second in the ball and tub race and likewise in the contro.

Joel Dowling with his Ford runabout captured the first board of the af[illegible] the teeter board contest [illegible] where others failed, securing a balance on the deceptive board in eight seconds [illegible] he did good work in other events but failed to land a prize. H. H. Haws [illegible] Worcester carried off the lion's share of honors had to be content with [illegible] points with his Grout steamer, being first in the obstacle race [illegible] and decisive manner, capturing second in the pin event and third in the [illegible]

Perhaps as clever a piece of driving was the work of Harold H. Brown [illegible] twelve-mile-an-hour test, where with speedometer concealed the operator was to drive around the track at that rate. Brown came within one second of striking the [illegible] and won [illegible] test [illegible] took first [illegible] car [illegible] Harry Murch [illegible] four feet to [illegible] out. [illegible] of the day was that of the [illegible] race, which was captured [illegible] in his Pope Toledo, he winning from Peabody and the tourney [illegible] four seconds time. It was [illegible] and came at a time when [illegible] like Peabody [illegible] most creditable work [illegible] the lowest [illegible] on the [illegible] and although not landing a first [illegible] two seconds as a result of his [illegible] work.

Another good sport was Horest[illegible] who came dangerously [illegible] floating his old traveling [illegible] teeter board, taking second in the [illegible] and landing third prize in the [illegible] H. Kimball and the [illegible] also showed to advantage, he taking second in both the obstacle and barrel [illegible]

1907 PIERCE CAR MAKES RUN FROM BUFFALO.

The run of the 1907 Pierce Great Arrow from Buffalo to Boston was completed without a single mishap or delay from any cause, and when the car drove up to the Boylston street establishment of J. W. Maguire & Co. on Thursday last it was in the very best of condition. In the car were Mr. Maguire seated at the side of Charles Sheppy, who made such a record for himself and the little Pierce in the now famous run from New York to Pittsburg. Comfortably seated in the rear were no less than five others including Mr. O'Brien, Eliot Ware and friends.

The first thing that impresses one about this car is that it sits a little lower than its immediate predecessor, has a longer wheel base, but retains that same substantial and graceful appearance. The hood is set back a little, and that, too, without any loss of [illegible] in the tonneau, which is equipped with two Pullman seats. The car is four-cylinder, 40-45 horsepower. It is built along the same lines as the famous Arrow of this year, with minor changes that tend to give it greater power, greater comfort and a more complete equipment.

One of the minor changes that will be highly appreciated is the new system of ignition. All Pierce cars this year will be equipped with two complete and separate systems: first, will be the jump spark of four individual units, and, second, the [illegible] high tension [illegible] Either one can be used. The frame of [illegible] is of pressed special carbon steel [illegible] section and the wheel base will be 124 inches.

The equipment this year includes two side lamps, one tail oil lamp, two head gas lamps and [illegible] horn and full set of tools, gasoline tank gauge, Veeder odometer, four shock absorbers, extra tire carrier, trunk rack, coat and button rail and folding foot rest.

The [illegible] cars enjoy an enviable reputation, having in the past few years done some of the best work recorded. Their great performances in the Pittsburg run coupled with that in the St. Louis tour [illegible] have given [illegible] of prestige. It was the only American car represented in the [illegible] contests abroad during the past season, and all in all it has ever been found [illegible] of maintaining its reputation.

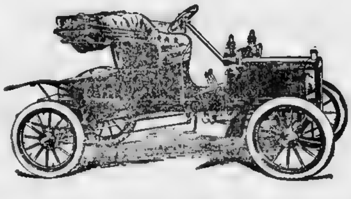
THE SENSATION

of the Automobile World

Deliveries Now



FORD Four-Cylinder $500.00 RUNABOUT

THE FULL SIGNIFICANCE of the sensational move by the Ford Motor Company when its four-cylinder, 15 horsepower Runabout was projected, has only recently become known to the trade and buying public.

THE PRICE CREATED A SENSATION the like of which was unprecedented in the automobile industry, and when the sample car was exhibited at last winter's shows, the company was deluged with orders sufficient to tax the capacity of the plant for several months.

BUT THE QUALITY OF THE CAR as demonstrated during the last few weeks has set the automobile world by the ears. It has been said that at the price it could not be well made; would be too flimsy to withstand rough usage on country roads— its own power would be too great for it. Ford's long and [illegible]sive experience was not sufficiently taken into account. [illegible] could his motive and ambition in turning out such a car at su[illegible] a price be understood by others. And so the disappointment has been on grounds opposite those anticipated.

IN EVERY HILL-CLIMBING CONTEST in which this wonderful car has been entered it has been the sensation of the meet—flying up grades on the high gear that 40 and 50 H. P. cars labored up on second. At Denver it was the only car to make the entire climb on high—cars of 40 H. P. failed in this test. At Rochester last week, it "trimmed" everything in its class and then added to its triumphs by defeating ten cars ranging from 22 to 40 horse-power.

ON THE RACE TRACK stock cars of this model have not only defeated, but actually lapped every other car in its class—and it is yet to be defeated by any car of less than $1,000 or less than 22 horse-power.

CROSS COUNTRY TOURS by private owners with new cars right out of the factory, ranging from 300 to 1,200 miles, have been made "without touching a wrench to the car or removing a spark plug."

BUILT FOR HARD SERVICE and rough usage, its lightness is its greatest strength—because that lightness is obtained only by the use of the best materials procurable. It has strength, power and speed to meet all demands under any possible conditions.

FORD MODEL "N" RUNABOUT—Four-cylinder, vertical motor under hood at front—water cooled—direct drive—all working parts enclosed, running in oil bath—15 H. P.—weight 1,000 pounds—not a malleable casting used for any working part in the entire car—steel stampings, pressed steel and drop forgings; that's the secret of its weight (1,000 lbs.) and great strength—the price is made possible by the quantities—10,000 cars now under way.

WE CAN ACCEPT ORDERS NOW for immediate delivery—we cannot promise for next spring; indications are we will be in the same position in April and May as we were this season—swamped with orders for months in advance. That's your cue! "A demonstration is a revelation"—Call or 'phone.

AUTO TOUR FROM LYNN TO MARBLEHEAD.

(Copyrighted, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

It's the Home of Yachtsmen, and a Ramble Through the Quaint Streets Is Interesting.

A delightful short ride is that from Boston to Marblehead, the home of the Massachusetts yachtsmen, [illegible] made famous in the early annals of this country.

The route to be followed from Boston to the quaint old town, where boxes rule face front lawns, and where over on the aristocratic and fashionable Marblehead Neck are to be found some of the most costly summer residences in this section of the country, is taken over what is known as the shore road, the return being made, for matter of diversion, via Salem and the famous old turnpike.

The route from Boston to Lynn was published in the AMERICAN of Sunday, September 9. Having reached Lynn Common from Commercial street one turns directly right, [illegible] Lynn square. The main [illegible] trolley tracks, carrying [illegible] the business district of [illegible] the railroad tracks [illegible] Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn [illegible] depot. Here bear left following [illegible] the square, right [illegible] square and direct [illegible] street. Here turn left [illegible] three streets [illegible] which road carries one on [illegible] along the shores and [illegible]

Just before [illegible] Atlantic avenue crosses the [illegible] right leads to Marblehead [illegible] the left carries one to the [illegible] street. The road ahead takes one to the white-painted, double-steepled church, one of the landmarks of the town. The square and railroad station are [illegible] A ramble through the quaint streets of Marblehead is always interesting.

In returning follow the car tracks along the main thoroughfare, passing over the railroad tracks and about half a mile beyond turn right, leaving the tracks. This road carries one up hill and down dale to Humphrey street, Salem. At the State Normal School turn left up hill and right along the turnpike to the intersection of the same with [illegible] road. Here turn left, and following [illegible] will bring one out to Ocean street, Lynn, and the remainder of the trip home is simply a repetition of the first portion of the tour.

NON-STOP RECORD MAKERS FEASTED

It was a jolly party which gathered around the mahogany at the Bay State Automobile Association last evening to welcome home the three men who have recently established the world non-stop motor car record—namely Lucius J. Tyler, Ralph Coburn and C. W. Kelsey. These men had driven the Maxwell car over 3,000 miles without once stopping the motor. At the invitation of Frank J. Tyler all who had in any way contributed to the success of the test, either an operator, mechanic or observer, had been invited to the feast. The result was the gathering of half a hundred motorists and a [illegible] good time. The special guests of the evening were showered with rhetorical bouquets and each in his turn fittingly responded. It was rather a late hour before the wind-up.

REO CO.'S GREAT PLANT

President Olds of the Reo company claims the largest automobile factory in this country, saying: "With the addition of our two new large buildings we have a total floor space of 301,000 square feet, which makes the Reo the largest plant [illegible] American continent devoted exclusively to the manufacture of automobiles. There are at the present time about 1,500 men employed in the manufacture of Reo cars. This number includes the outside contracts as axle, bodies, etc. The factory turns out 100,000 automobile pieces every ten hours."

BALLOONS MAY BE CHARTERED FOR $50 A TRIP.

BY DUNCAN CURRY.

New York, Nov. 3.—If the dreams of the aeronauts are realized balloons and airships will soon be as common in New York as automobiles are now.

Probably the most interesting event of [illegible] week [illegible] announcement of the Aero Club that [illegible] balloons Orient and Centature could be chartered like automobiles at a rate of $50 for the Centature and $35 for the Orient.

Chartering parties, however, are held responsible for the balloons, while in their possession and must pay all expenses of transportation to and from the place of storage and repair any damage which may be done to the balloons while in their care.

As the total approximate cost of each ascension will be from $110 to $125, the sport is at present confined to a few wealthy enthusiasts, but at that a number of applications have been received for trips from notoriety seekers and theatrical people, so the originators of the scheme argue out that they will get a fair return on their investment.

The Glidden Trophy

(TOUR 1200 MILES)

A MAJORITY of the manufacturers of the United States and Europe expended thousands of dollars in attempting to win this trophy. They also had factory men driving their cars, closely followed by tool cars loaded with parts and mechanics, while the Pierce Great Arrow cars went through the entire run without employing a single mechanic or replacing a single part. The following data, figured from a statement in the Motor Age, demonstrates that the Pierce Great Arrow (Glidden Tour Type) is in a class by itself.

KEEPING OUT POWERS OF LIFE.

You are in and out of this sort of thing all day long; after business and dinner are over, you sit until bedtime in uninterrupted artificial warmth, slowly [illegible] you open a small crack in one window (if you have read of the necessities of ventilation in sleeping rooms) and put in your seven or eight hours in an atmosphere in which the powers of death, in full blast, emanating from human lungs and from patent heaters, contend with such minute powers of life as may contrive to squeeze their way in through that crevice of the window sash. After a few days of this, you get up one morning, and, taking note of your sensations, remark: "Ah, I've got that cold again." It is the same old familiar cold that you have caught every Winter [illegible] it will run its course, [illegible] country, more ingeniously and effectively than in any other.

Wilkesbrino May Meet Rondo for Championship

BY EDWARD E. COGSWELL.

That faster material will have to be produced if Wilkesbrino is to have his measure taken over the Franklin Field Speedway was evident yesterday afternoon by the ready way he captured the free for all pace in straight heats over Charlena.

General Fiske was entered, but Mr. Nevins declined the issue, stating that he withdrew his gelding on account of wanting to give him a letup after the hard season of racing he has had.

There is a general demand from the members of the Dorchester Driving Club that S. Walter Wales give Wilkesbrino a hustle with his Rondo, the champion pacer of the speedway. In order to see how he viewed the position the following questions were put to him:

"Mr. Wales, are you going to defend [illegible] title of champion of the Speedway by racing him again this Fall?" He replied:

"Well, I don't know. Possibly, later."

not drive Brown behind her goal line till the half had nearly elapsed, when little Starr distinguished himself by making a fair catch in position for a field goal from field, and Burr, with the result of the game hanging on his endeavor to boot the ball through the posts, sent the leather with unerring accuracy, and there was a feeling of safety for a space of time.

Then it was Brown's turn to do something desperate. With but five minutes of play Brown got the ball within striking distance for a field goal, and while the spectators held their breath a try was made which [illegible] of the tieing of the score, but it failed and the whistle blew for the ending.

BROWN BOYS SPEEDY.

Brown's style of game was a revelation. Speed was the predominant feature of her [illegible] which was executed with snap and [illegible] that constantly took the Harvard [illegible] by surprise and the team had no [illegible] making ground. Its formations were puzzling and Harvard was at a loss to meet them with the proper methods of breaking them up, but it was by the use [illegible] kicks and double passes that [illegible] were forthcoming. Long runs [illegible] down the field were of common [illegible] and were the appreciated [illegible] brought individual merit to its [illegible]

[illegible] little Mayhew [illegible] the [illegible] end of [illegible] share of honors [illegible] half, when the most interesting stage of the game was at its height, he got away like a deer along the sideline and had got by everybody. It was Lockwood who probably saved the day for the Crimson, as he came from behind and bore Mayhew to the ground on Harvard's 30 yard line after a run of 45 yards. Had he continued a touchdown was eminent and Brown would have dragged the Crimson in the dust.

That the officials were on the alert to follow the strict letter of the rules was demonstrated when the penalty was inflicted for the first time for slugging. Wendell, the Harvard fullback, was the offender and his victim was Westervelt, the Brown guard. The Harvard man must have forgotten himself in using his fists, as the penalty was too severe for his team to suffer. For the infraction Harvard was penalized half the distance to her goal, and Wendell was promptly disqualified. It was the first time that such a penalty had been given in the Stadium this season and not readily understood, only to the close students of the new rules.

Other penalties, such as holding and off side, were frequently given and each team was about equally guilty. The Brown men were apparently more proficient in [illegible] without the umpire seeing it, as they were favored on several substantial end runs, and the Harvard players were constantly appealing for protection.

Much to Enthuse Over.

To Harvard men, while the result was nothing to gloat over, there was much to enthuse on, and several plays developed in secret practice proved good ground gainers. The advance by utilizing the forward pass and triple pass showed greater possibilities, but the star manoeuvre was the double pass between the backs, Lockwood taking the ball and the interference making a blind run around the opposite end. Lockwood cleared the line with no opposition for long runs and chopped off forty-three yards in one dash into Brown's territory.

In forcing the line Harvard again showed her strength, as every man was close to the ball and that team-play was not a lost cause was evident to the observers. It was always a few feet further for the man with the ball as long as he kept his feet with all his team mates pulling and pushing him onward.

Harvard was forced to play without its captain, as Foster was out of the game with an injured leg, and Newhall took up the reins in directing Harvard's attack. For once he did not shine by comparison with his rival, Captain Schwartz of Brown, whose ability at quarter back has not been improved upon this year in any game in the Stadium. As a football general he lacked nothing, and it was he who brought out every wrinkle in Brown's tricky attack by timely and masterful headwork. As a backfield player he classed among the top notchers, and not only did he hold the controlling lever but when necessary to kick he was at hand with telling effect.

Both Used Different Offence.

Both teams used an entirely different style offence. [illegible] on a tandem arrangement back of the line on either side of [illegible] with that formation used men running from the line and both Kurley and Mayhew covered quantities of ground that way.

HIGH SCHOOL BEAT RINDGE, 23 TO 0 AT SOUTH END.

English High's victory over Rindge yesterday, 23 to 0, at the South End grounds showed that Somerville High School is going up against a hard proposition when the two come together for the supremacy of the league.

For the first time in five years the Boston school defeated Rindge in a very one-sided game. It was a case of the rough and crude material going up against a finished article.

Amherst, Nov. 3.—Amherst defeated the Aggie eleven here to-day by the score of 12 to 8. Amherst made her first touchdown after four minutes of play, when Captain Hubbard made a sensational run through the whole length of the field for a touchdown. Amherst's second touchdown was made toward the end of the first half. Hubbard's series of line plunges and a punt brought the ball to Aggie's four-yard line, and at this point Atwood was sent over for a touchdown. EXETER CINCH FOR YALE FRESHMEN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 3.—In a game that was all Yale's the freshmen this afternoon slaughtered the Exeter team 21 to 0. At the start the contest looked like a roaring farce, as both elevens fumbled on nearly every play, and the ball rolled around on the ground more like a polo game than football. The Yale youngsters struck their gait, however, and pushed the ball over when near the end of the first half, and duplicated this in the final session. The lineup:

MURPHY WILL FIND CULLEN A HARD CUSTOMER.

That piece of [illegible] fighters in the [illegible] Murphy will make his second appearance [illegible] when he [illegible] Dick Cullen [illegible] on Tuesday [illegible] at the regular [illegible]

Murphy's first bout here with Kid Goodman captured the fans by storm, as they had never seen his equal in action and shifty fighting, and his services were wanted again as soon as a suitable opponent could be found [illegible] ing mill. Matty [illegible] was the selection, but when the time approached for the final preparations Matty [illegible] that his hand was hurt and lost his [illegible] by defaulting. This was just [illegible] Dick Cullen was looking for, and the [illegible] boy is naturally lucky, and immediately [illegible] Oliver, the veteran manager of Murphy, was notified that Cullen would take it. [illegible] training [illegible] days ago, expecting to fight on November 13 at 133 pounds, and to this weight Oliver agreed, which is all in Cullen's favor.

Cullen a Tough Customer.

Any boy who fights Murphy needs something in his favor as was shown in the bout with Kid Goodman, and it may be that the Harlem boy is conceding too much, as Cullen is as tough as they make them. [illegible] that the only way to beat Murphy is to stack him up against a [illegible] hard puncher, and that [illegible] when Cullen faces him. He has the punch and has been in the ball in his fights in Australia and South Africa [illegible] with [illegible] gloves. In [illegible] that we use pillows [illegible]

Cullen has the gloves in his possession used when he beat Barney Malone, the lightweight champion of South Africa, and those with which he beat Buck Keyes, an Australian, at Sacramento on October [illegible], and there is a big difference in them. The ones used in the Keyes fight are like the ones used at Chelsea.

1907 THOMAS FLYER IN TOWN

The latest addition on Boston's list of automobiles reached the city yesterday, and is now on exhibition at the place of business of the Harry Fosdick Co., 53 Stanhope street. It is the 1907 Thomas "Flyer," and even the most cursory examination of the car shows it is fully up to, if not beyond, the descriptions of it that have already been heard.

In general design the car follows the well known Thomas lines of construction, probably the most distinctive of any manufacturer. The horse power has been increased to sixty, and the car, while considerably lighter than last year's model, has been strengthened, refined and beautified. It is also faster, quieter and more comfortable. Perhaps the most radical change which has been made is in the ignition system; two separate and independent systems of ignition are now used. The first, an Atwater-Kent generator with batteries; the second, an imported Sims-Bosch magneto high tension, which works through a separate set of plugs.

WHERE PIANOS ARE SACRIFICED EVERY DAY

IN THE

ROXBURY STORAGE SALESROOMS

A Piano Sale here is always a sacrifice, always a bargain sale, always a mark-down sale. The very nature of business, as the public know, is one of sacrifice. The business here is not conducted like the business of a regular Piano store down town, where they are expected to make a profit on each piano—where they get their profit DIRECTLY out of the sale of pianos. We don't let any piano loaf around on the floor of the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms —it comes in in DUE TIME, a sacrifice tag is clapped on to it, be it high grade, low grade or middle grade, and it is sold to the first man or woman who wants it, for the price marked on the tag—not a cent more or less. The selling price is made on the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms's "Expense percentage" basis and is figured to let the accounts out clean and clear without regard to profit—so you can see easily by this statement how these sales must necessarily be sacrifices.

The Piano Trust Is Trying to Organize the Piano Teachers Against Us!

You well know by this time, if you have been reading our announcements, that the Piano Trust has been fighting us all along the line and this same Trust has been getting a good licking by us, and we are still cutting the very life out of their high piano prices and will continue to do so.

We Will Give 3 Months' Piano Lessons Free!

This is our move against the Piano Trust. If you buy your Piano from us this week we will give you or yours Three Months' Piano Lessons Free. It will be the finest Piano instruction that money can procure.

Don't Depend on Others for Your Music

MUSICAL SCIENCE HAS DEVELOPED FOR YOU THE

HARDMAN AUTOTONE

Have it put into your piano and then, without any practice or any musical education whatever, you can make it play for you all the finest music, operas, marches and latest and popular airs.

IF YOU CAN'T PLAY THE PIANO YOU CAN PLAY THE PIANO

If you never saw a piano before in your life you can make it play even better than your son, daughter, wife, husband, sister or sweetheart ever played for you.

The Hardman Autotone is installed INSIDE your piano, entirely out of sight. No bulky, unsightly cabinet to set in front of your piano. It is the only piano player that can produce music from piano with expression—feeling—sweetness.

By having a Hardman Autotone installed, the whole family is enabled to play the piano without lessons and without practice.

Now, don't let your piano lay dead all this coming winter; get some music out of it. Send us your address and get information about low cost, easy terms, etc.

TEACHERS CAN'T PAD

IT IS PROVEN that no woman can teach school in Chicago without a plump form. Chicago Board of Education's edict says: School teachers must be of the proper size and weight and they shall be graded "by their development." Dr. Krauskopf, authority for the board, says: Beauty and brains go together; the tests prove a fine mind goes with "a well-proportioned body." Thin, scrawny, scraggy, flat-chested women, with pale cheeks and no bosom, cannot pass the doctor there. Experiments and tests carefully conducted have proven there is no beauty so divinely "inspiring" as that of an entrancing bust; a full, plump bust, with the cheerful, helpful nature it brings, are valuable attributes for "the teacher," as well as the wife and sweetheart. A vigorous bust means affectionate, healthy, natural instincts, and only Dr. Conway's Bustoids can restore, enlarge and develop yours "vigorously" 4 to 10 inches or more without injury or failure. We either do the work or sell you Dr. Conway's Bustoids for home treatment. No exposure. Safe, Sure and Reliable. Instructions at office free. Sealed particulars 4c. stamps. PLUNDERBUND IN PANIC AT HEARST LANDSLIDE, RAISES HUGE CORRUPTION FUND

Hearst will win this election by 200,000 majority. The desperation of the Republicans is manifested in the course they have pursued. Federal interference has been invoked in a manner so audacious as to have called forth a protest from electors. Vituperation and abuse have taken the place of argument on the Republican side, but if vituperation and fail, as they surely must, the Republicans have another reliance. That reliance is money. The money bags of the "Interests," which have so long preyed upon the people, are being placed at the command of the Republican State committee to stem the tide rising for the Independence League-Democratic candidate for Governor and his associates on the State ticket.

WOMEN AT BIG MEETING CHEER FOR MRS. HEARST

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Nov. 3.—Two hundred women, among them Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, the wife of the people's candidate for Governor, this afternoon were the guests of the Commercial Travelers' League, at No. 507 Broadway. The women who attended the meeting were members of the Women's Democratic Club of this city.

The hall was crowded and upon the entrance into the hall of Mrs. Hearst the crowd, women and men, gave a prolonged cheer. Men and women crowded about Mrs. Hearst, shook her hand and wished success to her husband in the coming election.

Escorted Mrs. Hearst to Platform.

B. A. Rosenthal, president of the Commercial Travelers' League, escorted Mrs. Hearst to her seat on the platform, where she was introduced by Mrs. John S. Crosby, president of the Women's Democratic Club.

The meeting was in charge of Hadmon Black, Charles V. Fornes, Alexander Young, Maurice Fitzgerald and ex-Republican Congressman from Buffalo, Rowland B. Mahaney.

Mrs. Crosby introduced Mr. Mahaney, who said in part:

"Never before in the history of the State have women wielded such influence in a campaign. I'm not surprised, indeed, however, to see the women taking such an active part in the campaign, for they are fighting for a just cause in upholding the nomination of Mr. Hearst, a man who stands for clean government and all that is both good in and out of politics.

"Looking For His Election."

"He is the man that should be supported by such thinking women as are gathered here to-day, and I know that he is being supported.

"We are all looking forward to the election of Mr. Hearst next Tuesday, and I know that you women are doing all that you possibly can to insure his election."

BIG SHAKE-UP IN NEW YORK POLICE ON EVE OF ELECTION

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Nov. 3.—The most gigantic shake-up in the annals of the police department will take place Monday morning, when, as announced to-day by Police Commissioner Bingham, every patrolman in Greater New York, numbering 7,112, will be transferred from the precinct to which they are now attached to other precincts for election day.

Whether the men will remain in the precinct for any length of time after election day was not stated by the commissioner, but it is said that many of them will remain in the precincts to which they will be sent on Monday. The order will take effect Monday evening at 6 o'clock. The commissioner in transferring these men just a few hours before election is practically following the same plan he put into effect at the primaries.

Patrolmen will be greatly hampered by this in their voting, for many of them will have to travel miles to cast their ballots.

A patrolman who has been attached to a precinct in Wakefield and who will probably be transferred to Coney Island, or some one of the other outlying districts, will have to travel all the way from the island to Wakefield to cast his vote. This will take many hours and many of the men will lose their votes by thus being sent to other precincts.

HUNDREDS SEE BOY SWEPT OVER FALLS

Youth of Eight Whirled to His Death in Flood as He Clings to Log.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 3.—Henry Bryant Sanderson, eight years of age, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Sanderson of Manchester, lost his life in the James River flood. The boy attempted to rescue a pumpkin, thousands of which came down the river during the day, when he lost his balance and fell into the stream. He was quickly swept out into the current, where he managed to grasp a floating log and crawl upon it. In this precarious position he was hurried down the river on the crest of the tide, his perilous condition being watched by thousands of sightseers on both sides of the stream and on the bridges under which he passed. The boy continued to cling to the log until it reached the falls, where the long dip hurled him into the swirling flood. He never came to the surface again. The log came up farther down th stream and continued its rapid course to the ocean, but the boy was lost.

"SANDY" FERGUSON AGAIN ARRESTED

"Sandy' Ferguson, one-time aspirant for the heavyweight championship, was arrested last night by officers from the Joy street station, charged with being idle and disorderly. Word was received at the station house late last night that "Sandy" was demonstrating his fistic abilities on Howard street and Officer Merritt was sent to take him in tow.

WHEN ORDERING ASK FOR PABST

END OF TRUST MISRULE HAS COME SAYS HEARST

"The only menace to legitimate business is the extortion and oppression of the criminal trusts. The greatest menace to our Republican form of government lies in the corrupt methods of these criminal trusts. On Tuesday we will win a great victory. We will restore the power in this republic to the people and whip these corrupt corporations out of the temple of our government."—From Hearst's speech last night in Manhattan.

160,000 LOAVES OF PURE BREAD EVERY 24 HOURS

Bread made in a great white bakery, where even the air that the bakers breathe is sterilized, germ-free and chemically pure.

The largest and finest bakery in New England, where nothing but bread is made, is located in Cambridge. From that centre the product is not only supplied to Boston homes, but, in great shipping chests, is sent to every part of the six States of New England.

The Ward-Corby Company, maker of "Ward's bread," has reduced the art of making bread to a simple science. The process and evolution of the method now employed was a complicated one; but the baking of pure, wholesome bread is not at all complicated.

Flour Bags Sterilized.

The building in which the bread is made was built last year for a model bakery. The exterior is of yellow compressed brick, and the floors, walls and ceilings inside are all white. The bakers are clothed entirely in white from the soles of their shoes to the crowns of their baking hats. Before they enter the bakery they are compelled to take a shower bath in a big bathing room separated from the bakery proper, and then they don their white clothes and get down to work.

The flour used in the manufacture of the bread is shipped direct from the millers in big freight cars. The flour does not come in barrels, but in sterilized bags and it is piled mountain high in the storage room of the bakery. The flour is unloaded from a spur track that runs to the door of the storage room, and this method of delivery effects a saving of $10,000 a year to the concern.

How Bread is Mixed.

From the storage room the flour is conveyed to the mixing mill, where it is scientifically mixed and prepared. In automatic chutes, it is then sent to the air-tight chamber where it is weighed out and mixed into dough. In this room there is absolutely no moisture and the temperature is the same the year 'round.

In the mixing room there are three large machine, each of which will mix in twenty-five minutes, enough dough for 1,500 loaves of bread. The method of mixing the dough is an interesting one, and one that will doubtless prove a revelation to our good housekeepers. It is as follows: The salt, sugar and shortening are weighed and put into the mixer. Then the yeast, water and milk are weighed into a large tank, of which you will notice that the recipe demands that the mixture shall be an exact temperature. When this is done, the liquid is strained, and falls into the mixer beneath. Then the scale is set at the required number of pounds of flour a lever is drawn, and a chain of cups carry the flour from the blending machine to the hopper, above the mixer. When the required amount has been weighed, the flour is automatically shut off, and a bell notifies the attendant that it is ready to be deposited in the mixing machine.

Ovens Finest in World.

The dough then goes to the fermenting room where, in long metal troughs, it is allowed to "raise." As the temperature of the room is always uniform, it is not necessary to cover the dough during the raising process, and it is consequently always subject to healthful light and ventilation. After raising, the dough is dropped down another chute to the making room, where bakers shape the loaves, place them in the baking pans and put them in another fementing room where they are again subject to a raising process. The pans are then loaded on trucks and wheeled into the oven rooms, where they are baked.

These ovens are said to be the finest in the world. They are so constructed that every loaf can be seen. Neither dust, smoke or soot can gain access to the bread. There is an equal distribution of the heat, so that all the loaves are baked to a nicety at the same time. The drafts are so constructed that the heat is carried upwards and away, making it possible for the baker to work in front of the oven with comfort. The thermometer registers the heat within, so it is known at a glance whether it is too hot or too cold.

Eighteen different varieties of loaf bread are made in the bakery, and several kinds of rolls and biscuits are also specialized.

The Cambridge bakery has been in operation about six months, and during that time the product of the company has been in such great demand that the shops have been working day and night crews. About 100 bakers are employed, and the capacity of the ovens is about 160,000 loaves of bread every twenty-four hours.

A big stable is maintained, but the building is entirely separated from the bakery. The stable itself is said to be one of the most carefully maintained and thoroughly hygienic in New England, and the heavy, well-fed delivery horses speak well for the management of the superintendent.

The Ward-Corby Company has undoubtedly realized in the bread-making field what was long believed to be impossible. The officers of the company say that it is really cheaper to make bread under the best conditions.

The company has put into operation a novel advertising scheme that has done more to advance its business than any one thing, unless it be the general excellence and satisfying qualities of the bread itself.

WOMAN CHARGES INSANE INMATES ROUGHLY USED

In Complaint to State Officer She Declares Gardner Colony Unfit for Feeble-Minded.

Alleging that the State colony for Insane at Gardner is not a fit place for a sane person to live in, much less a feeble minded one, Mrs. Louise Conolan, who was one of the officials of that institution, charges that the conditions existing there were such that she had to give up her position.

Mrs. Conlon, who is now living at No. 10 Norfolk terrace, Dorchester, lodged a complaint with Dr. Owen Copp, secretary and executive officer of the State Board of Insanity, at the State House, last week. She alleges that a number of patients, one of them a cripple, have been unduly attacked by one of the officers, that the sanitary conditions there are inadequate, that on one occasion for a meal there were only seven cabbages for 104 patients and fourteen officers. Mrs. Conlon says that no attention has been paid to her complaint.

The colony is maintained by the State. The State Board of Insanity comprises Charles R. Codman, of Barnstable, James B. Ayer and George F. Jelly, of Boston, the latter being chairman; S. W. Jones, of Newton and Michael J. O'Meara, of Worcester. Dr. Copp is the secretary and executive officer.

The government of the institution is vested in a board of seven trustees, five men and two women. One of them is appointed annually by the Governor and Council. The trustees of the State Colony are Herbert B. Howard and Charles V. Dasey of Boston, George N. Harwood of Barre, Amie Coes of Worcester, Alice M. Spring of Fitchburg, William Baker of Lynn and E. A. Whitman of Cambridge. Joseph B. Howland, M. D., is the superintendent.
